FIRST CHAPTER (ADHYAYA).

(The Dikṣhañīya Ishti, with the Initiatory Rites.)

. 1.

Agni, among the gods, has the lowest, <sup>1</sup> Vishnu the highest place; between them stand all the other deities.

<sup>1</sup> Sāyana, whom M. Muller follows in his translation of the first six chapters of the first book, as given in his "History of Ancient Sanscrit Literature," (pages 300-405) explains the words avama and parama by "first" and "last." To prove this meaning to be the true one, Sāyana adduces the mantra (1, 4. Aśval. Śr. S. 4, 2) agnir mukham prathamam devatānām samgatānām uttamo Vishnuḥ ūśīt, i. e. Agni was the first of the deities assembled, (and) Vishnu the last. In the Kaushitaki-Brahmanam (7, 1) Agni is called avarārdhya (instead of avama), and Vishnu parārdhya (instead of parama) i. e. belonging to the lower and higher halves (or forming the lower and higher halves). That the meaning "first" cannot be reasonably given to the word avama, one may learn from some passages of the Rigveda Saṁhitā, where avama and parama are not applied to denote rank and dignity, but only to mark place and locality. See Rigveda 1, 102, 9, 10. avanasyām prithivyām, madhyamasyām, paramasyām uta, i. e. in the lowest place, the middle (place), and the highest (place). Agni, the fire, has, among the gods, the lowest place; for he resides with man on the earth; while the other gods are either in the air, or in the sky. Vishnu occupies, of all gods, the highest place, for he represents (in the Rigveda) the sun in its daily and yearly course. In its daily course it reaches the highest point in the sky, when passing the zenith on the horizon; thence Vishnu is called the "highest" of the gods. Sāyana understands "first" and "last" in reference to the respective order of deities in the twelve liturgies (Shastra) of the Soma day at the Agnishtoma sacrifice. For, says he, "The first of these liturgies, the so-called Ajya-Shastra, (see 2, 31) belongs to Agni, and in the last out of the twelve, in the so-called Āgnamūrta Shastra (see 3, 32-38) there is one verse addressed to Vishnu. But this argument, advanced by Sāyana, proves nothing for his opinion that "Agni is the first, and Vishnu

They offer<sup>2</sup> the Agni-Vishnu rice-cake (Purodās a)<sup>3</sup> which belongs to the Dikshaniya ishti (and put its

the last deity ;" for these twelve liturgies belong to the fifth day of the Agnishtoma sacrifice, whilst the Dikshaniya-ishti, in connection with which ceremony the Brāhmanam makes the remark "agnir vai devānām aramo," &c. forms part of the first day. The ceremonies of the first and those of the fifth day have no connection with one another.

Equally inconclusive are two other arguments brought forward by Sāyana. The one is, that in all the constituent parts of the Jyotishtoma sacrifice, of which the Agnishtoma is the opening, the first place is assigned to Agni, and the last to Vishnu, and that the last Stotra (performance of the Śama singers), and the last Shāstra (performance of the Hotri-priests), in the last part of that great cycle of sacrifices (the Jyotishtoma), known by the name of Apṭeryāma, are devoted to Vishnu. The other argument is, that Agni is worshipped in the first, or Dikshaniya ishti, and that the Vajasaneyins (the followers of the so-called White Yajurveda) use, instead of the last Ishti (the aravāniyā), the Pārnahuti to Vishnu.

Both arguments prove only, that the ceremonies commenced with the deity who is on earth, that is, Agni, and ended with that one who occupies the highest place in heaven. Though, from a liturgical point of view, Sāyana's opinion might be correct, yet he does not state any reason why the first place in certain invocations is assigned to Agni, and the last to Vishnu. But the translation "lowest and highest," as given here, does not only account for the liturgical arrangement, but states the proper reason of such an order besides. That these terms are really applicable to both respective deities, Agni and Vishnu, and that the words arama and parama actually convey such meaning, has been shown above.

<sup>2</sup> The term of the original is, nirvapanti (from vap, to strew, to sow). This expression, which very frequently occurs in liturgical writings of all kinds, means originally, "to take some handfuls of dry substances (such as grains) from the heap in which they are collected, and put them into a separate vessel." It is used in a similar sense of liquids also. Sāyana restricts the meaning of this common sacrificial term somewhat too much. He says, that it means "to take four handfuls of rice from the whole load which is on the cart, and throw them into the winnowing basket (S'ārpa)."<sup>4</sup> In this passage, he further adds, the term means the bringing of that offering the preparation of which begins with this act of taking four handfuls from the whole load. Sāyana discusses the meaning of the form "nirvapanti" which is in the present tense, and in the plural number. Referring to a parallel in the "Black Yajurveda," agnūvaishtavam chādas'ahapālam nirvapet dikshishyamāṇah where the potential (nirvapet) is used instead of the present tense of (nirvapanti), and to a rule of Pāṇini (3, 4, 7.)

several parts) on eleven potsherds (hapâla). They offer it (the rice-cake) really to all the deities of this (Ishti) without foregoing any one.<sup>4</sup> For Agni is all the deities, and Vishnu is all the deities. For these two (divine) bodies, Agni and Vishnu, are the two ends<sup>5</sup> of the sacrifice. Thus when they portion out the Agni-Vishnu rice-cake, they indeed make at the end<sup>6</sup> (after the ceremony is over) prosper<sup>7</sup> (all) the gods of this (ceremony).

which teaches that the conjunctive (Let) can have the meaning of the potential, he takes it in the sense of a conjunctive implying an order. The plural instead of the singular is accounted for by the supposition, that in the Vedic language the numbers might be interchanged. But the whole explanation is artificial.

<sup>3</sup> The principal food of the gods at the so-called Ishtis is the Purodâsa. I here give a short description of its preparation, which I myself have witnessed. The Adhvaryu takes rice which is husked and ground (pishita), throws it into a vessel of copper (malantî), kneads it with water, and gives the whole mass a globular shape. He then places this dough on a piece of wood to the Ahavaniya fire (the fire into which the oblations are thrown) in order to cook it. After it is half cooked, he takes it off, gives it the shape of a tortoise, and places the whole on eleven potsherds (hapâlas). To complete cooking it, he takes Darbha grass, kindles it and puts it in the Purodâsa. After it is made ready, he pours melted butter over it and puts the ready dish in the so-called Idâpâtra, which is placed on the Veda, where it remains till it is sacrificed.

<sup>5</sup> Antye Sâyana opines that this adjective here is ekas'esha, i. e. that out of two or more things to be expressed, only one has actually enamed. It stands, as he thinks, instead of adyâ and antya, just as pitâru mean "father and mother." (Pâyini, 1, 2, 70.)

<sup>6</sup> Antatah. Sây. "at the beginning and end of the sacrifice." But I doubt whether the term implies the beginning also. In the phrase: antatah pratitisthati which so frequently occurs in the Ait. Brâhmi. antatah means only "ultimately," at the end of a particular ceremony &c.

<sup>7</sup> Rodhnavanti. Sây. paricharanti, they worship. He had, in all probability, Nighant, 3, 5, in view, where this meaning is given to rodhnavanti. But that this word conveys the sense of "prospering" follows unmistakeably from a good many passages of the Sâṃhitâ of Rigveda and Mann. (See the Sanscrit Dictionary by Bohtlingk and Roth. v. अर्घ and Westergaard's Radices Sanscritæ s. v. ऋघ page 182.)

Here they say: if there be eleven potsherds on which portions of the rice-cake are put, and (only) two deities, Agni and Vishnu, what arrangement is there for the two, or what division?

(The answer is) The rice-cake portions on eight potsherds belong to Agni; for the Gâyatri verse consists of eight syllables, and the Gâyatri is Agni's metre. The rice-cake portions on the three potsherds belong to Vishnu; for Vishnu (the sun) strode thrice through the universe.<sup>8</sup> This the arrangement (to be made) for them; this the division.

He who might think himself to have no position (not to be highly respected by others) should portion out (for being offered) Charu<sup>9</sup> over which clarified

<sup>1</sup> In this passage the meaning "to worship," as given by Sayana, is too vague, and appears not quite appropriate to the sense. On account of its governing the accusative, we must take it here in the sense of a transitive verb, although it is generally an intransitive one. The meaning which lies nearest, is, "to make prosperous." At the first glance it might appear somewhat curious, how men should make the gods prosperous by sacrificial offerings. But if one takes into consideration, that the Vedas, and particularly the sacrificial rite, meditated in them, presuppose a mutual relationship between men and gods, one depending on the support of the other, the expression will no longer be found strange. Men must present offerings to the gods to increase the power and strength of their divine protectors. They must, for instance, inebriate Indra with Soma, that he might gather strength for conquering the demons. The meaning "to satisfy, to please," which is given to the word "radhnuranti" of the passage in question in Böhtlingk's and Roth's Dictionary, is a mere guess, and wholly untenable, being supported by no Brahmanic authority.

<sup>8</sup> This refers to the verse in the Rîgvêda Samhitâ 1, 22 17, 18 adam Vishnuṃ triśakrame tredha naluṣṭhe padam, i.e. Vishnu strode through the universe; he put down thrice his foot, and trini paṇi triśakrame, he strode three steps. These three steps of Vishnu, who represents the sun, are: sunrise, zenith, and sunset.

butter is poured. For on this earth no one has a firm footing who does not enjoy a certain (high) position.<sup>10</sup> The clarified butter (poured over this Charu) is the milk of the woman; the husked rice grains (tanḍula of which Charu consists) belong to the male; both are a pair. Thus the Charu on account of its consisting of a pair (of female and male parts) blesses him with the production of progeny and cattle, for his propagation (in his descendants and their property). He who has such a knowledge propagates his progeny and cattle.

He who brings the New and Full Moon oblations, has already made a beginning with the sacrifice, and made also a beginning with (the sacrificial worship of the) deities. After having brought the New or Full Moon oblations, he may be inaugurated in consequence of the offering made at these (oblations) and the sacrificial grass (having been spread) at these (oblations, at the time of making them). This (might be regarded) as one Dikshá (initatory rite).<sup>11</sup>

<sup>11</sup> The present followers of the Vedic religion, the so-called Agnihotris, who take upon themselves the performance of all the manifold sacrificial rites enjoined in the Vedas, begin their arduous career for gaining a place in heaven, after the sacred fires have been established, with the regular monthly performance of the Darsa and Purnamaṣṭi or the New and Full Moon sacrifices. Then they bring the Chaturmasa-ishi, and after this rite they proceed to bring the Agnishtoma the first and model of all Soma sacrifices. By the bringing of the New and Full Moon offerings, the Agnihotri is already initiated into the grand rites; he is already an adept (Dikshita) in it. Some of the links of the yajna or sacrifice which is regarded as a chain extending from this earth to heaven, by means of which the successful performer reaches the celestial world, the seat of the gods, are already established by these offerings, with the deities, whose associate the sacrificer wishes to become after his death, the intercourse is opened; for they have already received food (bacch), prepared

The Hotar must recite seventeen verses for the wooden sticks to be thrown into the fire<sup>12</sup> (to feed it). For Prajâpati (the Lord of all creatures) is seventeen-fold; the months are twelve, and the seasons five by putting Hemanta (winter) and S'is'ira (between winter and spring) as one. So much is the year. The year is Prajâpati. He who has such a knowledge prospers by these verses (just mentioned) which reside in Prajâpati.

according to the precepts of sacrè cookery, at his hands, and they have been sitting on the sacred seat (barkis) prepared of the sacrificial grass (Darbha). Thence the performance of the Full and New Moon sacrifices is here called one Diksha, i.e. one initiatory rite. But if the Agnihota who is performing a Soma sacrifice, is already initiated (Dikshita) by means of the rites just mentioned, how does he require at the opening of the Agnishtoma (Soma-sacrifice) the so-called Dikshanigra Ishti or "offering for becoming initiated"? This question was mooted already in ancient times. Thence, says Asvadhana in his S'rauta sùtras, (4, 1), that some are of opinion, the Soma-sacrifice should be performed, in the case of the means required being forthcoming (the sacrifice is very expensive), after the Full and New Moon sacrifices have been brought, others think the Soma sacrifice might be performed before the Full and New Moon sacrifices. No doubt, the Agnishtoma was in ancient times a sacrifice wholly independent of the Darsa Purnima-ishtis. This clearly follows from the fact, that just such Ishtis, as constitute the Full and New Moon sacrifices, are placed at the beginning of the Agnishtoma to introduce it.

<sup>12</sup> These verses are called Samidhenis. They are only eleven in number; but by repeating the first and last verse three, the number is brought to fifteen. They are mentioned in Asv. Sr. S. 1, 2, several are taken from Rigveda 3, 27, as the first (pra va vajâ abhidhava) fourth (samudhyamîna) 13th, 14th, and 15th (denya) verses. Besides these three, Asv. mentions agna ayaha vitaye (6, 16, 10, 12, three verses), agnim datam vimûbe (1, 12, 1), and samidho agna (5, 28, 5, 6, two verses). They are repeated monotonously without observing the usual three accents. The number of the samidhenis is generally stated at fifteen, but now and then, seventeen are mentioned, as in the case of the Diksharigya ishti. The two additional mantras are called Dhâgyâ, i. e. verses to be repeated when an additional wooden stick, after the ceremony of kindling is over, is thrown into the fire, in order to feed it. They are mentioned in Sâyana's commentary on the Rigveda Samhitâ vol. II. page 762 ed. M. Muller). S. Asv. 4, 2, two Dhâgyâs at the Diksharigya ishti.

The sacrifice went away from the gods. They wished to seek after it by means of the Ishtis. The Ishtis are called Ishtis because they wished (ish, to wish) to seek after it. They found it. He who has such a knowledge prospers after he has found the sacrifice. The name âhutis, i.e. oblations, stands instead of âhuti, i.e. invocation; with them the sacrificer calls the gods. This is (the reason) why they are called âhutis. They (the âhutis) are called utis; for by their means the gods come to the call of the sacrificer (âpanti, they come). Or they are the paths (and) ways; for they are the ways to heaven for the sacrificer.

There they say, as another priest (the Adhvaryu), offers (juhoti) the oblations why do they call that one who repeats the Anurâkhyâ and Yâgyâ verses, a Hotar? (The answer is) Because he causes the deities to be brought near (ârâhayati) according to their place, (by saying) "bring this one, bring that one."<sup>13</sup> This is the reason why he is called a Hotar (from âvah, to bring near). He who has such a knowledge is called a Hotar.<sup>14</sup>

<sup>13</sup> At every Ishti, the Hotar calls the particular gods to whom rice oblations are to be presented, by their names to appear. At the Dakṣiṇya Ishti, for instance, he says: agnya agnīm âvaha, viṣṇuṃ vāvaha, i.e. Agni! bring hither Agni! bring hither Viṣṇu. The name of the deity who is called near, is only muttered, whilst âvaha is pronounced with a loud voice, the first syllable â being pluta, i.e. containing three short a. See As'v. Sr. S. 1, 3.

<sup>14</sup> These etymologies of ishti, âhuti, ûti, and hotar are fanciful and erroneous. The real root of ishti is gaj to sacrifice; that of ahuti is hu to bring an offering; that of ûti is av to protect, to assist; that of hota is hrê to call. The technical meaning of an ishti is a series of oblations to different deities, consisting chiefly of Purodâśa. An âhuti or ûti, which appears to be an older name of the same idea (this meaning is quite omitted in the Sanskrit Dictionary by B. and R.), is an oblation offered to one deity. This oblation is generally accompanied by two mantras, the first being called the Anuvâkhyâ or

The priests make him whom they initiate (by means of the Dīkshā ceremony) to be an embryo again (i. e. they produce him anew altogether). They sprinkle him with water; for water is seed. By having thus provided him with seed (for his new birth), they initiate him. They besmear him with fresh butter (naranīta). The butter for the gods is called ājya<sup>15</sup>, that for men surabhi ghṛitam, that for the manes āyuta, and that for the embryos naranīta. Therefore by anointing him with fresh butter, they make him thrive through his own portion.

They besmear his eyes with collyrium. For this anointment is lustre for both eyes. By having imparted lustre to him, they make him a Dikshita.

They rub him clean with twenty-one handfuls of Darbha grass. By having thus made him pure and clean they make him a Dikshita.

They make him enter the place destined for the Dikshita.<sup>16</sup> For this is the womb of the Dikshita.

Puro-anavākyā, the second Yājñā. When the second is recited, the oblation is thrown into the fire by the Adhvaryu. The Hotar repeats only the mantras.

<sup>15</sup> To remind his readers of the difference existing between ājya and ghṛita, Śāy. quotes an ancient versus memorialis (Kārikā), carpir vilinam ājyam śhāt; ghanībhūtam ghṛitam ruduh, i. e. they call the butter which is in a liquid condition, ājya, and that one which is hardened is called ghṛita. Āyuta is the butter when but slightly molten, and surabhi when well seasoned. According to the opinion of the Taittirīyas, says Śāyana, the butter for the gods is called ghṛita that for the manes astu, and that for men nishpaka. Astu is the same as āyuta, slightly molten, and nishpaka, the same as ājya, entirely molten.

<sup>16</sup> Dikshita-vimīta. It is that place which is generally called prāṇa vāṁśa (or prāṇ-vāṁśa). This place is to represent the womb which the Dikshita enters in the shape of an embryo to be born again. This is clearly enough stated in the Brāhmaṇa of another S'ākhā, which Śāyana quotes : तेन प्राचीनवंश प्रवेशेन सूक्ष्मोऽयमिति प्रवेशः संपाद्यते.

When they make him enter the place destined for, the Dikshita, then they make him thus enter his own womb. In this (place) he sits as in a secure abode,<sup>17</sup> and thence he departs. Therefore the embryos are placed in the womb as a secure place and thence they are brought forth (as fruit). Therefore the son should neither rise nor set over him finding him in any other place than the spot assigned to the Dikshita; nor should they speak to him (if he should be compelled to leave his place).<sup>18</sup>

They cover him with a cloth. For this cloth is the caul (ulba) of the Dikshita (with which he is to be born, like a child); thus they cover him with the caul. Outside (this cloth) there is (put by them) the skin of a black antelope. For outside the caul, there is the placenta (jarāyū). Thus they cover him (symbolically by the skin of the antelope) with the placenta. He closes his hands. For with closed hands the embryo lies within (the womb); with closed hands the child is born. As he closes his hands, he thus holds the sacrifice, and all its deities in his two hands closed.

They allege as a reason (why the Dikshita should close together both his hands) that he who takes (among two who are sacrificing on the same place not at the same time) his Dikshā (initiation) first, is not guilty (of the sin) of "confusion of libations" (śaṅkṣa).<sup>19</sup> For his sacrifice and the deities are held * Servant takes the three ablatives—tasmad, dhravād, yoner, in the case of locatives, but I think this interpretation not quite correct. The ablative is chosen on account of the verb charati, he walks, goes, indicating the point, whence he starts. The other verb asīti, he sits, would require the locative. Therefore we should expect both cases, locative and ablative. On account of conciseness, only the latter is chosen, but the former is then to be understood.

After having put off the skin of the black antelope he descends to bathe.

Thence embryos are born after they are separated from the placenta. He descends to bathe with the cloth (which was put on him) on. Thence a child is born together with the caul.

The Hotar ought to repeat for him who has not yet brought a sacrifice two Puronvâkyâ verses, trāṇe saprathâ asi (Rig-veda Saṁhitâ 5, 13, 4) for the first, and Soma yâs tv mayobhuraḥ (1, 91, 9) for the second portion of (the offering of) melted butter. (By reading the third pāda of the first verse trāṇâ yajnam) "through thee (thy favour) they extend<sup>20</sup> the sacrifice," the Hotar extends thus the sacrifice for him (who has not yet brought a sacrifice).

For him who has brought a sacrifice before, the Hotar has to recite (two other mantras instead): agnih pratnena manmanû (8, 44, 12) and Soma gîrbhish tvâ vāyam (1, 91, 11). For by the word pratnam, i. e. former (which occurs in the first verse), he alludes to the former sacrifice. But the recital of these verses (for a man who has performed a sacrifice, and for one who has not done so) may be dis-river, or by a mountain, then a "saṁsara" or confusion of libation is caused, which is regarded as a great sin. He, however, who has performed his Dikshâ first, and holds the gods between his hands, is not guilty of such a sin, and the gods will be with him.—Sây.

<sup>20</sup> Vitarvate. The sacrifice is regarded as a kind of chain which, when not used, lies rolled up; but which when being used, is, as the instrument for ascending to heaven, to be wound off. This winding off of the sacrificial chain is expressed by the term vitau to extend. Connected with this term are the expressions vitana and vartâṅka.

pensed with. Let the Hotar rather use the two verses which refer to the destruction of Vritra (vātraghna), viz., Agnir vritrāni jaghanat (6, 16, 24), and, tvam soma asi satpatiḥ (1, 91, 5). Since he whom the sacrifice approaches, destroys Vritra (the démon whom Indra conquers), the two verses referring to the destruction of Vritra are to be used.<sup>21</sup>

The Anuvākyā for the Agni-Vishnu-offering is: Agnir mukham prathamam devatānām, the Yājyā: agnischa Vishnu tapa.<sup>22</sup> These two verses (addressed) to Agni and Vishnu are corresponding (appropriate) in their form. What is appropriate in its form, is successful in the sacrifice; that is to say, when the verse which is recited refers to the ceremony which is being performed.

(Now follows a general paraphrase of the contents of these two verses) Agni and Vishnu are among the gods, the "guardians of the Dikshā" (that is to say), they rule over the Dikshā. When they offer the Agni-Vishnu oblation, then those two who rule over the Dikshā become pleased, and grant Dikshā, that is to say, the two makers of Dikshā, they both make the sacrificer Dikshita. These verses are in the Trishtubh metre, but the sacrificer might acquire the properties of the god Indra (vigour and strength).

अग्निर्मूलं प्रथमो देवतानां संगतानामुत्तमो विष्णुरासीत् ।

अग्निश्च विष्णो तथ उत्तमं स हो दीक्षापालाय वनतं हि भक्ता ।

5.

He who wishes for beauty and acquisition of sacred knowledge should use at the Svishtrakrit<sup>23</sup> two verses in the Gāyatri metre as his Saṁyājyās. For the Gāyatri is beauty and sacred knowledge. He who having such a knowledge uses two *Gāyatri*s<sup>24</sup> (at the Svishtrakrit) becomes full of beauty and acquires sacred knowledge.

He who wishes for long life, should use two verses in the Ushnih metre;<sup>25</sup> for Ushnih is life. He who having such a knowledge uses two *Ushnih*s<sup>26</sup> arrives at his full age (i. e. 100 years).

He who desires heaven, should use two Anush-tubhs. There are sixty-four syllables in two Anush-tubhs.<sup>27</sup> Each of these three worlds (earth, air, and sky) contains twenty-one places, one rising above the i. e. "Among the deities assembled, Agni, being at the head, was the first, and Vishnu the last (god). Ye both, come to our offering with the Dikshā, taking (with you all) the gods for the sacrificer (i. e. come to this offering, and grant the Dikshā to the sacrificer) Agni and Vishnu! ye two strong (gods)! burn with a great heat to the utmost (of your power) for the preservation of the Dikshā. Joined by all the gods who participate in the sacrifice, grant, ye two Dikshā to this sacrificer." Agni and Vishnu, the one representing the fire, the other the sun, are here invoked to burn the sacrificer, by combination of their rays, clean, and to purify him from all gross material dross. The Dikshā should be made as lasting as a mark caused by branding.

<sup>23</sup> The Svishtrakrit is that part of an offering which is given to all gods indiscriminately, after the principal deities of the respective Ishṭi (in ● Dikshamīdī Ishṭi, these deities are Agni, Soma, and Agni-Vishnu) have received their share. The two mantras required for the Svishtrakrit are called Saṁyājyā. On account of the general nature of this offering, the choice of the mantras is not so much limited as is the case when the offering is to be given to one particular deity.

other (just as the steps of a ladder). By twenty-one steps he ascends to each of these worlds severally; <sup>27</sup> by taking the sixty-fourth step he stands firm in the celestial world. He who having such a knowledge uses two Anuṣṭubhs gains a footing (in the celestial world).

He who desires wealth and glory, should use two Bṛihatis. For among the metres the Bṛihati <sup>28</sup> is wealth and glory. He who having such a knowledge uses two Bṛihatis bestows upon himself wealth and glory.

He who loves the sacrifice should use two Pañktis. <sup>29</sup> For the sacrifice is like a Pañkti. It comes to him who having such a knowledge uses two Pañktis.

He who desires strength should use two Trishṭubhs. <sup>30</sup> Trishṭubh is strength, vigour, and sharpness of senses. He who knowing this, uses two Trishṭubhs, becomes vigorous, endowed with sharp senses and strong.

He who desires cattle should use two Jagatis (verses in the Jagatī metre). <sup>31</sup> Cattle are Jagatī like. He who knowing this uses two Jagatīs, becomes rich in cattle.

He who desires food (annādya) should use two verses in the Virāj metre. <sup>32</sup> Virāj is food. Therefore he who has most of food, shines (vi-rājati) most on earth. This is the reason why it is called virāj (from vi-rāj, to shine). He who knows this, shines

forth among his own people, (and) becomes the most influential man among his own people.

The Virāj metre possesses five powers. Because of its consisting of three lines (pādas), it is Gāyatri and Ushnih (which metres have three lines also). Because of its lines consisting of eleven syllables, it is Trishtubh (4 times 11 syllables = 44). Because of its having thirty-three syllables, it is Anushtubh. (If it be said, that the two Virāj verses in question, i. e. preddho agne and imo agne have, the one only 29, and the other 32 syllables, instead of 33, it must be borne in mind that) metres do not change by (the want of) one syllable or two<sup>33</sup>. The fifth power is, that it is Virāj.

He who knowing this, uses (at the Svishṭakrit) two Virāj verses, obtains the power of all metres, gains the power of all metres, gains union, uniformity, and (complete) unison with all the metres.<sup>34</sup>

Therefore two Virāj verses are certainly to be used, those (which begin with) agne preddho (7, 1, 3), and imo agne (7, 1, 18).

Dikshâ is right, Dikshâ is truth; thence a Dikshita should only speak the truth.

Now they say, what man can speak all truth? Gods (alone) are full of truth, (but) men are full of falsehood:

<sup>33</sup> In the first verse quoted, there are even 4 syllables less than required. The Brâhmanam is not very accurate in its metrical discussion. The Anushtubh has 32 syllables.

<sup>34</sup> The meaning is, by using two Virāj verses which contain the principal metres, he obtains collectively all those boons which each of the several metres is capable of bestowing upon him who uses them. So the Gāyatri, for instance, grants beauty and sacred knowledge, the Trishtubh strength, &c. (See above). The metres are regarded as deities. He who employs them becomes pervaded, as it were, by them, and participates in all their virtues and properties.

He should make each address (to another) by the word "vichakshana," i. e. "of penetrating eye." The eye (chakshus) is vichakshana, for with it he sees distinctly (vi-pas'yati). For the eye is established as truth among men. Therefore people say to a man who tells something, hast thou seen it? (i. e. is it really true?) And if he says, "I saw it," then they believe him. And if one sees a thing himself, one does not believe others, even if they were many. Therefore he should add (always) to his addresses (to others) the word vichakshana,<sup>35</sup> "of penetrating, sharp eyes." Then the speech uttered by him becomes full of truth.

SECOND CHAPTER.

7

The Prāyaṇīya ishṭi has its name "prāyaṇīya"<sup>1</sup> from the fact that by its means the sacrificers approach heaven (from pra-yā, going forward). The prāyaṇīya ceremony is the air inhaled (prāna), whereas the udayanīya, i. e., concluding ceremony (of the whole sacrifice) is the air exhaled. The Hotar (who is required at both ceremonies) is the common hold of both the airs (samāna). Both the air inhaled and exhaled are held together (in the same body). (The performance of both ceremonies, the prāyanīya and udayanīya are intended) for making the vital airs, and for obtaining a discriminating knowledge of their several parts (prāna, udāna, &c.) <sup>2</sup>

<sup>35</sup> This explanation of the term vichakshana refers to the offering of two parts of melted butter (See chapter 4, page 10), which are called chakshushi, i. e. two eyes. The sacrificer obtains in a symbolical way new eyes by their means to view all things in the right way. The Dikṣita ought to use the term vichakshana after the name of the person who is addressed; for instance, Devadatta Vichakshana, bring the cow. According to Apastamba, this term should be added only to the names of a Kshatriya and Vaisya addressed; in addressing a Brahman, the expression chanasita should be used instead. —Sây.

The sacrifice (the mystical sacrificial personage) went away from the gods. The gods were (consequently) unable to perform any further ceremony. They did not know where it had gone to. They said to Aditi : Let us know the sacrifice through thee ! Aditi said : Let it be so ; but I will choose a boon from you. They said : Choose ! Then she chose this boon : all sacrifices shall commence with me, and end with me. Thence there is at (the beginning of) the prāyanīya ishti a Chao-offering for Aditi, and the same offering is given to her as the boon chosen by her at the end (of the sacrifice). Then she chose this (other) boon. Through me you shall know the eastern direction, through Agni the southern, through Soma the western, and through Savitar the northern direction. The Hotar repeats the (Anuvākyā and) Yājyâ-mantra for the Pathyâ. <sup>3</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The Prāyanīya ceremony is here regarded as the proper commencement of the yajna ; for the Dikshaniyā ishti is only introductory to it. The beginning is compared to the prāna, and the end to the udāna, both which vital airs are held together by the samāna. The Brāhmana mentions here only three prānas or vital airs. Two others vyāna and apāna are omitted. This mystical explanation can be only understood if one bears in mind that the yajna or sacrifice itself is regarded as a spiritual man who shares all properties of the natural man.

The two verses addressed to Pathyâ are Rigveda 10, 63, 15, 16, svastir nah pathyâsu (see Nirukti 11, 45). These verses are mentioned in As'val. S'r. Sû. 4, 3. The word yajati is an abbreviation

Therefore the sun rises in the east and sets in the west; for it follows in its course the Pathyâ. He repeats the (Anuvâkyâ and) Yâjyâ verse for Agni.<sup>4</sup>

That is done because cereals first ripen in southern countries<sup>5</sup> (for Agni is posted at the southern direction); for cereals are Agni's. He repeats the (Anuvâkyâ and) Yâjyâ<sup>6</sup> for Soma. That is done because many rivers flow towards the west (to fall into the sea), and the waters are Soma's. He repeats the (Anuvâkyâ and) Yâjyâ<sup>7</sup> mantra for Savitar. That is done, because the wind (pavamânah) blows most from the north between the northern and western directions; it thus blows moved by Savitar.<sup>8</sup>

He repeats the (Anuvâkyâ and) Yâjyâ<sup>9</sup> mantra or anvika yajatiha, i. e. he repeats the Anuvâkyâ (first) and yajya (second) mantra when an offering is given. Say. quotes from another Sâkhâ the passage : पथ्यां स्वस्ति यजति प्राचीमेव तथा दिशं जानाति i. e. he (the Hotar) recognises the eastern direction by repeating the Yâjyâ verse addressed to Pathyâ Svasti, i. e. well-being when making a journey, safe passage. According to Sayana, Pathyâ is only another name of Aditi. She represents here the line which connects the point of sunrise with that of sunset.

for Aditi, who is the upper region.<sup>10</sup> This is done because the sky (astu) wets the earth with rain (and) dries it up (which is done from above). He repeats (Anurâhyâ and) Yâgyâ verses for five deities. The sacrifice is five-fold. All (five) directions are (thus) established;<sup>11</sup> and the sacrifice becomes also established. becomes established for such people (only) with whom there is a Hotar having this knowledge (to separate and mark the regions in this way).

8.

He who wishes for beauty and acquirement of sacred knowledge, should turn towards the east when making the offerings for the Prayâja deities.<sup>12</sup> For the eastern direction is beauty and sacred knowledge. He who having this knowledge turns eastward (when making the Prayâjas) obtains beauty and sacred knowledge.

He who wishes for food, should turn towards the south when making the offerings for the Prayâja deities. For Agni (who is posted at the southern direction) is the eater of food, and master of food. He who having this knowledge goes towards the south (when making the Prayâjas) becomes an eater of food, a master of food; he obtains nourishment along with offspring.

<sup>10</sup> Say. explains uttamâ, by ûrdhvâ, referring to a passage of the Taittiriya Veda आदित्येर्ध्वं (प्राजानात्). There is no doubt, the word can mean the upper region, but one would not be quite wrong in translating here the word by "last." For Aditi is here the last deity invoked.

<sup>11</sup> The fifth direction is 'ûrdhvâ,' above. "The directions are established," means the directions which were previously not to be distinguished from one another, are now separated and may be known.

<sup>12</sup> They are formulas addressed to the following deities: samidh, the wooden sticks thrown into the fire; tanûnapât, a name of Agni; ubâ, the sacrificial food; barhis, the kusha grass spread over the sacrificial ground; and svâhâkîra, the call svâhâ! at the end of Yâgyâ verses. See Asv. Sr. 3. 1, 5.

He who desires cattle, should go towards the west when making the Prayâja offerings. For cattle are the waters (which are in the western direction). He who having such a knowledge goes westwards becomes rich in cattle.

He who desires the drinking of the Soma, should go toward the north when making the Prayâja offerings. For the northern direction is the king Soma. He who having such a knowledge goes northwards (when making the Prayâjas) obtains the drinking of the Soma.

The upper direction (ûrdhâ) leads to heaven. He who performs the Prayâja offerings when standing in the upper direction <sup>11</sup> becomes successful in all directions. For these (three) worlds are linked together. They being in such a condition shine for the welfare of him who has such a knowledge.

He repeats the Yâjyâ for the Pathyâ.<sup>12</sup> By doing so, he places speech (represented by Pathyâ) at the beginning of the sacrifice. The breath (coming out of the mouth and the nostrils) is Agni; the breath (going within the mouth and nostrils) is Soma. Savitar is to set into motion (the ceremonial machinery), and Aditi is to establish a firm footing. When he repeats a Yâjyâ to Pathyâ, then he carries the sacrifice on its path. Agni and Soma verily are the two eyes; Savitar serves for moving it, and Aditi for establishing a firm footing (to it). For through the eye the gods got aware of the sacrifice. For what is not perceivable (elsewhere) is to be perceived by the eye. If any one even after having run astray gets aware (of any thing) by exerting his eye successively <sup>15</sup> (in consequence of the successive exertions of the faculty of seeing), then he (really) knows it. When the gods (were exerting their eyes repeatedly, and looking from one object to the other) they got sight of the sacrifice. Thus they got sight of it on this earth; on the earth (therefore) they acquired the implements (required for performing the sacrifice). On her (the earth) the sacrifice is spread; on her it is performed; on her the sacrificial implements are acquired. This earth is Aditi; therefore the last Yājyā verse repeated is addressed to her. This is done (in order to enable the sacrificer) to get aware of the sacrifice (the mystical sacrificial man) and to behold then afterwards the celestial world.

<sup>12</sup> This refers to the words: ये यजामहे (i. e., we who worship) पथां स्वसि which are repeated by the Hotar, after the Anuvâkyâ is over, and before the commencement of the proper Yâjyâ verse. These words are introductory to the latter. Before all Yâjyâ verses (as is generally done), the words ये यजामहे with the name of the respective deity are to be found.—Saptahûtra.

9.

They say, the gods should be provided with Vais'yas <sup>16</sup> (agriculturists and herdsmen). For if <sup>15</sup> Anushtyā is explained by Sāy. : केनापि प्रयत्नविशेषेण. It no doubt, literally means, one standing by the other, one after the other. The substantive anushthāna is the most general word for performance of a religious ceremony, being a succession of several acts. The meaning given to the word in Bohtlingk and Roth's Sanserit Dictionary (I. page 124) "with his own eyes" is nothing but a bad guess unsupported by any authority and contrary to etymology and usage. The phrase anushthya prayāñti properly means, he gets aware of the chief object after having got sight of an intermediate one which alone leads to the first. The sacrificer whose principal object is to reach heaven, must first see the medium by means of which he can ascend to the celestial world. This is the sacrifice. Therefore he first sees the sacrifice and then he casts a glance at the celestial world. A traveller who has run astray, must first recognise the direction, and then he may find the way to his homely village.

<sup>16</sup> According to Sāyana, the word vaiśya may convey two meanings: 1, a subject in general; 2, men of the Vais'ya caste. I prefer the latter meaning. The Vais'yas are to provide gods and men with food and the gods are provided with them, men will subsequently obtain them also. If all Vais'yas (to furnish the necessary supplies) are in readiness, then the sacrifice is prepared. It is prepared for that family in the midst of which there is a Hotar who has this knowledge (and makes provision accordingly).

(The gods are provided for with Vais'yas by the recital of the verse, svastināḥ pathyāsū : <sup>17</sup> 10, 63, 15), "O Maruts! grant us in the desert tracks prosperity (by providing us with water); grant us prosperity (by abundance) in waters in a desolated region over which the sky shines! grant prosperity to the wombs of our women for producing children! grant prosperity to our wealth." For the Maruts are the Vais'vas of the gods (their agriculturists). The Hotar puts them by (repeating) this (mantra) in readiness at the beginning of the sacrifice.

They say, the Hotar should (as Anurākyā and Yājyā verses at the Prāyaṇīya ishti) use mantras of all (principal) metres. For the gods conquered the celestial world by means of having used for their (Anurākyā and) Yājyā verses mantras of all metres. Likewise the sacrificer who does the same gains the celestial world. (The two verses.) svastināḥ pathyāsū and svastir یدdhi prapathe (10, 63, 15, 16), <sup>17</sup> which are addressed to pathyā svasti i. e., safe journey, are in the Trishṭubh metre. The two verses addressed to Agni, agne naya supathā (1, 189, 1), and ā derāyām apī panthām (10, 2, 3) wealth. They are here evidently regarded as the subjected population. The gods are, as Say. states with reference to the creation theory of the Vṛgasaneyms, divided into four castes, just as men. Agni and Bṛhaspati are the Brāhmanas among the gods; Indra, Varuna, Soma, the Rudras, Parjanya, Yama Mṛtanu are the Kṣatriyas; Gaṇeśa, the Vasus, the Rudras, the Adityas, Viśvedevas and Maruts are the Vais'yas, and Pūshan belongs to the Sūdra caste.

are also in the Trishtubh metre. The two verses, addressed to Soma, tram amos prachikito manishā (1, 91, 1), and yā te dhāmāni dixi (1, 91, 4) are (also) in the Trishtubh metre. The two verses addressed to Saritā : ā viś'radavan satpatim (5, 82, 7), and yā imā viś'vā (5, 82, 9), are in the Gāyatri metre. The two verses addressed to Aditi, suśrāmāṇam prithivīm (10, 63, 10), and mahiṇā ū shu mātaram (Atharv. 7, 6, 2), are in the Jagatī metre.<sup>18</sup> These are all the (principal) metres : Gāyatri, Trishtubh, and Jagatī. Those (other metres) follow them. For these (three kinds of metres) are, as it were, of the most frequent occurrence (pratamām) at a sacrifice. He therefore who having such a knowledge gets repeated his Anuvākya and Yājyā verses in these (three) metres, gets repeated them in all metres (obtains the particular advantage to be derived not only from the three metres mentioned, but from all other metres also).

10.

These verses used as Anuvākya and Yājyā at this offering (the Prāyanīya Ishṭi), contain the words, pra, forward, forth<sup>19</sup> ni,<sup>20</sup> to carry; pathin,<sup>21</sup> path; svasti,<sup>22</sup> welfare. The gods after having performed an Ishṭi by means of these verses, gained the celestial world. Likewise a sacrificer, after having done the same, gains the celestial world. Among these verses there is a pada (a foot, here the last quarter verse of 10, 63, 15) : "O Maruts grant prosperity in wealth." The Maruts are the Vaisyas (the subjects) of the gods, and are domiciled in the air. (By these words just mentioned) the sacrificer who goes to heaven is to be announced to them (the Maruts). For they have the power of preventing him (from going up) or even of killing him. By the words, "O Maruts, grant prosperity," &c. the Hotar announces the sacrificer (his projected journey up to the celestial world) to the Vais'vas (the subjects) of the gods. The Maruts then neither prevent nor kill him who goes to the celestial world. He who has such a knowledge is allowed a safe passage up to the celestial world by them.

The two Saṁyājyā verses required for the Srishtakṛit (of the Prāyaṇīya-ishti) ought to be in the Virāj metre, which consists of thirty-three syllables. These are : sed agnir agnir (7, 1, 14) and sed agnir yo (7, 1, 15). The gods after having used for their Saṁyājyās two verses in the Virāj metre gained the celestial world. Likewise does that sacrificer gain heaven who uses also two verses in the Virāj metre (when performing the Srishtakṛit of the Prāyaṇīya ishti). They (each of them) contain thirty-three syllables. For there are thirty-three gods, viz. eight Vasus, eleven Rudras, twelve Adityas, (one) Prājapati and (one) Vashat-kāra. In this way the Hotar makes the gods participate at the very first beginning of the sacrifice in the (33) syllables of the mantra recited ; for each syllable is (as it were) a plate<sup>23</sup> for the gods, by which the sacrificer makes (all) deities pleased and satiates them.

11.

They say, at the Prāyaṇīya ishti are (only) the Prayāja<sup>24</sup> offerings to be made, but not the Anuyā-

jas <sup>25</sup>; for the latter are, as it were, a blank, and (if performed) cause delay. But this (precept) should not be observed; at the said Ishti both the Prayāja as well as the Anuyāja offerings should be made. For the Prayājas are the vital airs, and the Anuyājas are offspring. When he thus foregoes the Prayājas, he foregoes the vital airs of the sacrificer (deprives him of his life), and when he foregoes the Anuyājas, he foregoes the offspring of the sacrificer (deprives him of it). Thence Prayājas as well as Anuyājas are required (at the Prāyanīya ishti).

He should not repeat the Saṁyāja mantras addressed to the patnis <sup>26</sup> (patnis, of the gods); nor should he use the Samsthita-Yajus <sup>27</sup> formula. Only inasmuch as this is done (i. e., if the Patni-samyāja and Samsthita-Yajus offerings are omitted) the sacrifice is complete. <sup>28</sup>

He should keep the remainder of the Prāyanīya-ishti offering, and (after the Soma sacrifice is over) mix it together with the offering required for the Udayānīya (concluding) ishti, in order to make the sacrifice one continuous uninterrupted whole. (There

is also another way for connecting both Ishtis). In the same vessel, in which he portions out the rice for the Purodās'a of the Prāyanīya ishti, he should portion out also the rice for the Purodās'a of the Udavanīya ishti. Inasmuch as this is done, the sacrifice becomes continuous, uninterrupted. They say, in doing this the sacrificers succeed in that (the other) world, but not in this one. They use the expression Prāyanīyam (on several occasions). For on the several portions of rice being taken out for the Purodās'a (by the Adhvaryu) the sacrificers say this is Prāyanīya, (i. e. to go forth, to progress), and on the Purodās'a oblations being thrown (into the fire) they say again, this is Prāyanīyam (i. e. to progress). In this way the sacrificers go forth (prāyanti) from this world. But they say so from ignorance (and this objection is consequently not to be regarded).

The Anuvākyā and Yājyā verses of both the Prāyanīya and Udavanīya ishtis should interchange in this way, that the Anuvākyā verses of the Prāyanīya ishti should be used as the Yājyā verses for the Udavanīya, and the Yājyā verses of the Prāyanīya as Anuvākyās of the Udavanīya. The Hotar shifts in this way (the Anuvākyās and Yājyās of both the Ishtis) for ensuring success (to the sacrificer) in both worlds, for obtaining a firm footing (for the sacrifice) in both worlds. The sacrificer (thus) succeeds in both worlds, and obtains a firm footing in both worlds. He who has this knowledge, obtains a firm footing (in both worlds). The Charu oblation which is given to Aditi at the Prāyanīya as well as at the Udavanīya ishti serves for holding the sacrifice (at both its ends) together, to tie the two knots of the sacrifice (at the beginning and at the end) in order to prevent it from slipping down. Some one (a theologian) has told : this (tying of the two ends of the sacrifice) is exactly corresponding to that (act of common life to which it alludes); as (for instance) one ties two knots at both the ends of a rope (tejanih) in order to prevent (the load which is tied up) from slipping down. In the same way the priest ties the knots at both ends of the sacrifice (the sacrificial chain) by means of the Charu oblation given to Aditi at the Prâyanîya as well as at the Udayanîya ishti. Among those (deities required at both the Ishtis) they commence with Pathyâ Svasti (at the Prâyanîya ishti), and conclude (at the Udayanîya ishti) also with Pathyâ Svasti. (Thus) the sacrificers start safely from here, and end (their journey there, in the other world), they end safely, safely (their journey there, in the other world).

THIRD CHAPTER.

12.

The gods bought the king Soma in the eastern direction. Thence he is (generally) bought in the eastern direction. They bought him from the thirteenth month. Thence the thirteenth month is found unfit (for any religious work to be done in it); a seller of the Soma is (likewise) found unfit (for intercourse). For such a man is a defaulter. When the Soma after having been bought was brought to men (the sacrificers), his powers and his faculty of making the senses sharp moved from their place and scattered everywhere.<sup>1</sup> They tried to collect and keep them together with one verse. But they failed. They (tried to keep them together) with two, then with three, then with four, then with five, then with six, then with seven verses; but they did not succeed in keeping them together. (Finally) with eight verses they succeeded, and recovered them (in their entirety and completeness). (Therefore) what is held together and obtained, that is called ashtāu, i. e. eight (from as' to reach, obtain). He who has this knowledge obtains anything he might wish for. Thence there are in those ceremonies (which follow the bringing of the Soma to the sacrificial compound), eight verses each time recited in order to collect and hold together the strength and those qualities (of the Soma plant) which give sharpness of senses.

The Adhvaryu then says (to the Hotar): repeat a mantra for the Soma who is bought and being brought (to the sacrificial compound). The Hotar repeats: Bhadrād abhi s'reyah prehi,<sup>2</sup> i. e., go from

<sup>2</sup> The mantra is from the Taittiriya Saṁhitā. We find it also in the Atharvaveda Saṁhitā (7, 8, 1.) with some deviations, which are found alike in the printed edition and in an old manuscript which is in my possession. The verse reads in the Aitarey. Brāhm. and Taittir. Saṁh. as follows:—

भद्रादभि श्रेयः प्रेहि वृद्धस्यतिः पुर एता ते असु ।

अथेमवस्य वर आ श्रियया आरे श्रुन् कृणुहि सर्ववीरः ॥

Instead of अभि there is अधि in the . V., and instead of अथेमवस्य (अथ । ईम् । अवस्य) there is: अथेममस्या (अथ । ईमं अस्या); instead of the plur. श्रुन् we have the sing: श्रु, and instead of सर्ववीरः there is सर्ववीरं. There is no doubt, the readings of the Atharva Veda look like corrections of the less intelligible parts of the original mantra which is correct only in the form in which we find it in the Ait. Br. and the Taitt. S. अभि is less happiness to still greater bliss. By the word bhadra i. e. happy, this world (the earth) is meant. That world is better (s'reyân) than this world. Thus the Hotar makes the sacrificer go to the celestial world (which is to be understood by s'reyas, i. e. better). The second pada of the verse is) : brihaspatih pura etâ astu, i. e. the (thy) guide be Brihaspati ! If the Hotar has made (by repeating this pada) the Brahma his (the sacrificer's) guide, (the sacrifice) being thus provided with the Brahma will not be damaged. (The third pada of the verse is:) atha im arasya vara â prithivyâ, i. e. stop him (Soma) on the surface of the earth. Vara means the place for sacrificing to the gods (devayajana). (By these words) the Hotar makes him (the Soma) stop (and remain in that place). (The fourth pada is:) âre sâtrîn krinuhi sarvacîrah, i. e. endowed with all powers drive far off the enemies ! (By reading these words) the Hotar turns out the enemy who does injury to the sacrificer, and his adversary, (and) consigns him to the lowest condition.

The Hotar then repeats the triplet : soma yâs te mayobhuvah (I, 91, 9-11.), which is addressed to Soma, and is in the Gâyatrî metre. In this way the Hotar makes the king Soma flourishing when he is being brought (to the sacrificial compound) by means of his own deity (the verse being addressed to correct than अधि. The redactor of the A. V. chose it on account of the so extremely frequent combination of अधि with an ablative which generally precedes (see the large number of instances quoted in B. and R.'s Sanscrit Dictionary I., pp. 142, 143.) whilst अधि never governs an ablative, but rather an accusative, and is in this passage to be connected with अयः. The words : अथेममस्या are a bad substitute for अथेमवस्य. The term arasya "make an end, do away with him" (the enemy) was entirely misunderstood by the redactor. Asya he makes asyâ and refers it to पृथिव्या ! The nominative सर्ववीरः which refers only to the deity invoked is made an accusative and referred to शत्रून् which then became a singular, शत्रुं.

Soma himself), and his own metre (his favourite metre being the Gâyatri.<sup>3</sup>) (The Hotar repeats :) sarve <sup>4</sup> nandanti yasâsâ (10, 71, 10.) i. e. "all friends rejoice at the arrival of the friend crowned with fame for having remained victor in the learned discussion (sabhâ;) for as their (of his friends) protector from defects, and giver of food, he is fit and ready for providing them with strength."<sup>5</sup> (Now follows the ex-

<sup>3</sup> The Gâyatri is said to have assumed the shape of a bird, and brought the Soma from heaven. Thence this metre is sacred to him.

<sup>4</sup> Say. understands by "the friend," Soma, and by "the friends, who rejoice at the friend's arrival," the priests and the sacrificer. About the same meaning he gives to the verse in his commentary on the R̥gveda Samhitâ. There he explains सुखायः friends, by समानज्ञानाः being equal in knowledge. सर्वे he refers to "all men of the assembly."

यस्यसा he takes in the sense of an adjective यशस्विना. But it is very doubtful whether this verse had originally any reference to Soma. In the whole hymn (बृहस्पते प्रथमं वाचो अयं०) of which it forms the eleventh verse, there is nowhere any allusion made to Soma. According to the Anukramani the hymn is "seen" (composed) by Brihaspati, the son of Angiras. But this appears to be very unlikely; for Brihaspati himself is addressed in the vocative. Say. gets over the difficulty by asserting, that Brihaspati (the teacher of the Gods and the receptacle of all sacred knowledge) is addressing these words to himself, after having had revealed the meaning and bearing of the Veda, before he ventured upon communicating the revelation (to the Gods). To judge from the contents of the hymn, the author prays to Brihaspati who is the same with Vâchaspati, the god of eloquence and speech, to endow him with the power of giving utterance in the proper words to his feelings, of which only the best ones should be revealed (v. 1). There is an interesting simile to be met with in the 2nd verse: "when the wise made the speech through their mind, purifying it (through their thoughts), just as they purify barley juice (saktu) through a filterer (tatau)."* Saktu is a kind of beer prepared by pouring water over barley, and by filtering it after having allowed it to remain for some time in this state. The whole hymn, in which the name "brâhmana" (as that of a caste) is several times mentioned, appears to refer to the might of speech and the great success to be derived from it when engaged in sacrificing.

planation) : Yas'ah i. e. fame, glory, is the king Soma. At his being bought every one rejoices, he who has to gain something (in the shape of Dakshinâ, the sacrificial reward), as well as he who has not. The king Soma "is the friend who remains victor at the learned discussions of the Brâhmans." He is kil-bishasprit, "the protector from defects." For he protects him from defects who becomes liable to them. He (that priest) who excels all others (regarding the power of speech and recitation) becomes liable to defects (voice becoming hoarse or the hands flag). Thence they (the sacrificers) say (to the Hotar) : "do not repeat (if thy intention is only to excel a rival in skill) the mantra (wrong), and likewise (to the Adhvaryu) do not (in a state of confusion) perform the ceremony (wrong); may they now not do anything wrong, in too great a hurry!" He is "pitushanir" i. e. giver of food; pitu is food, and pitu is the sacrificial reward (dakshinâ). The sacrificer gives, on account of a Soma sacrifice having been performed for him, (to the priests), a reward. Thus he makes him (the Soma) "the giver of food" (for the priests.) The word râjinam means sharpness of senses and (bodily) strength. He who has this knowledge will preserve up to the end of his life the unimpaired use of his senses and strength.

The Hotar repeats : âgan deva (4, 53, 7.) i. e. May the divine mover Savitar come <sup>6</sup> with the Ritus (i. e. seasons)! May he make prosperous our household, and bless us with children and nourishment! May he favour us (with gifts) at day and night (always)!

<sup>6</sup> The Brâhmana as well as Sâyana refer the conjunctive âgan to Soma which is certainly not the case. In his commentary on the Sâmhita he refers it justly to Savitar (see vol. III. page 236, ed. M. Muller). No doubt the verse was originally intended for Savitar and not for Soma. The whole hymn whence the verse is taken is devoted to Savitar.

May he let us obtain children and wealth! "āgan means: he (the Soma) has come and is here by that time (after having been bought). The Ritus (seasons) are the royal brothers of the king Soma just as men have brothers. (By repeating this first pada) the Hotar makes him (the Soma) come with them (his brothers, the Ritus). •By the words: "may he make prosperous" &c., he asks for a blessing. (By repeating the third pada) •"may he favour us at day and night," he asks for a blessing for him (the sacrificer) at day and night. (By the fourth pada :) "may he let us," &c. he (also) asks for a blessing.

The Hotar repeats • yâ te dhâmâni havishâ (1, 91, 19). i. e. "may all thy qualities which they honour (with prayers and with oblations) become manifest at (this) sacrifice everywhere! Enter, O Soma! (our) houses (the sacrificial hall) as an increaser of property (of cows), as a protector (from evil), as one who gives good children and does not hurt them (in any way)." 29-994

The words gayasphâna, pratarâna, surîrah mean: be an increaser and protector of our cattle. Duryâh means the premises (of the sacrificer) which are afraid of the king Soma having arrived. When the Hotar repeats this (last pada of the verse) he does it with a view to propitiate him (Soma). If the Hotar has thus propitiated him (the Soma), he neither kills the children nor the cattle of the sacrificer.

The Hotar concludes with the verse, addressed to Varuṇa: imâm dhiyam s'ikshamâṇasya deva (8, 42, 3) i. e. "O divine <sup>7</sup> Varuṇa, instruct the pupil in understanding, performance and skill. May we ascend the ship for crossing safely all evil waters and land in safety (on the other shore)." Soma is in the power of the god Varuṇa, as long as he is tied up (in the cloth),<sup>7</sup> and goes to the places of the Prāg-rāṁs'a. When reciting this verse he thus makes the Soma prosper by means of his own deity (for as liquor he is Vārunī), and his own metre.<sup>8</sup> The "pupil" (learner) is he who sacrifices, for he is learning. By the words "instruct in understanding, performance, and skill," he means, teach, O Varuṇa, strength (and) knowledge. The "ship" is the sacrifice. The ship is of "good passage." The black goat-skin is the "good passage," and speech the ship. By means of this verse the sacrificer thus ascends speech (as his ship) and sails in it up to the celestial world.

<sup>7</sup> The Soma stalks are to be tied up in a cloth, when they are brought to the sacrificial compound, the front part of which including the Ahavaniya, Dakshina and Gârhapatya fires is called, Prâgrâṇs'a or Pîchâna-râṇs'a.

These eight verses which he repeats, are complete in form. What is complete in form, that is successful in the sacrifice, when the verse repeated alludes to the ceremony which is being performed.

Of these verses he repeats the first and last thrice; this makes twelve (in all). The year consists of twelve months, and Prajâpati is the year. He who has this knowledge succeeds by these verses which reside in Prajâpati. By repeating the first and last verses thrice he ties the two end knots of the sacrifice for fastening and tightening it in order to prevent it from slipping down.

14

One of the bullocks (which carry the cart on which the king Soma is seated) is to remain yoked, the other to be unyoked. Then they should take down (from the cart) the king (Soma). Were they to take him down when both are let loose, they would bring him into the power of the manes (pitarah). Would they do so, when both are still yoked (to the cart), the sacrificer could not keep what he is possessed of, nor increase it; should he have any children, they would be scattered (everywhere, and consequently be lost for him). The bullock which is let loose, represents the children who are in the house, that one which remains yoked, the actions (ceremonies, and worldly pursuits). Those sacrificers who take the Soma down, whilst one of the bullocks is yoked and the other let loose, avail themselves of both actions, of acquiring property, and keeping what they have acquired.

The Devas and Asuras were fighting in these worlds. They fought in the eastern direction; there the Asuras defeated the Devas. They then fought in the southern direction, the Asuras defeated the Devas again. They then fought in the western direction; the Asuras defeated the Devas again. They fought in the northern direction, the Asuras defeated the Devas again. They then fought in the north-eastern direction<sup>9</sup>; there the Devas did not sustain defeat. This direction is aparâjitâ, i. e., unconquerable. Thence one should do work in this (north-eastern) direction, and have it done there; for such one (alone) is able to clear off his debts.<sup>10</sup>

The Devas said, it is on account of our having no king, that the Asuras defeat us. Let us elect a king.

<sup>10</sup> According to the Brahmanical notions every man born is a debtor. His creditors are the gods, Rishis, the Pitras; and men. His debt towards the Pitras or manes, is cleared off by begetting a son. As long as he has begot no son, he is debtor to the manes. To clear his debts towards the gods by offering sacrifices to them, he must have some property. Any act required for the acquisition of anything, should be done in the north-eastern direction.

All consented. They elected Soma their king. Headed by the king Soma, they were victorious in all directions. He who brings the sacrifice is the king Soma. The Soma faces the eastern direction, when the priests put him (on the cart). By this means the sacrificer conquers the eastern direction. The priests turn the cart round in the southern direction. By this means he conquers the southern direction. They turn (the cart) towards the west; by this means he conquers the western direction. When the cart stands in the northern direction, they take (the Soma) off. By this means he conquers the northern direction. He who has this knowledge conquers all directions.

After the king Soma has arrived, the reception offering is prepared. For the king Soma comes to the premises of the sacrificer (as a guest). Thence the offering for receiving him as a guest (atithi) is called Atithya-ishṭi. Its Purodâsa is made ready in nine potsherds (i. e., the rice ball, making up the Purodâsa is placed on nine potsherds). For there are nine vital airs (prânâḥ). (This offering is made) for making the vital airs (to the sacrifice) and for making them severally known. It belongs to Vishṇu; for Vishṇu is the sacrifice. By means of his own deity and his own metre<sup>11</sup> he makes the sacrifice successful. For all metres and Prishṭhas,<sup>12</sup> follow the king Soma, when he is bought (as his retinue). To all who follow a king (as his retinue) a reception is given.

<sup>11</sup> The Anuvâkyâ mantra is, idaṁ Vishṇur vichakrame (1, 22, 17) and the Yâgyñ, idā asya priyam abhipâtho (1, 154, 5). See As'val. Śr' S. 4, 5. Of both verses Vishṇu is the deity. The metre of the first verse is Gâyatri, that of the second Trishṭubh. These two metres are regarded as the principal ones, comprising all the rest.

When the king Soma has arrived, then they produce fire by friction. Agni being the animal of the gods, this rite of producing Agni (and throwing him into another fire) is equivalent to the slaughter of an ox or a cow which miscarries, which rite is always performed when a king or another man who deserves high honour<sup>13</sup> is to be received.

The Adhvaryu (says to the Hotar) : repeat mantras for Agni who is being produced by friction.

The Hotar repeats a verse addressed to Savitar ; abhi trā deva Savitar (1, 24, 3). They ask : why does he repeat a verse addressed to Savitar for the Agni who is being produced ? (The answer is :) Savitar rules over all productions. Produced<sup>14</sup> (themselves) by Savitar, they (are able) to produce Agni (by friction). Thence a verse addressed to Savitar is required.

He repeats a verse, addressed to Dyācā-prithivī : mahi dyāuḥ prithivīcha na (4, 56, 1.)

<sup>13</sup> The term is arhat, a word well known chiefly to the students of Buddhism. Sāyana explains it by "a great Brāhman," or a Brāhman (in general). That cows were killed at the time of receiving a most distinguished guest, is stated in the Smritis. But, as Sāyana observes, (which entirely agrees with the opinions held now-a-days) this custom belongs to former Yugas (periods of the world). Thence the word : qaghna, i. e. cow killer means in the more ancient Sanskrit books "a guest" : (See the commentators on Pāṇini 3, 4, 73) ; for the reception of a high guest was the death of the cow of the house.

<sup>14</sup> Sāyana explains prasūta as "allowed, permitted." According to his opinion the meaning of the sentence is, "having been permitted by Savitā to perform this ceremony, they perform it." Prasava is then "the permission for performing ceremonies." But I doubt whether this opinion is correct.

They ask : why does he repeat a verse addressed to Dyāvâ prithivî for Agni who is being produced (by friction) ? They answer : the gods caught him (once), when he was born, between heaven and earth (dyāvâ-prithivî) ; since that time he is kept there enclosed (by heaven and earth). Thence the Hotar repeats a verse addressed to Dyāvâ-prithivî.

He repeats a triplet of verses addressed to Agni in the Gâyatri-metre : trâm Agne pushkarâd adhi (6, 16, 13.) when Agni is being produced. Thus he makes him (Agni) prosper by his own deity (the verses are addressed to Agni) and his own metre (Gâyatri). The words, athurâ niramanthata,<sup>15</sup> i. e. the fire-priest produced thee out (of the two wooden sticks by means of friction), are complete in form.

What is complete in form, (that is) when the verse which is repeated alludes to the ceremony which is being performed, that is successful in the sacrifice.

Should Agni not be born (the fire not be produced) or should it take a long time, then the Rakshoghni<sup>16</sup> verses, which are in the Gâyatri metre are to be repeated : Agne hanîsi nyatrinam (10, 118). These (verses) are intended for destroying the Rakshas (the evil-doers). For the Rakshas have seized him, if he is not born, or if his birth is delayed.

When Agni is born after the recital of the first or the second (and so on) of these (Rakshoghni verses), then the Hotar has to repeat a verse appropriate to him, who has been born, by containing the term "born," ata bruvantu jantara (1, 74, 3.)

What is appropriate in the sacrifice, that is successful. He repeats : â yañ hastena khâdinam (6, 16, 40).

In this verse occurs the term "hasta, hand<sup>1</sup>;" for they rub him (out of two wooden sticks) by means of their hands. In it there further occurs: s'is'ur-jâtaḥ, i. e., a child born; for, just as a child, he is first born. The word na (in na bibhrati of the verse) has with the gods the same meaning, as om (yes) with these men). He repeats, pṛa devaṁ devarītaye (6, 16, 41). This verse is appropriate for Agni when he is being thrown into the Ahavaniya fire (after having come out of the two wooden sticks). The half verse â se gonân nishidatu (which are contained in this verse) i. e., he may sit in his own house, means, that Agni (the Ahavaniya fire) is Agni's (who was just born, by friction) proper place. ●

In the verse: jâtam jâta vedasi, (6, 16, 12) the one is jâta (the Agni produced by friction), the other atavedasi (the Ahavaniya fire). The words, priyam, s'is'tha atithim mean, Agni (the new born) is the beloved guest of the (other) Agni (the Ahavaniya). By the words, syoma â grihapatim, he, the priest, places him into ease (by putting him into his proper place, the Ahavaniya fire). Agninâgniḥ samidhyate (1, 12, 6) is appropriate (when the new born Agni has been thrown into the Ahavaniya fire). In the verse: tvam hyagne agninâ vipro vipreṇa santsatâ (8, 43, 14) the one vipro (wise) means one Agni, and the other vipra the other Agni; the one san (being, existing) means the one, the other san in (santâ) the other Agni. The words, sakhâ sakhyâ samidhyase (at the end of the verse quoted) mean, this Agni is the friend of the (other) Agni.

In the verse: taṁ marjayanta sukratuḥ (8, 73, 8) the words, sveshu kshayeshu, mean, this Agni is the other Agni's own residence.

With the verse, yajnena yajnam ayajanta (1, 164, 50) he concludes. By means of the sacrifice (the ideal omnipresent sacrifice) the gods thus are formed (the actual, visible) sacrifice. By having sacrificed Agni through Agni (having thrown the new born Agni into the Ahavanīya fire) the gods went to heaven. (In the remaining part of the verse) "these (producing fire, &c) were the first rites; the great ones (the sacrificers) reached that heaven in which those gods who formerly performed the same rites reside" (1, 164, 50), the metres are the sādhya devās, i. e. the gods who (formerly) performed. They sacrificed Agni at the beginning by means of Agni, and went to heaven. There were the Adityas, and the Angiras. They sacrificed at the beginning Agni by means of Agni and went to heaven. The offering of the fire (Agni) is that offering which leads to heaven. Even if the performing priest is no proper Brahman<sup>17</sup> (in the strictest sense), or even pronounced to be an ill-reputed man, this sacrifice nevertheless goes up to the gods, and becomes not polluted by the contagion with a wicked man (as in this case the performing priest is). The oblation (of Agni in the Ahavanīya fire) of him who has this knowledge goes up to the gods; and does not become infected by the contagion with a wicked man.

The verses he repeats are thirteen in number; they are complete in form. If the form is complete and the verse alludes to the ceremony which is being performed, then the sacrifice is successful. Of these verses he repeats the first and the last thrice; this makes seventeen. For Prajāpati is seventeen fold, comprising such a year as consists of twelve months and five seasons. Prajāpati is the year.

<sup>17</sup> The term in the original is, abrāhmanakṛta, i. e. who is declared to be no proper Brahman. According to Śāy. there are in the Smṛitis six kinds of men mentioned who are strictly speaking not capable of the Brahmanship, though they are Brahmins by birth, viz. the servant of a king, a merchant (seller and buyer); the bahugyāy, he who performs many sacrifices (for the sake of gain only); the as'vāttha-yājaka, i. e. he who being properly appointed for the performance of the great (S'vāta) sacrifices performs only the less important domestic rites (smṛita-karmāni), the grāmagyāy, i. e. he who performs out of covetousness alone sacrifices for all inhabitants of a village or town qualified or disqualified; the brahma'andha, i. e. he who performs the daily religious duties neither before sunrise nor sunset.

He who has such a knowledge prospers by these verses which reside in Prajāpati. By repeating thrice the first and last verses he ties both the knots of the sacrifice to fasten and tighten it, and prevent it from slipping down.

(The remaining rites of the Atithi-ishti,<sup>18</sup> after the ceremony of producing fire by friction is finished).

The two Puro-anuvâkyâs for both portions of melted butter<sup>19</sup> (which are to be offered) are, samidhâ gnim durasyata (8, 44, 1), and, âpyâgyasva sametu (1, 91, 16.) These two verses are complete in form; for they contain an allusion to guests.<sup>20</sup> When the verse (which is repeated) alludes to the ceremony which is being performed, then the form is complete, and (consequently) the sacrifice successful. The verse (8, 44, 1) alluding to the guest (atithi) belongs to Agni, whilst the verse, addressed to Soma (1, 91, 16) does not contain the word "guest." If there were a verse addressed to Soma, containing the word "guest," such one should always be used. But notwithstanding (there being no such verse) the verse mentioned (1, 91, 16) refers to a guest, for it contains the term "being fattened;" for, when one feeds a guest

(well) then he grows fat, as it were. The Yâjy. mantra for both, Agni and Soma, commences with jushânâh.<sup>21</sup> The Anuvâkyâ and Yâjyâ mantras (for the principal offering consisting of Purodâs'a) are idoâm Vishnu<sup>22</sup> richakrame (1, 22, 17) and tad asya priyam abhi pâtho (1, 154, 5). Both verses are addressed to Vishnu. Having repeated as Anuvâkyâ a verse with three padas he uses as Yâjvâ one consisting of four padas; thus seven padas are obtained.

For the ceremony of receiving a guest (âtithyam = atithi-ishti) is the head of the sacrifice. There are seven vital airs in the head. By this ceremony the Hotar thus puts the seven vital airs in the head (of the sacrificer).

The two Sañjyâ mantras, required at the Svishtakrit are: hotâram chitraratham (10, 1, 5), and apâ prâmyam agnir (7, 8, 4). Both verses are complete in form; for in both the word atithi<sup>23</sup>, a guest (referring to Agni's reception as a guest), occurs. The success of the sacrifice depends on the completeness of the form, i. e. that the mantra (which is repeated) alludes to the ceremony which is being performed. Both Sañjyâs (used at the Svishtakrit of the Atithi-ishti) are in the Trishtubh metre, for getting possession of Indra's powers (for Indra is Trishtubh). The ceremony ends here with the eating of the sacrificial food.<sup>24</sup> The gods having (once) rested

<sup>23</sup> In the last pada of the first mantra there occur the words agnim atithim jagânâm, and also in the last pada of the second the words daavyo atithih, the heavenly guest.

atisfied with the Atithya-ishti ending by the eating of the sacrificial food (on the part of the sacrificer and the priests), this Ishti is to end with the eating of the sacrificial food (no further ceremonies being required).

They offer only the Prayājas<sup>25</sup> at this (Ishti), but not the Anuyājas. The Prayājas, as well as the Anuyājas are the vital airs. The airs which are in the head are the Prayājas, whilst those in the lower parts of the body are the Anuyājas. He who should offer the Anuyājas at this (Ishti) is just like a man who after having cut off the vital airs (residing in the lower parts of the body) wishes to put them in the head. That would be superfluity,<sup>26</sup> were all the vital airs, those of the head as well as those of the lower parts of the body, to be found at the same place (viz. in the head). If they therefore offer at this (Ishti) only the Prayājas without Anuyājas, then the wish which one entertains at the offering of the Anuyājas becomes also fulfilled (for the offering of the Anuyājas on this occasion would be a mistake).

FOURTH CHAPTER.

13

The sacrifice went away from the gods (saying), I shall not be your food. The gods said: do not go; thou alone shalt be our food. The gods then killed

They precede the principal offering, which consists of Parodāśa.

This is a mistake in the sacrifice which is to be propitiated.

it. When it had been taken asunder (cut into pieces by them, it was found not to be sufficient to satisfy their appetite). The gods said: this sacrifice after having been taken asunder, will certainly not be sufficient for us. Well, let us dress (and fill up) the sacrifice. After having dressed it, they said to the As'vins, cure this sacrifice; for the As'vins are the two physicians of the gods, they are the two Adhvar- gods. It is a preparatory rite, just as the Diksha, and is intended for providing the sacrificer with a heavenly body, with which alone he is permitted to enter the residence of the gods. That the gods do not receive mortals at their residence when arriving in their very bodies, one may learn from the amusing story of the king Trisanku as reported in the Rāmāyana (1, 57-60). For the performance of this important ceremony extensive preparations are to be made by the Adhvaryu and his assistant, the Pratiprasthitar. All the vessels and implements required are brought to the spot and placed at the left side of the Gārhapatya fire. The chief implements are: an earthen vessel of a peculiar form, called Mahāvira or gharma (i. e. heat, or heated substance, for it is to be heated), a seat (śāndi) to sit on, two wooden pieces for lifting the Mahāvira pot (called ś'apha), two shovels for charcoal (dhvishtri), one very large wooden spoon (Upayamāni) from which the sacrificer drinks milk (this forms part of the ceremony), three fans (dhavitra), six shavings from the Udumbara tree as fuel, thirteen sticks, to be laid round the Mahāvira vessel (paridhi), two metal blades, one of gold and one of silver (called śaravaraṇajātū rakmān). A cow and a female sheep are to be kept in readiness. Two bunches of kuśa grass are prepared, and tied in the midst. They are called Veda, and resemble very much the Barisma (Barsom) of the Perses, which is also tied together by means of a reed (auryaṇḍhaṇam).

The Mahāvira is first put on the Vedi. Then the Adhvaryu makes a circle of clay, in which afterwards the Mahāvira is put. This ring is called khara, i. e. ass, for earth is always carried on the back of donkeys to the sacrificial compound. After the priests have repeated the mantras required for preparation (s'anti namo rishi &c. the Mahāvira is taken from the Vedi and placed in that earthen ring (khara). Wooden sticks are put around it along with burning coals, and also fire is put in the khara just below the Mahāvira, in order to make it hot. The fire is blown by three little fans which serve as bellows. The silver blade is put below, the gold blade above the Mahāvira. Whilst the empty vessel is being heated, the Hotar repeats the first series of mantras, called the pūva patāla. After the vessel has been made quite hot, it is lifted up by means of the two ś'aphas. The cow then is called yus<sup>2</sup> (sacred cooks). Thence two Adhvaryu priests provide all the implements required for the Pravargya vessel (gharma). After having done so, they say, "Brahma!<sup>3</sup> we shall perform the Pravargya ceremony. Hotar! repeat the appropriate mantras!"

19

The Hotar begins with brahma jajñānam prathamam (Vaj. S. 13, 5. As'val. S'. 4, 6). In this mantra Brahma is Bṛhaspati (the teacher of the gods); by means of Brahma (i.e. the Brahmins) the Hotar thus unites the Pravargya man (the mystical personage, called "sacrifice" which had been torn to pieces by the gods). By repeating the mantra, iyam pitṛe āśtrī (As'val. S'. S. 4, 6), the Hotar puts speech in the Pravargya man; for by rāśtrī, i. e. queen, speech is to be understood.

The verse, mahān mahi astabhāyad (As'val. S'. S. 4, 6), is addressed to Brahmanaspati. Brahma is Bṛhaspati; by means of Brahma the priest thus unites the Pravargya man. * ed by the Adhvaryu with a cord, and milked. The milk is put on the left side of the Veda, and then under recital of the mantra, daśābhū, poured in the Mahāvira. Then the milk of a goat whose udder is taken, and mixed with that of the cow in the vessel. After this has been done, the contents of the Mahāvira are thrown into the Ahavanīya fire. The sacrificer drinks milk from a large wooden con (Upavānam) which has been first smelled by the Adhvaryu. After the second series of mantras, the so-called uttara patala, is repeated for the cow is milked and her milk poured in the Mahāvira. The whole ceremony has been witnessed by me.

Viz. the properly so-called Adhvaryu with his constant assistant ratiprasthātā.

<sup>2</sup> The Brahman priest, i.e. the president of the sacrifice, is here intimated, that the priests are going to perform the Pravargya ceremony. The Hotar receives at the same time orders to repeat the appropriate mantras. The intimation to the Brahman priest as well as to the Hotar are given by the Adhvaryu and the Prati- vesthātā, called the two Adhvaryus.

The verse addressed to Savitar is, abhi tyam deva savitāram (Vāj. S. 4, 25. As'val. S. S. 4, 6). Savita is the vital air; thus the Hotar puts the vital air in this Pravargya man.

By the verse, saṁśūdasra mahān asi (1, 36, 9) they make him (the Pravargya man) sit down.<sup>4</sup>

The verse: añjanti yam prathayanto (5, 43, 7) is appropriate to the ceremony of anointing (the Pravargya vessel with melted butter). What is appropriate in the sacrifice that is successful.

Of the following mantras; patangam ahtaṁ asurasu (10, 177, 1), yo nō sanutyo abhidāsad (6, 5, 4), bhā vā nō agne sumanā upetau (3, 18, 1), the first as well as the second verse<sup>5</sup>) are appropriate.

The five verses required for killing the Rakshas commence with, krinushra pājāḥ prasitām (4, 4, 1-5).

Now follow four single verses: <sup>6</sup>

Pari tvā girvāṇo gira (1, 10, 12);

Adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyam (1, 83, 3);

S'ukram te annad yajātām (6, 58, 1);

Apas'yan gopām antipadyamānam (10, 177, 3).

All these verses (if counted) amount to twenty-one. This (sacrificial) man is twenty-one fold; for he has ten fingers on his hands and ten on his feet, and the soul is reckoned as the twenty-first. He (thus) prepares the soul as the twenty-first (part).

<sup>5</sup> That is to say of the three mantras mentioned, always that one which immediately follows them in the Saṁhitā, is to be repeated along with them. For instance, of 10, 177, 1, (patangam ahtaṁ, &c.) is the 2nd verse to be also repeated.

<sup>6</sup> Ekapātṅyāḥ. An ekapātṅī is such a mantra which is taken single, and not followed by any other verse which comes immediately after it in the Saṁhitā. The term is here used to mark a distinction between: dve, i. e. two verses, and pañcha, i. e. five verses, which follow one another in the Saṁhitā.

(Now follow) nine Pâvamâni-verses (dedicated to the purification of the Soma juice) beginning with, vakçe drapsasya dhamatah (9, 73, 1). There are nine vital airs. By repeating these (verses) the Hotar puts the vital airs in him (the Pravargya man). (Now he repeats) ayam renas' chodayat ? (10, 123, 1). When repeating this mantra, the Hotar points, when pronouncing the word ayam, i. e. this, to the navel. "This" (the navel) is meant by renas; for some vital airs are circulating (renanti) above the navel, others below it. On account of this vital air (the life) taking its origin from the navel, renas (circulation, from ren to circulate) means "navel." By repeating this mantra the Hotar puts life in this (Pravargya man).

(Now he repeats the verses), pavitram te ritatam (9, 83, 1), tapash pavitram ritatam (9, 83, 2), and, īyat pavitram dhishunâ atanvata. On account of their containing the word "pavitram" (pure), the vital airs are purified (when these mantras are recited over them). These are the vital airs of the lower part of the body presiding over the semen, urine, and excrements. (By repeating these three verses) he puts these vital airs in this (Pravargya man.)

21

(He now repeats) a hymn, addressed to Brahmanaspati.<sup>8</sup> Gaṇānām tîā gaṇapatim havâmahe (2, 3.) Brahma is Bṛihaspati; by means of Brahma he thus cures him (the sacrificial man, who had been torn to pieces). The verses beginning with prathas' cha yasya saprathas'cha nâna (10, 181, 1-3) are the three Gharmanam<sup>9</sup> mantras ; by repeating them the Hotar provides the Pravargya man with a body and a form. (For in the fourth pada of the first of these verses), there is said : "Vasishtha brought the Rathantara Sâma," and (in the last half verse of the second Gharman-tanu mantra is said), "Bharadvâja made the Brihat Sâma out of Agni."<sup>10</sup> By repeating these mantras the Hotar provides the Pravargya man with the Rathantara and Brihat-Sâman (required for its prosperity).

(By repeating) three verses (of the hymn) apas'ya tvâ manasâ chekitânām (10, 183, 1), the Rishi of which is Prajâvân, the son of Prajâpati (the Lord of creatures), he provides him with offspring.<sup>11</sup>

(Now the Hotar repeats) nine verses in different metres, commencing with kû râdhut dhotrâ (1, 120 1-9).

(These different metres represent the difference in magnitude and expansion of the extremities of the belly of the sacrificial man). For the extremities of the (mystical) sacrificial body (to be restored by means of the Pravargya ceremony) vary as to magnitude and largeness ; some are rather thin, others are rather big.

Thence are verses of various metres required (for the verses represent the extremities of the body). By means of these verses (the Rishi) Kakshivâ <sup>9</sup> This means, those mantras the recital of which is calculated to give the new body which is to be made in the Pravargya verse (the Gharman) the proper shape.

ent to the beloved residence of the As'vins. He conquered the highest heaven. He who has this knowledge goes up to the beloved house of the As'vins, and conquers the highest heaven.

(Now he repeats) the hymn : Abhātī agnir ushasām (2, 76.) The words : pīpīrāṁsam as'vinā gharman dha (the fourth pada of the first verse of the hymn mentioned) are appropriate<sup>12</sup> to the ceremony. What is appropriate at the sacrifice that is successful. This hymn is in the Trishṭubh metre, for Trishṭubh is strength ; by this means he puts strength in this (Pravargya man).

He repeats the hymn : grāṇera tad id artham rethe (2, 39). In this hymn there being expressions like, akshi ira "as two eyes" (2, 39, 5), śrūv ira "as two ears," nāsa ira "as a nose" (2, 39, 6), he puts in this way, by enumerating the limbs of the body, the senses in this (Pravargya man) his hymn is in the Trishṭubh metre ; for Trishṭubh is strength. In this way he puts strength in us (Pravargya man).

He repeats the hymn : īḷe dyāvāprithivī (1, 112). The words in the second pada : gharman suucham are appropriate.<sup>13</sup> This hymn is in the Jagatī metre ; little is of the same (Jagatī) nature. Thus he provides this (Pravargya man) with cattle. By the words : " what assistance you (As'vinā) have rendered rich and such one" (which occur in every verse of the hymn mentioned), he provides this (Pravargya man) with all those wishes (and their fulfilment) which the As'vins in this hymn are said to have deemed proper to fulfil.

In repeating this hymn the priest thus makes t (Pravargya man) thrive by means of those desi (including their satisfaction).

He repeats the rūchitaratī, i. e. the verse wh characteristic the word “ruch,” to shine, is : arūrucl ushasah prīnir (9, 83, 3). In this way he provic this (Pravargya man) with splendour.

With the verse, dyubhir aktubhiḥ paripātām 112, 25), he concludes (the ceremony). (In repe ing this verse, the words of which) arishṭebhir prith uta dyāuh (contain a prayer for prosperity) he mak thus this Pravargya man thrive, granting him all th is wished for (in the verse mentioned). Now (completed) the first part of the mantra collecti (required at the Pravargya ceremony).

- 1, Upahvaye sudugdhām dhenum (1, 164, 26).
- 2, Himṅhrinvati vasupatnī (1, 164, 27).
- 3, Abhi trā dra Saritah (1, 24, 3).
- 4, Samī vatsann amātribhiḥ (9, 104, 2).
- 5, Samvatsa iva māttribhiḥ (9, 105, 2).
- 6, Yaste stanah śas'ayo (1, 164, 49).
- 7, Gaur amimed amvatsam (1, 164, 28).
- 8, Namasat upasīdatam (9, 11, 6).
- 9, Samjanānū upasīdan (1, 72, 5).
- 10, A das'abhir (8, 61, 8).
- 11, Duhanti saptaikān (8, 61, 7).
- 12, Samiddho Agnir As'vinā (As'val. 4, 7).

<sup>13</sup> During the recital of the first part of the Pravargya mantra the vessel had been made only hot; now milk, butter, &c. is to be poured into it. A cow is brought to the spot, which is to be milked by the Adhvaryu. To this ceremony the first mantra of the second part, “ I call the cow yielding good milk,” refers.

- 13, Samiddho Agnir vṛishayā (As'val. 4, 7).
- 14, Tad u prayukshatamam (1, 62, 6).
- 15, Atmanvan nabho duhyate (9, 74, 4).
- 16, Uttishtha Brahmanaspate (1, 40, 1).
- 17, Adhukshat pipyushim ishām (8, 61, 16).
- 18, Upadrava payasā, (As'val. 4, 7).
- 19, A sute simhata s'riyam (8, 61, 13).
- 20, Aninam as'vinor (8, 9, 7).
- 21, Sam u tye mahatir apah (8, 7, 22).

These twenty-one verses are appropriate. What appropriate at a sacrifice; that is successful.

The Hotar when standing behind (the others)<sup>14</sup> repeats ud u shya devah Savitā hiraṇyayā (6, 71, 1). When going forward, he repeats, praitu Brahmanapati (1, 40, 3.) When looking at the Khara (the orthen ring, in which the Pravargya vessel is placed), he repeats: Gandharra itthā (9, 83, 4). When repeating nīke suparṇam upa yat (9, 85, 11), he takes his seat. By the two mantras, tupto vām gharṇo dshati svahotā (Atharv. 7, 73, 5. As'v. 4, 7), and dhā pibatam (1, 46, 15) the Hotar sacrifices to the forenoon (the deity of the forenoon). After the formula: Agni eat! he pronounces Vaushat! which is in lieu of the Svishṭakrit.

By the mantras, yad usriyāsu svāhutam (Atharv. 73, 4. As'v. 4, 7.), and, asya pibatam As'vinā (5, 14), he sacrifices for the afternoon. After the formula, Agni eat! he pronounces Vatshat! which is in lieu of the Svishṭakrit. They take, for making ashtakrit, parts of three offerings, viz. Soma juice contained in the stalks, the things thrown in the pravargya vessel (milk, butter, etc.), and hot wheys. When the Hotar (after having repeated the two mantras, above mentioned, along with the formula,

Agni eat ! ) pronounces the formula Vaushat ! then thus the omission of "Agni Svishṭakrit" is replaced.<sup>15</sup>

The Brahma priest mutters (makes japa), āsā dakṣhiṇāsāt (As'v. 4, 7.)

(After the offering has been given to the fire) the Hotar repeats the following (seven) verses: svāhākri-taḥ s'uchir dereshu (Atharv. 7, 73, 3. As'v 4, 7.); samudbrād ūrim udiyarti veno (10, 123, 2); drapsah samudram abhi (10, 123, 8); sakhe sakhāyam (4, 1, 3). īrdhra ū shu na (1, 36, 13); īrdhro naḥ pāhi (1, 36, 14); taṁ ghem itthā (8, 58, 17). These verses are appropriate. What is appropriate at the sacrifice, that is successful.

By the mantra, pāraha s'oche tava (3, 2, 6), the Hotar wants to eat. When eating it, he says: "let us eat the (remainder of the) offering which has been offered, of the sweet offering which has been thrown into the most brightly blazing (indrataṁa) fire ! (Let us eat) of thee, O divine gharma (the contents of the Pravargya vessel) which art full of honey, full of sap, full of food, and quite hot (angirasvat<sup>16</sup>). Praise to thee (O gharma ! ) ; do me no harm !"

When the Pravargya vessel is put down then the Hotar repeats these two mantras, s'yeno na yonim sadanam (9, 71, 6), and āyasmīn sapta Vāsavaḥ (As'val. 4, 7). In whatever (part of the) day, (forenoon or afternoon), they are about to take off (the Pravargya vessel from its place), he repeats the mantra, haviḥ havishmo mahi (9, 83, 5). With the verse, sāyarasāt bhagavati (1, 164, 40), he concludes (the ceremony).

<sup>16</sup> The word certainly has here no reference to the Angiras, the celebrated Rishis. One of the characteristics of the Gharma food is that it is very hot. This is expressed here. Angiras had no doubt originally the same meaning as angāra.

The Gharma (ceremony) represents the cohabitation of the gods. The Gharma vessel is the penis; the two handles (placed underneath, to lift it) are the two testicles, the Upayamani <sup>17</sup> the thighs. The milk (in the vessel) is the seed. This seed (in the shape of milk) is poured in Agni as the womb of the gods for production. For Agni is the womb of the gods.

He who knowing this, sacrifices according to this rite (yajñakratu), is born (anew) from the womb of Agni and the offerings, and participates in the nature of the Rik, Yajus, and Sâman, the Veda <sup>18</sup> (sacred knowledge), the Brahma (sacred element), and immortality, and is absorbed in the deity.

(Upasat.) .

The Devas and Asuras were fighting in these worlds. The Asuras made these worlds fortified castles, just as the strongest and most powerful (kings do). Thus they made the earth an iron castle, the air silver, the sky a golden castle. Thus they made these worlds castles. The Devas said, these Asuras have made these worlds castles; let us thus make other worlds in opposition to these castles. They made out of the earth in opposition (to the iron castle of the Asuras) a sitting room <sup>19</sup> (sadas), out of the air a fire-place, (âgnîdhriya), and out of the sky two repositories for food (haviṛdhâna). Such they made these worlds in opposition to the castles (into which the three worlds had been transformed by the Asuras). The gods said, Let us perform the burnt offerings called Upasads <sup>20</sup> (i. e. besieging). For by means of an upasad, i. e. besieging, they conquer a large (fortified) town. Thus they did. When they performed the first Upasad, they drove by it them (the Asuras) out from this world (the earth). By the performance of the second, they drove them out of the air, and by the performance of the third, out of the sky. Thus they were driven out of these worlds. The Asuras driven out of these (three) worlds, repaired to the Ritus (seasons). The gods said, Let us perform the Upasads. Thus they did.

<sup>18</sup> Sayana here understands by Veda the Atharvaveda, or all the Vedas collectively. Brahma is according to him Hiranyagarbha (the universal soul), and amrita the supreme soul. But it is very doubtful whether these interpretations are right. By "Veda" certainly the Atharva Veda cannot be meant; for it was not recognized as a sacred book at the time of the composition of the Brâhmanas.

These Upasads being three, they performed each twice; (thus) they became six. There are six Ritus (seasons); thus they drove them (the Asuras) out of the Ritus. The Asuras driven out of the Ritus, repaired to the months. The Devas said, Let us perform the Upasads. Thus they did. The Upasads being six, Let us perform each twice, that make twelve. There are twelve months. They drove them out of the months. The Asuras driven out of the months repaired to the half months. The Devas said, Let us perform the Upasads. Thus they did. The Upasads being twelve, they performed each twice: that makes twenty-four. There are twenty-four half months. They turned them (the Asuras) out of the half months. The Asuras, turned out of appropriated for the performance of the Ishtis. The latter place called Prâchîna raṁś'a. This sadas is the sitting room for the king Soma after his removal from the Prâchîna raṁś'a.

<sup>20</sup> There is throughout this chapter a pun between the two meanings of upasad "siege" and a certain ceremony observable.

the half months, repaired to Day and Night (ahorâtra). The Devas said, Let us perform the Upasads. Thus they did. By means of the Upasad which they performed for the first part of the day, they turned them out of day, and by means of that which they performed for the second part of the day, they turned them out of night. Thus they disappeared from both, day and night. Thence the first Upasad is so performed during the first part of the day, and the second, during the second part. By doing so the sacrificer leaves only so much space to his enemy (as there is between the junction of day and night.)

24

The Upasads are the goddesses of victory (jîtagâhî). By means of them the gods gained a complete victory destroying all their enemies. He who has such a knowledge gains a victory destroying all his enemies. All the victories which the gods gained in these (three) worlds, or in the Ritus (seasons), or in the months, or the half months, or in day and night, will he (also) gain who has such a knowledge.

The Tâṇinaptram <sup>21</sup> ceremony, or solemn oath taken by the priests).

The Devas were afraid, surmising the Asuras might become aware of their being disunited, and seize their reign. They marched out in several divisions and deliberated. Agni marched out with the Vasus and deliberated. Indra did so with the Rudras. Varuna with the Adityas; and Brihaspati with the Visve Devas. Thus all, having severally marched out, deliberated. They said, "Well, let us put these our dearest bodies <sup>22</sup> in the house of Varuna the king, (i. e., water); he among us who should out of greediness transgress (oath, not to do any thing which might injure the sacrificer), he shall no more be joined with them." <sup>23</sup> in it. He then takes a vessel (Kaṇśā, a goblet) into which, after having placed it on the Veda, he puts by means of a Sura the melted butter contained in the Dhruvā. He puts five times the Sura in the Dhruvā and each time after a piece of melted butter having been taken out, a Yajus (sacrificial formula) is repeated, viz. āpatam tvī grīhvīmī, pāpatayam tvā grīhvīmī, tīvānaptam tvā grīhvāmī, sākvarīyam tvā grīhvīmī; sakmann oṣishbhāyam tvā grīhvīmī (so Black Yajurveda 1, 2, 10, 2; Vajasaneyi-Saṁh. 5, 5, where grīhvāmī and tvī are only put once). All priests with the sacrificer now touch the vessel (Kaṇśā) in which the āya or melted butter thus taken out of the Dhruvā had been put. They may touch however the āya (melted butter) by means of a stalk of Kus'a grass. When touching the butter, they all repeat the formula: anvīdhrishṭam aśi, &c. (Bl. Y. 1, 2, 10, 2.) "thou art inviolable." All the seven Hotars then put their hands in the madanti, a copper vessel, which is filled with water. This latter ceremony, only performed by the Hotars, is regarded as the symbolical deposition of the priests' own bodies in the "house of Varuna," which is only a poetical expression for the copper vessel filled with water.

As to the name tīvānaptam one is induced to refer it to taivānapāt, a name of Agni, by which he is invoked in the Prayajit and which occurs along with others at this very ceremony. But I doubt whether the name taivānaptam has here anything to do with Agni taivānapāt. The latter word means only, one's own self, or one's own relative. By taking this solemn oath the sacrificer and the officiating priests come as it were into the closest contact with one another, bound by ties as strong as family ties. The term, therefore, means only: contracting of the closest relationship, brotherhood.

<sup>23</sup> This is the formula of the oath, which is very ancient in language, as the forms: Saṁgachovā, 3rd pers. sing., conjunct, middle voice, and, bharishād, conjunct, of the aorist, clearly prove.

They put their bodies in the house of Varuṇa. This putting of their bodies in the house of Varuṇa, the king, became their Tānūnaptram (joining of bodies). Thence they say : none of those joined together by the tānūnaptram ceremony is to be injured. Thence the Asuras could not conquer their (the gods,) empire (for they all had been made inviolable by this ceremony).

25

The Atithya-ishṭi is the very head of the sacrifice (the sacrificial personage); the Upasads are his neck. The two stalks of Kusā grass (held by the Hotar) are of the same length ; for head and neck are equal.

The gods made the Upasads as an arrow (the upasad ceremony served them as an arrow); Agni was its haft, Soma its steel, Vishnu its point, and Varuṇa its feathers. The gods holding this arrow represented by the Ajya (at the Upasad ceremony) discharged it, and breaking with it the castles of the Asuras, entered them. For these (deities, Agni and so on) are in the Ajya offering. At first he (the sacrificer) undergoes the religious ceremony of drinking (milk) coming from four nipples (of the cow),<sup>24</sup> for the arrow in the Upasads consists of four parts, viz. shaft, steel, point, and feathers. He (subsequently) undergoes the religious ceremony of drinking what comes from three nipples. For the arrow in the Upasads consists of three parts, viz. shaft, steel, and point. He undergoes the religious ceremony of drinking what comes from two nipples. For the arrow in the Upasads consists of two parts, viz. shaft and point. He undergoes the religious ceremony of drinking what comes from one nipple (alone). For in the Upasads there is only "one" arrow mentioned (as a unit). By means of one alone (i. e. by co-operation of all its parts) effect is produced. The worlds which are above are extended<sup>25</sup> and those which were below, contracted. The priest (in performing this ceremony) commences by that number of nipples (four) which represents the larger worlds, and proceeds to those which represent the smaller ones.<sup>26</sup> (That is done) for conquering these worlds.

(Now the Sâmidhêni verses for the forenoon and afternoon Upasad ceremonies are mentioned).<sup>27</sup>

Upasadyâya mîlhushe (7, 15, 1-3), Imâm me Agne samidham (2, 6, 1-3). Three Sâmidhêni verses are to be repeated each time (the first set in the forenoon and the second in the afternoon). They are complete in form. When the form is complete, and the verse which is recited alludes to the ceremony which is being performed, then the sacrifice is successful. For Anuvâkyâs and Yâjnyâs, Jaghniyati verses (such verses, as contain derivatives of the root han to kill) ought to be used. These are: agnir vritrâni jaughanat (6, 16, 34); ya agra iva s'aryaha (6, 16, 39); tvam somâsi satpatih (1, 91, 5); gayas-phâno amiraha (1, 91, 12.); idam Vishnuvichakrame (1, 22, 17.); trîni padâ vichakrame (1, 22, 8).<sup>28</sup> (This is the order for the forenoon ceremony) For the afternoon ceremony he inverts the order of these verses (so as to make the Yâjya of

<sup>26</sup> That is to say, he milks on the first day four nipples, on the second three, and on the third two and one.

the forenoon Anuvākya in the afternoon, and vice versa). By means of these Upasads the Devas defeated (the Asuras), and breaking down their castles, entered them.

In performing the Upasad ceremony he should use verses in the same metre (for all the Ahutis), not such ones as are in different metres. When the Hotar uses different metres, then he produces the king's evil on the necks (of the sacrificers). Thus the Hotar has it in his power to produce diseases. Thence the mantras (for the chief deities at the Upasād ishṭi) should be always of the same metre, not of different metres.

Upārih, the son of Janaśrutā, gave once (when asked) about a Brāhman who performed the Upasads, 'whence the face of an ugly looking S'rotriya (sacrificial priest) is to be accounted for,' the answer, that the Upasad offerings of melted butter are put as a lace over the throat (so as to make it unusually big).

The Prayâjas as well as the Anuyâjas are the armour of the gods. (The Upasad ishṭi) is to be performed without both, in order to sharpen the sword for preventing it from recoiling.

The Hotar repeats the mantras (at this occasion) only after having overstepped (the boundary between the Vedi and Ahavaniya fire on all sides, <sup>29</sup>) in order to supervene the sacrifice, and prevent it from going.

<sup>29</sup> In most ceremonies he over-steps this boundary only towards the south. But at the Upasad ceremony it is done on all sides.

They (the divines) say: it is, as it were, a cruel act, when they perform the ceremony of (touching) the melted butter (the Tânuṇaptram) near the king Soma.<sup>30</sup> The reason is, that Indra, using melted butter as his thunderbolt, killed Vṛitra. (In order to compensate the king Soma for any injury he might have received from the performance of the Tânuṇaptram ceremony in his presence) they sprinkle the king (Soma) with water (whilst the following mantra is repeated): aṁś'ur aṁś'ush te deva Soma (Taitt. 1, 2, 11, 2). When they perform this ceremony near him (Soma), which is, as it were, a cruel treatment of him, then they (subsequently) make him (Soma) by this (sprinkling of water) la (when lying) on her (the Vēdi), and make him grow.

The king Soma is the fruit of heaven and earth. When repeating the words: eshṭa rūyah,<sup>31</sup> &c., they (the Hotri priests) throw the two bundles of kus'a grass (held in their hands, in the southern corner of the Vēdi), and put their right hands over their left ones<sup>32</sup> (to cover the kus'a grass). By making a bow to "heaven and earth" (which are represented by those two bundles of kus'a grass) they make them both grow.

<sup>30</sup> The vessel, containing the Ajya which is to be touched by all the priests and the sacrificer, in order to bind them together by a solemn oath, is placed over the Soma plant which is lying on the Vēdi. To put anything on the king Soma, is regarded as a cruel treatment which is to be atoned for. Soma is to be pacified by sprinkling with water, which ceremony is called āpyāyanaṁ—Soma prayoga.

<sup>32</sup> The term used is: prastare nihnavate, literally he conceals the two bundles of kus'a grass. The concealment is done in the manner expressed in the translation: I myself have witnessed it.

FIFTH CHAPTER.

The ceremonies of carrying the fire, Soma, and the offerings from their places in the Prâchîna-raṁsa to the Uttarâ Vedi.)

27.

The king Soma lived among the Gandharvas. The Gods and Rishis deliberated, as to how the king might be induced to return to them. Vâch (the goddess of speech) said, the Gandharvas lust after women. I (therefore) shall transform myself into a woman, and then you sell me to them (in exchange for Soma).<sup>1</sup> The gods answered, No! how may we live without thee? She said, sell me unto them; if you should want me, I shall return to you. Thus they did. In the disguise of a big naked woman she was sold (by the gods to the Gandharvas) in exchange for Soma. In imitation (of this precedent) they drive away an immaculate cow of one year's age, being the price<sup>2</sup> at which they purchase the king Soma. She (this cow) may, however, be rebought<sup>3</sup>; for Vâch (whom this cow, for which the Soma is bought, represents) returned to the gods. Thence the mantras (after Soma has been bought) are to be repeated with a low voice. After Soma has been bought, Vâch is with the Gandharvas; but she returns as soon as the ceremony of the Agniprayana is performed.

28.

(The Agni-pranayana, i. e. ceremony of carrying the sacrificial fire to the altar destined for the animal and Soma sacrifices.)

The Adhvaryu orders (the Hotar), when the sacrificial fire is to be carried (to the Uttarâ Veda) to repeat mantras appropriate (to the ceremony).

(He repeats :) pra dexam deryâ (10, 176, 2). If the sacrificer be a Brahman, he ought to repeat a verse in the Gâyatri metre; for the Brahman belongs to the Gâyatri metre (has its nature). The Gâyatri is beauty and acquisition of sacred knowledge. (This metre) makes him (the sacrificer) thus prosper by means of the beauty and sacred knowledge (which is contained in it).

If the sacrificer be a Kshattriya, he should repeat a Trishtubh, viz.:—imam mahe vidathyâya (3, 54, 1). For the Kshattriya belongs to the Trishtubh (has its nature). Trishtubh is strength, sharpness of senses and power. By repeating thus a Trishtubh the Hotar makes him (the sacrificer of the Kshattriya caste) prosper through the strength, sharpness of sense and power (contained in the Trishtubh). By the words of the second pada of the verse mentioned): sas'rathritra idyâya prajabhrur, i. e. "they brought to him who is to be praised always (Agni)," the Hotar brings the sacrificer at the head of his (the sacrificer's) family. By the second half verse s'rinotu no danyebhir, &c., i. e. may Agni hear us with the hosts (the flames) posted in his house; ma he, the imperishable, hear (us) with his hosts || heaven! (the Hotar effects that). Agni shines in the house of the sacrificer till the end of his life (i. e. he is always protected by him).

If the sacrificer be a Vais'ya, the Hotar should repeat a verse in the Jagati metre, viz.:—ayam iha pratham

4, 7, 1). For the Vais'ya belongs to the Jagatī : cattle of the same (Jagatī) nature. Thus he makes him prosper by means of cattle (provides him with it). In its fourth pada vaneshu, &c., the word vis'e Vais'ya) is mentioned. This is appropriate. What is appropriate, that is successful in the sacrifice.

When repeating the verse : ayam u shya pra deva- pur (10, 176, 3), which is in the Anushtubh metre, the Hotar sends forth speech, (i. e. he repeats for the first time, this mantra, with a loud voice again, after having only inaudibly muttered some of the preceding ones). For the Anushtubh metre is speech. By repeating (an Anushtubh) he thus sends forth speech in speech. By the words ayam u shya he expresses the following sentence : I who formerly was living among the Ghandarvas have come. <sup>4</sup>

By the verse : ayam agniṃ urusṛjati, &c. (10, 176, 4) i. e. "this Agni makes (us) fearless by dint of his immortal nature, as it were," the Hotar provides him (the sacrificer) with immortality. (The second half of this verse), sahasas'chit sahiyān deva jñātage latali, i. e. "the god has been made very powerful by means of (his own) power, in order to preserve

<sup>4</sup> The author of the Brāhmanam tries to find in the words ayam u shya of the mantra in question an allusion to the table reported in 1, 2*, on the Vāch's (speech) residence among the Ghandarvas. But this interpretation is wholly ungrammatical and childish. Ayam, the masculine of the demonstrative pronoun, is here, as Sayana explains, according to the Brāhmanam, taken as a feminine in order to make it refer to Vāch, which word is feminine. The impossibility of such an explanation will be apparent to every reader. The verse in question refers to the ceremony of the Agni-pranayanam, the carrying of the fire from the Ahavaniya fire to the Uttarā Veda; but its subject is Agni, and not Vāch. I translate it as follows : "This very Hotar (i. e. Agni, whom the Hotar represents) desirous of worshipping the gods, is carried (thither, to the Uttarā Veda) for the performance of the sacrifice (animal and Soma offering). He (when being carried) appears by himself as a fiery chariot (the sun) surrounded (by a large retinue of priests and sacrificers)."

(our) lives" signifies, that he (Agni) is the god who, by (our) repeating this verse, is made the preserver of (our) lives.

(The Hotar now repeats :) ilâyâs tvâ pade vāyam, &c. (3, 29, 4), i. e. "we put thee, O Jâtavedas! (Agni) in the place of Ilâ, in the centre (nâbhi of the Uttarâ Vedi)<sup>5</sup> on the earth to carry up (our) offerings." By nâbhi (lit. navel) the nâbhi of the Uttarâ Vedi is meant. Nidhimahi (lit. we put down) means "they are about to put him (Agni) down." The term "haryâya vâllave" means: he is about to carry up the sacrifice.

(The Hotar repeats :) Agne vis'vebhih svanika (6, 15, 16). "O Agni, with thy well-armed host (the flames), take first with all the gods thy seat in the hole which is stuffed with wool; carry well the sacrificial offering, seasoned with melted butter, and deposited in thee as in a nest, for the sacrificer who is producing (the mystical sacrificial man) anew." (When repeating the first and second padas) agne vis'vebhih, he makes him (Agni) with all the gods sit. (When repeating the third pada: kulâyinam ghretavāntam, &c.) a bird's nest, as it were, consisting of sticks of fir-tree wood, an odoriferous gum (guggul), a braid of hair (âhâstukâh), and a kind of fragrant grass,<sup>6</sup> is prepared (for Agni) at the sacrifice.

(When repeating the fourth pada:) yajnam naya, &c. he thus places the sacrifice (the sacrificial personage) straight on him (Agni).

<sup>6</sup> The articles here mentioned, are put in the Nâbhi, or hole in the Uttarâ Vedi. They are regarded as forming the nest of Agni. As living in this nest like a bird, he is called kulâyi.

(The Hotar repeats): sída hotaḥ sva u loke, &c. (3, 29, 8), i. e. "sit, O Hotar! (Agni) in thy own place (the Nábhi) being conspicuous; make sit the sacrifice in the hole of the well made (nest). Mayst thou, Agni, who art going to the gods with the offering, repeat sacrificial verses addressed to the gods." Mayst thou grant the sacrificer a life with abundance.

By "Hotar" Agni is to be understood; for he is the Hotar of the gods. "His own place" (sva u loke) is the Nábhi of the Uttarâ Vēdi. By the words: make sit, &c. the Hotar asks a blessing for the sacrificer; for the "yajna" (sacrifice, mentioned in this verse) is the sacrificer. When repeating the second half of this verse: ilerârir, &c. the Hotar provides the sacrificer with life; for "rayas" (mentioned in this verse) is life.

(The Hotar repeats:) nī hotā hotrishadāne (2, 9, 1), i. e. "the Hotar of great knowledge and skill, who is brightly shining, sat down on the Hotri-seat (place for the Hotar), Agni, who deeply comprehends the inviolable laws (of the sacrificial art), he, the most splendid (vasishṭhaḥ) who bears a thousand burdens (i. e. preserver of all) and has a flaming tongue." By Hotar is Agni to be understood; hotrishadānam is the nábhi of the uttarâ vēdi. By "he sat down" is expressed, that he was put there. The term "vasishṭha" means, that Agni is the most shining (vasu) among the gods. The term "sahasrañbhara" means, that they, though he (Agni) be only one, multiply him, by using him at different occasions. He who has this knowledge, has a thousand-fold profit.

The Hotar concludes with the verse: tvam dūtas tray u nah (2, 9, 2), i. e. "thou art our messenger, our

“protector behind (us) ; thou the bringer of wealth, O strong one ! O Agni ! do not neglect the bodies (members) in the spread of our families. The herdsman with his light was awake.” Agni is the herdsman (gopā) of the gods. He who knowing this, concludes (the ceremony of Agni-pranayanam) with this verse (mentioned) has Agni everywhere round him as herdsman (watchman) for himself and the sacrificer, and secures thus welfare for the whole year.

He recites these eight verses (just enumerated), which are complete in form. What is complete in form, that is, when the mantra recited alludes to the ceremony which is being performed, that is successful in the sacrifice. Of these eight verses he repeats the first and last thrice ; that makes twelve. Twelve months make a year ; the year is Prajāpati. He who has such a knowledge prospers through these verses which reside in Prajāpati.

By repeating the first and last verses thrice, he ties the two ends of the sacrifice in order to give it a hold, and tighten it to prevent it from falling down.

29.

(The carrying of the repositories <sup>8</sup> of sacred food to the Uttará Vēdi).

The Adhvaryu calls (upon the Hotar) : repeat the mantras appropriate to the two repositories with sacred food (havirdhāna) being carried (to the Uttará Vēdi).

He repeats ṣṇje <sup>9</sup> vām brahma, &c. (10, 13, 1), “the Brahma is joined to the praises of you both.”

<sup>8</sup> The two Havirdhānas, are two carts, on which the Soma, and the other offerings are put, and covered with a cover (chhadīh), for carrying all things from the Prāchīna-vamśa to the Uttará Vēdi. The cover consists of grass. See Black Yajurveda, ed. Cowell i. p. 428.

<sup>9</sup> It is to be taken as third person of the Ātmanepādan, not as a first one.

For the two Havirdhânas, which are gods, were united with the Brahma. By reciting this verse he unites both these (Havirdhânas) with the Brahma, and having this latter (Brahma) power, he does not suffer any harm.

He repeats the triplet: pretâm yajnasya s'am̐bhava 2, 41, 19-21), which is addressed to Heaven and Earth.

They ask: "why does the Hotar repeat ● triplet addressed to Heaven and Earth, when he is reciting mantras to the two Havirdhânas being removed (to the Uttara Veda)?" (The answer is): Because Heaven and Earth are the two Havirdhânas of the gods. They are always repositories for offerings ●, for every offering is between them (Heaven and Earth).

The verse: yame iva yatamâne yadaitam (10, 13, 2), means: these two Havirdhânas, walk together, like twins, their arms stretched. (The second pada of this verse) ya iâm bhavan mânushâ devayantah means, that men bring both (these Havirdhânas) when worshipping god. (The third and fourth padas:) usadatam u lokam, &c. allude to Soma (by the name Indu). By repeating this (half verse) the priest prepares for the king Soma (a seat) to sit on alluding to usadatam).

(He repeats:) adhi devayor adadhâ ukthyam vachah 1, 83, 3). This ukthyam vachah is as a cover, forming the third piece (in addition to the two Havirdhânas), put over both.<sup>10</sup> For ukthyam vachah is the sacrificial performance. By means of this (ukthyam vachah) he thus makes the sacrifice successful. ●

<sup>10</sup> This is symbolically to be understood. The author calls the expression ukthyam vachah a cover, to which opinion he probably, was led by the frequency of the term: uktham vachah, i. e., "the clustra has been repeated" at the end of the recitations of the Hotri-vests at the Soma libations to denote that they are finished. The Hotar must stop after having recited the first half of the verse: ●

The term yata, i. e. cruel, used in the second pada (yatasrukā, 1, 83, 3) is propitiated in the following third pada by asaṁyata, i. e. appeased, propitiated.<sup>11</sup> By the fourth pada : bhadrā śaktir, &c. he asks for a blessing.

He repeats the Vis'varūpa verse<sup>12</sup> : viśvā rūpāni pratimūḍhate (5, 81, 2). He ought to repeat this verse when looking at the upper part (rarāṭam)<sup>13</sup> of the posts (between which the two Havirdhānas are put); for on this part there every form is hung, white and black, as it were. He who having such a knowledge repeats this verse when adhi dvayor, as is said in the A'sval. Śrauta Sūtras, 4, 9, and indicated in the Sapta-hautra prayoga. The rule in A'sval., which is strictly observed by the Shrotriyas up to this day, runs as follows —

अधि द्वयोरदधा षक्यं वच इति अर्धर्च आरमेद् यवस्ता चंद्र-राटी विश्वरूपाणि प्रतिमुचते यवस्तायां.

i. e. He should stop after having repeated half of the verse adhi dvayor, when the bunch of kus'a grass is not yet hung over the two posts. When this bunch is hung over he recites (the second half of that verse, and) : viśvā rūpāni. The form vyavasta is contraction of vyava-sita (from the root si to tie, bind).

<sup>11</sup> The interpretation which the writer of the Brāhmana gives of this passage, is egregiously wrong. Yata-sruk can only mean "with the sacrificial spoon kept in his hand," asaṁyata (instead of asaṁyata-sruk) then stands in opposition to it, meaning : having laid it aside. The meaning "cruel" is given to yata by Śāyana.

<sup>12</sup> So called from the beginning words : viśvā rūpāni. It refers to the objects of sense becoming manifest again by sunrise. For Savitar the sun, brings forth "all forms."

With the verse: pari tvâ girvato gira (1, 10, 12), he concludes. He should repeat this concluding verse at the time he might think both the Havirdhânas closed by hanging over them the bunch of Darbha<sup>14</sup> (between the two posts). He who knowing this concludes with this verse, when the two Havirdhânas are thus closed, secures for himself and the sacrificer five women who are not naked (covered with clothes, jewels, &c).

Both are closed with a Yajusmantra.<sup>15</sup> Thus the Adhvaryus do it with the said Yajus. When the Adhvaryu and Pratiprasthâtar on both sides (of the Havirdhânas) drive in the two stakes (methu) then he should conclude. For at that time the two Havirdhânas are closed.

These eight verses which he has repeated are complete in form. What is complete in form, that is, when the verse recited alludes to the ceremony which is being performed, that is successful in the sacrifice. Of these, he repeats the first and last thrice, that makes twelve. For the year has twelve months. Prajâpati is the year. He who has such knowledge thus prospers through these verses which reside in Prajâpati.

By repeating the first and last thrice he ties the two ends (knots) of the sacrifice for giving it a hold, and tighten it to prevent it from falling down.

When Agni and Soma are brought, the Adhvaryu calls upon (the Hotar) to repeat appropriate mantras.

He (first) repeats a verse addressed to Savitar sāvīr hīdeva prathamāya (Asv. S'r. S. 4, 10. Atharv. 7, 14, 3.) They ask: why does he repeat a verse addressed to Savitar, when Agni and Soma are brought? (The answer is:) Savitar rules over generation. Under the recital of this verse, they (the priests) carry both (Agni and Soma) as being produced by Savitar. Therefore he repeats a verse addressed to Savitar.

He repeats a verse addressed to Brahmanaspati praitu Brahmanaspatiḥ (1, 40, 3). They ask: why does he repeat a verse addressed to Brahmanaspati when Agni and Soma are brought? (The answer is:) Bṛihaspati (the same as Brahmanaspati) is Brahma. By repeating this verse, he makes Brahma the leader (purogava) of both (Agni and Soma), and the sacrificer being provided with the Brahma, does not suffer any injury.

<sup>10</sup> In order to make the removal of Agni-Soma and the Havirdhānas clear it is to be remarked, that first Agni alone is carried to the Uttarā Vēdi. This ceremony is called Agni-pranayanam. Then the two carts, called Havirdhānas, filled with ghee, Soma, and after oblations are drawn by the priests to the place on the right side of the Uttarā Vēdi. This is the Havirdhāna pravartanam. Then the priests go a third time back to the Prachina-vāṁśa, and bring Agni (fire), and Soma again. Both after having been removed from the Prachina-vāṁśa, are put down at the gate, facing their former place. The fire is to be put in the Agnidhriya hearth, in the place of the Uttarā Vēdi (on the left side), and the Soma in the place called Sadas near the Agnidhriya hearth. This ceremony is called Agni-soma-pranayanam.

By repeating the second half verse (of praitu Brahmanaspati) pra deva etu suvritā, he provides the sacrifice with a good omen. Thence he repeats a verse addressed to Brahmanaspati.

He repeats a triplet in the Gâyatrî metre, which is addressed to Agni : hotā dero amartya (3, 27, 7).

When the King Soma had been carried once to the place of the Uttarâ Vedit, then the Asuras and Demons sought to kill the king between the place called Sadas and the two Havirdhânas. Agni saved him by assuming an illusory form (mâyâ) as is said in the words of the mantra (just quoted) : maśtāt etā māyayā, i. e. he walks before him by assuming an illusory form. In this way Agni saved Soma. Therefore they hold before him (Soma) fire.

He repeats the triplet : upa trā agne dive (1, 7, 9, 11), and the single verse : upa priyam (9, 17, 29). For these two Agnis,<sup>17</sup> that one which has been taken first, and the other which was brought afterwards,<sup>18</sup> have the power of injuring the sacrificer, when they are fighting (with one another as to whom the oblation belongs). By repeating these three verses, and the single one (in addition to them), he thus reconciles them in a friendly way, and puts them (back) in their proper places without any injury being done either to himself or the sacrificer.

When the oblation<sup>19</sup> is given to the fire, he repeats : agne jushasva prati hariṣi (1, 144, 7). By repeating this verse, he gives (this) oblation to Agni as a 'favour' (on account of the term "jushasva" taken favourably contained in it).

<sup>17</sup> The first Agni is that one, which was brought to the Uttarâ Vedit, and put in the Nābhi of it ; the other is that one, which was afterwards taken to the Agnidhrīya hearth.

When the King Soma is carried (to the Sadas) the Hotar repeats the triplet of verses, commencing with somo jigāti gâturid (3, 62, 13-15), which is in the Gâyatri metre, and addressed to Soma. By repeating it, he thus makes prosper Soma by means of his own deity (the verses being addressed to Soma) and his own metre (Gâyatri). The words in the last verse of this triplet: Somah sadastham āsata "Soma sat on the seat," which express that Soma (at the time of the triplet in question being repeated) is just about taking his seat (in the Sadas), are to be repeated by the Hotar after having gone beyond the place of the Agnidhriya hearth, when turning his back to it.

He repeats a verse addressed to Vishnu: tam asya rājā varuṇas (1, 156, 4) i. e. "the King Varuṇa and the As'vins follow the wisdom of the leader of the Maruts (Vishnu); Vishnu is possessed of the highest power, by means of which he, surrounded by his friends, uncovers the stable of darkness (night) to make broad daylight." Vishnu is the doorkeeper of the gods. Thence he opens the door for him (for Soma's admission) when this verse is being repeated.

He repeats antaś'cha prāgū aditir (8, 48, 2), when Soma is about to be put in the Sadas. When Soma has taken his seat, the Hotar repeats: śyeno na yoni sadanam (9, 71, 6), i. e. "the god (Soma) takes his golden seat just as the eagle is occupying for his residence a nest wisely constructed; the hymns fly to him, when comfortably seated on the grass spread; like a sacrificial horse he runs to the gods." By "golden seat" the black goat skin (on which Soma is put) is to be understood, which covers that which belongs to the gods (their food). Thence he repeats this mantra.

He concludes with a verse addressed to Varuna: tābhūt dyām asuro (8, 42, 1), i. e. "the living god (Asura) established heaven, he the all-possessing created the plain of the earth; as their supreme ruler he enforces upon all beings those (well-known) laws of Varuna (laws of nature, birth and death, &c)." or Soma is in the power of Varuna as long as he remains tied up (in a cloth), and whilst moving in a cage shut up (by hanging kus'a grass over it). By beating at that (time) this verse, the Hotar makes Soma (Soma) prosper through his own deity, and his metre (Trishṭubh).

If some persons should take their refuge with the Hotar, or should wish for protection from him, the Hotar must conclude with: erā randasva varunam (8, 42, 2). He who, having such a knowledge, concludes with this verse, secures safety for as many persons as he wishes and contemplates. Hence he who knows it, should conclude with this verse.

All the seventeen verses which he has repeated at this occasion are complete in their form. What is complete in form, that is to say, when the mantra which is repeated alludes to the ceremony which is being performed, that is successful in the sacrifice. Of these (17 verses) he repeats thrice the first and last; that makes twenty-one. Prajâpati is twenty-one fold; for he consists of twelve months, five seasons, and these three worlds with that Aditya (sun) as the twenty-first. For he is the highest age (on the sky, occupied by Aditya), he is the father of the gods, he is fortune, he is sovereignty; he is the heaven of the bright one (sun), he is the residence of Prajâpati; he is independent rule. Hence (the Hotar) makes the sacrificer prosperous through these twenty-one verses.

SECOND BOOK.

FIRST CHAPTER.

(The Animal Sacrifice.)

1.

(Erecting of the sacrificial post.)

The Gods went up to the celestial world by means of this sacrifice. They were afraid that Men and Rishis after having seen their sacrifice (by means of which they ascended to heaven) might come after (they had gone), and inquire (whether they could not obtain some sacrificial knowledge). They debared them <sup>1</sup> (from obtaining such a knowledge) by means of the Yûpa, i. e. the sacrificial post. Thence the Yûpa is called so (from yoyûpayan, they debarred). The gods when going up to the celestial world struck the Yûpa in (the earth), turning its point downwards. Thereupon Men and Rishis came to the spot where the gods had performed their sacrifice thinking, that they might obtain some information (about the sacrifice). They found only the Yûpa struck in (the earth) with its point turned downwards. They learnt that the gods had by this means (i. e. by having struck in the earth the Yûpa) precluded the sacrificial secret (from being known). They dug the Yûpa out, and turned its points upwards, where upon they got aware of the sacrifice, and beheld (consequently) the celestial world. That is the reason, that the Yûpa is erected with its point turned upwards, (it is done) in order to get aware of the sacrifice, and to behold the celestial world.

This Yûpa is a weapon. Its point must have eight edges. For a weapon (or iron club) has eight edges. Whenever he strikes with it an enemy or adversary, he kills him. (This weapon serves) to put down him (every one) who is to be put down by him (the sacrificer). The Yûpa is a weapon which stands erected (being ready) to slay an enemy. Hence an enemy (of the sacrificer) who might be present (at the sacrifice) comes off ill after having seen the Yûpa of such or such one.

He who desires heaven, ought to make his Yûpa of Khadira wood. For the gods conquered the celestial world by means of a Yûpa made of Khadira wood. In the same way the sacrificer conquers the celestial world by means of a Yûpa, made of Khadira wood.

He who desires food and wishes to grow fat ought to make his Yûpa of Bilva wood. For the Bilva tree bears fruits every year; it is the symbol of fertility; for it increases (every year) in size from the roots up to the branches, therefore it is a symbol of fatness. He who having such a knowledge makes his Yûpa of Bilva wood makes fat his children and cattle.

As regards the Yûpa made of Bilva wood (it is further to be remarked), that they call "light" vala. He who has such a knowledge becomes a light among his own people, the most distinguished among his own people.

He who desires beauty and sacred knowledge ought to make his Yûpa of Palâśa wood. For the Palâś'a is among the trees beauty and sacred knowledge. He who having such a knowledge makes his Yûpa of Palâś'a wood, becomes beautiful and acquires sacred knowledge.

As regards the Yûpa made of Palâś'a wood (then is further to be remarked), that the Palâś'a is the womb of all trees. Thence they speak on account of the palâś'am (foliage) of the Palâś'a tree, or the palâś'am (foliage) of this or that tree (i. e. they call the foliage of every tree palâś'am). He who has such a knowledge obtains (the gratification of) any desire, he might have regarding all trees (i. e. he obtains from all trees any thing he might wish for).

(The Ceremony of Anointing the Sacrificial Post).

The Adhvaryu says (to the Hotar): "We anoint the sacrificial post (Yûpa); repeat the mantr (required)." The Hotar then repeats the verse: "Am̐ janti trâm adhrare" (3, 8, 1), i. e. "The priests anoint thee, O tree! with celestial honey (butter); provide (us) with wealth if thou standest here erected, or if thou art lying on thy mother (earth)." The "celestial honey" is the melted butter (with which the priest anoints the Yûpa). (The second half verse from "provide us" &c. means: "thou mayest stand or lie,<sup>2</sup> provide us with wealth."

(The Hotar repeats the mantra.) Uchchhrasva, &c. (3, 8, 3), i. e. "be raised, O tree! on the surface of the soil; thou who hast well lain (on the ground), grant splendour to the carrying up of the sacrifice (to heaven).” This (verse) is appropriate to (the occasion of) erecting the Yûpa (for it contains the words : “be raised !”). What is appropriate in the sacrifice, that is sure of success. (The words) “on the surface of the soil” mean the surface of that soil over which they raise the Yûpa. (By the words) “thou hast lain well, grant us,” &c., the Hotar asks for a blessing (from the Yûpa).

(The Hotar repeats:) samiddhasya śrayamâ-gah” (3, 8, 2), i. e. “placed before the (fire) which is kindled (here), thou grantest the Brahma power which is indestructible and provides with abundance in offspring. Stand erected, driving far off our enemies (amati), for our welfare.” By the words : “placed before” &c. he means : placed before it (what is kindled, the fire). By the words : “thou grantest” &c. he asks for a blessing. The wicked enemy (amati) is hunger. By the words : “driving far off,” &c. he frees the sacrifice as well as the sacrificer from hunger. By the words : “stand erected,” &c. he asks for a blessing.

(The Hotar repeats the mantra:) *ûrdhva ū
śho na ūtaye* (1, 36, 13), i. e. “Stand upright for our protection just as the sungod! Being raised, be a giver of food, while we invoke thee in different ways (metres) whilst the anointing priests are carrying on (the sacrifice).” (As to the expression), deva na saratā “just as the sungod,” the (particle) na has with the gods the same meaning as om (yes) with these (men);<sup>3</sup> it means iva, “like as.” By the words :

<sup>3</sup> Sayana refers the demonstrative pronoun eshām to the Vedas. But there is no sufficient proof to show that the three Vedas are limited at in this demonstrative. It stands in opposition to devânām; hence it can only refer to men. The meaning of the explanatory remark, that “na has with the gods the same meaning as om (yes), with men,” is, that na is here no negative particle as is generally the case, but affirmative, excluding negation, just as om, which is used for common affirmation.

"being raised, be a giver of food," he calls him (the Yūpa) a dispenser of food; he is giving them (meat) grain; he dispenses (sanoti) it. The words, "am̐jaraḡhataḥ" (the anointing priests are carrying) mean the metres; for by their means the sacrificers call the different gods: "come to my sacrifice, to my sacrifice. If many, as it were, bring a sacrifice (at the same time) then the gods come only to the sacrifice of him, and which (there is a Hotar), who having such a knowledge repeats this (mantra).

(The Hotar then repeats:) "ūrdhva" naḥ pāhi (1, 36, 14), i. e. "(Standing) upright protect us from distress; with thy beams burn down all carnivorous beings (ghosts). Make us (stand) upright, that we may walk and live! Mayst thou as messenger carry (our offerings) to the gods! The wicked carnivorous beings are the Rakshas. He calls upon him (the Yūpa) to burn the wicked Rakshas down. (In the second half verse) the word charathāya "that he might walk" is equivalent to charanāya "for walking."

(By the word "to live") he rescues the sacrifice even if he should have been already seized, as it were (by death) and restores him to (the enjoyment of) the whole year. (By the words:) "mayst thou carry, &c. he asks for a blessing.

(The Hotar then repeats:) "jāto jāyate sudinatre, &c. (3, 8, 5) i. e. "After having been born, he (the Yūpa) is growing (to serve) in the prime of his life the sacrifice of mortal men. The wise are busy in decorating (him, the Yûpa) with skill. He, as an eloquent messenger of the gods, lifts his voice (that it might be heard by the gods)." He (the Yûpa) is called jâta, i. e. born, because he is born by this (by the recital of the first quarter of this verse). (By the word) vardhamâna, i. e. growing, they make him (the Yûpa) grow in this manner. (By the words :) puvanti (i. e. to clean, decorate), they clean him in this manner. By the words :) "he as an eloquent messenger, &c." he announces the Yûpa (the fact of his existence), to the gods.

* This and the preceding verse properly refer to Agni, and not to the Yūpa, as the contents of both clearly show. They form part of a hymn addressed to Agni. They appear to have been selected for being applied to the Yūpa, only on account of the word "ūrdhva" "erected, upwards," being mentioned in them. The Yūpa when standing upright, required mantras appropriate to its position and these appear to have been the only available ones serving this purpose.

The Hotar then concludes (the ceremony of anointing the sacrificial post) with the verse "yuvâ surâsâh mîritah" (3, 8, 4.), i. e. "the youth<sup>a</sup> decorated with ribands, has arrived; he is finer (than all trees) which ever grew; the wise priests raise him up under control of well-framed thoughts of their mind." The youth decorated with ribands, is the vital air (the cul, which is covered by the limbs of the body<sup>b</sup>). By the words :) "he is finer," &c. he means that (the Yûpa) is becoming finer (more excellent, beautiful) by this (mantra). By the wise priests (Kuris)<sup>c</sup> those who have repeated the hymns are to be understood. Thus by this (mantra) they raise him up.

When the Hotar has repeated these seven verses, which are complete in their form (corresponding to the ceremony for which they are used), the sacrifice is made successful; that is, the form is complete, when the verse recited alludes to the ceremony which is being performed. Of these seven (verses), he recites the first thrice, and the last thrice; that makes eleven. The Trishtubh (metre) name consists of eleven syllables (i. e. each quarter of the verse). Trishtubh is Indra's thunderbolt.<sup>7</sup> He who has such a knowledge prospers through these verses which reside in Indra. By repeating the first and last verses thrice, he ties together both ends of the sacrifice to fasten and tighten them in order to prevent (the sacrifice) from slipping down.

3.

(Speculations on the Yûpa, and the meaning of the sacrificial animal.)

They (the theologians) argue the question : Is the Yûpa to remain standing (before the fire), or is it to be thrown (into the fire) ? (They answer :) For him who desires cattle it may remain standing. (About this the following story is reported). Once upon a time cattle did not stand still to be taken by the gods for food. Having run away, they stood still and turning towards the gods, said repeatedly : Ye shall not obtain us ! No ! no ! Thereupon the gods saw that Yupa-weapon which they erected. Then they frightened the animals, which then returned to them. That is the reason, that up to this day, the (sacrificial) animals are turned towards the Yûpa (i. e. the head being bent towards the sacrificial post to which they are tied). Then they stood still to be taken by the gods for their food. The (sacrificial) animals - him who has such a knowledge, and whose Yûpa stands erected, stand still to be taken by him for his food.

The Yûpa represents Indra's thunderbolt, see 2, 1. That the author is anxiously looking out for a relationship between the Yûpa and anything belonging to Indra. Here he finds it in the circumstance, that, if the repetitions are counted, the number of the mantras required for the ceremony of anointing, raising, and decorating the Yupa, amounts to eleven, which is the principal number of Indra's sacred metre, Trishtubh.

le (the Adhvaryu) should afterwards throw the Yûpa of that sacrificer who desires heaven (into the fire). For the former (sacrificers) actually used to throw the Yûpa (into the fire), after it had been used in tying the sacrificial animal to it. For the sacrificer is the Yûpa, and the bunch * of Darbha grass (mastura) is the sacrificer (also), and Agni is the womb of the gods. By means of the invocation offerings (ihuti) the sacrificer joins the womb of the gods, and will go with a golden body to the celestial world.<sup>9</sup>

The sacrificers who lived after the ancient ones, observed that the szaru<sup>10</sup> being a piece of the Yûpa represents the whole of it). He (who now brings a sacrifice) should, therefore, throw it, at this moment, afterwards (into the fire). In this way any thing obtainable through the throwing of the Yûpa (into the fire), as well as that one obtainable through its remaining standing, is obtained.

At the beginning of the sacrifice the Adhvaryu makes of the load of Darbha or sacred grass which has been brought to the sacrificial place, seven mushlis or bunches, each of which is tied together with black or green grass just as the Baresma (Barson) of the Parsis. The names of these seven bunches are: 1) yajamâna mushli, each bunch kept by the sacrificer himself in his hand as long as the sacrifice lasts. 2) Three bunches form the Parhas, or the covering of the Veda on which the sacrificial vessels are put. These are dispersed and spread all over the Veda. 3) Prastara. This bunch of grass must remain tied is put over the Darbha of the Veda. 4) Paraspara. From this bunch the Adhvaryu takes a handful out for each priest and the sacrificer and his wife, which they then use for their food. 5) Jada. This bunch is made double in its first part, the latter part is cut off and has to remain on the Veda; it is called paravâsana. 6) Te. It is always wandering from one priest to the other, and is given to the sacrificer and his wife. It is handed over to the latter when one of the priests makes her recite a mantra. In our passage the prastara cannot mean the bunch which is put on the Veda, but must be understood by it the yajamâna-mushli.

If the Yûpa represents the sacrificer, then his ascent to heaven is effected by the throwing into the fire of the former.

The man who is initiated (into the sacrificial mysteries) offers himself to all deities. Agni represents all deities, and Soma represents all deities. When he (the sacrificer) offers the animal to Agni-Soma<sup>11</sup> he releases himself (by being represented by the animal) from being offered to all deities.<sup>12</sup>

They say : the animal to be offered to Agni-Soma must be of two colours,<sup>13</sup> because it belongs to two deities. But this (precept) is not to be attended to. A fat animal is to be sacrificed ; because animals are of a fat complexion, and the sacrificer (if compared with them) certainly lean. When the animal is fat, the sacrificer thrives through its marrow.

They say : "do not eat from the animal offered to Agni-Soma." "Who eats from this animal, eats his human flesh ; because the sacrificer releases himself (from being sacrificed) by means of the animal. But this (precept) is not to be attended to.

The animal offered to Agni-Soma is an offering to Vritraghna (Indra). For Indra slew Vritra through Agni-Soma. Both then said to him : "thou hast slain Vritra through us ; let us choose a boon from thee." Choose yourselves, answered he. Thus the take this boon from him. Thus they receive (now and then food) the animal which is sacrificed the day previous to the Soma feast.

This is their everlasting portion chosen by them. Hence one ought to take pieces of it, and eat them.

4.

(The Apri verses.<sup>14</sup>)

The Hotar repeats the Apri verses. These are brightness and sacred knowledge. Through brightness and sacred knowledge the Hotar thus makes alive the sacrificer.

<sup>14</sup> The so-called Apri verses, i. e. verses of invitation, occupy at the most sacrifice the same rank which the prayājas have at the feast. By means of them certain divine beings (who do not get a share in the principal part of the sacrifice) are invited and fed chiefly with butter. The number of these prayājas or praxājas varies according to the Ishtis, of which they are the tutelary part. At the common Ishtis, such as Dars'a-pūrṇima (the sacrifice) (see ASV. Sr. S. 1, 5), at the Chāturmasya-ishti we have ten (ASV. 2, 16), and at the Pasū-ishti (the animal sacrifice) eleven have been used (ASV. 3, 2). The number of the latter may vary from twelve, and even thirteen (See Max. Müller's History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 464). At all Prayājas at the common Ishtis, as at the sacrificial sacrifice, there is a difference in the recitation. Certain Gotras must invoke Tanūnapat, others must invoke instead of this deity Naras'auṣa. This is distinctly expressed in the words तनूवपादग्र आच्यस्य वेत्विहि द्वितीयो (प्रयाजः) मग्ने वसिष्ठश्च नकाचिवध्वस्यराजन्येभ्यो नरासुभ्यो अग्र आच्यस्य विर्ति तृषां. ASV. 1, 5), i. e. the second Prayāja mantra (at the Dars'a-pūrṇima Ishti) is "may Tanūnapat, O Agni, taste of this butter", but a different mantra is used by the Vasisthas, the Atre, Vadhryasyas and individuals belonging to the royal caste. The latter's mantra: May Naras'auṣa O Agni, taste of the melted butter. On the distribution of the ten Apri hymns of the Rigveda according to the Gotras, See Max. Müller's History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 466. It clearly follows from this distribution between the invocation of the two deities Tanūnapat and Naras'auṣa (both representing a particular kind of Agni), that certain Gotras regarded Tanūnapat, others Naras'auṣa as their tutelary

(First) he recites a Yâjyâ verse for the wood sticks (samidhah) which are used as fuel.<sup>15</sup> These are the vital airs. The vital airs kindle this whole universe (give life to it). Thus he pleases the vital airs and puts them in the sacrificer.

He repeats a Yâjyâ verse for Tanûnapât. The air inhaled (prâṇa) is Tanûnapât, because it preserves (apât) the bodies (tanvah).<sup>16</sup> Thus he pleases the inhaled, and puts it in the sacrificer.

He repeats a Yâjyâ verse for Narûśāṁsa. Narûśāṁsa means offspring, śāṁsa = speech. Thus he pleases offspring and speech, and puts them in the sacrificer.

He repeats the Yâjyâ for Itah. Itah means food. Thus he pleases food and puts food in the sacrificer.

He repeats a Yâjyâ for the Barhis (sacred grass). Barhis is cattle. Thus he pleases the cattle and puts it in the sacrificer.

He repeats the Yâjyâ for the gates (of the sacrificial place). The gates are the rain. Thus he pleases (fertility) and puts it into the sacrificer.

He repeats the Yâjyâ for Dawn and Night. Dawn and Night are day and night. Thus he pleases day and night and puts them into the sacrificer.

He repeats a Yâjyâ for the two Divine Hotars.

(The carrying of fire round the sacrificial animal)

When the fire is carried round <sup>20</sup> (the animal) Adhvaryu says to the Hotar: repeat (thy mantr). The Hotar then repeats this triplet of vers addressed to Agni, and composed in the Gây metre: agñir hotâ no adhvare (4, 15, 1-3) i. e. Agni, our priest, is carried round about like a horse who is among gods the god of sacrifices. (2) i. a charioteer Agni passes thrice by the sacrifice, the gods he carries the offering. (3) The master food, the seer Agni, went round the offerings bestows riches on the sacrificer.

When the fire is carried round (the animal) then makes him (Agni) prosper by means of his own d and his own <sup>21</sup> metric. "As a horse he is carried means: they carry him as if he were a horse, round about. Like a charioteer Agni passes thrice by sacrifice means: he goes round the sacrifice like a charioteer (swiftly). He is called rajapati (master food) because he is the master of (different kinds of) food.

The Adhvaryu says: give Hotar <sup>22</sup> the additional order for despatching offerings to the gods.<sup>22</sup>

Then the Maitrâvaruṇa proceeds to give his orders by the words : may Agni be victorious, may I grant (us) food !

They ask : why does thê Maitrâvaruṇa proceed to give his orders, if the Adhavarṇu orders the Hotar to rite ? (The answer is :) The Maitrâvaruṇa is the lord of the sacrifice ; the Hotar is the speech of the sacrifice ; for speech speaks only if driven (sent) by the mind ; because an other-minded<sup>10</sup> speaks the speech of the Asuras which is not agreeable to the devas. If the Maitrâvaruṇa proceeds to give orders, he stirs up speech by means of the mind. Speech being stirred up by his mind, he secures the offering to the gods (by preventing the Asuras from taking possession of it).

The formula to be recited at the slaughter of the animal. See As v. Śr. S. 3, 3).<sup>11</sup>

The Hotar then says (to the slaughterers) : Ye nine slaughterers, commence (your work), as well as ye who are human ! that is to say, he orders all the slaughterers among gods as well as among men (to commence).

Bring hither the instruments for killing, ye who are ordering the sacrifice, in behalf of the two masters of the sacrifice.<sup>12</sup>

<sup>10</sup> If "mind and speech" are unconnected.

<sup>11</sup> It is called the Adhvaryu-ṇṇa-mantra, i. e., the mantra by which the Adhvaryu is ordered to kill the animal. The word used for "killer, slaughterer," is "Sāhuta," lit. silence-maker. This peculiar term accurately expresses the mode in which the sacrificial animal is to be killed. They stop its mouth, and beat it only ten or twelve times on the testicles and it is suffocated. During the act of killing, no voice is to be heard.

<sup>12</sup> Either the sacrificer and his wife, or the two deities, Agni and Indra, to whom the sacrificial animal is devoted. Śāy. says : another śukla has Madha-pataye. In the Kaushitaki Brāhmaṇa 10, 4, there is also the dual.

The animal is the offering, the sacrificer the master of the offering. Thus he (the Hotar) makes pro the sacrificer by means of his (the sacrificer's) offering. Thence they truly say: for whatever d the animal is killed, that one is the master of offering. If the animal is to be offered to one d only, the priest should say: medhapataye<sup>14</sup> "to master of the sacrifice (singular)"; if to two deities then he should use the dual "to both the masters of the offering," and if to several deities, then should use the plural "to the masters of the offering." This is the established custom.

Bring ye for him fire! For the animal was carried (to the slaughter) saw death before. Not wishing to go to the gods, the gods said to Come, we will bring thee to heaven! The animal consented and said: One of you should walk before me.

They consented. Agni then walked before it, and it followed after Agni. Thence they say, every animal belongs to Agni, for it followed after him. Thence they carry before the animal fire (Agni).

Spread the (sacred) grass! The animal lives on herbs. He (the Hotar) thus provides the animal with its entire soul (the herbs being supposed to form part of it).

The mother, the father, the brother, sister, friend and companion should give this (animal) up (when being slaughtered)! When these words are pronounced, they seize the animal which is (regarded as) entirely given up by its relations (parents, &c.)

Turn its feet northwards! Make its eye go to the sun, dismiss its breath to the wind, its life to the deities, its hearing to the directions, its body to the earth.

this way he (the Hotar) places it (connects it) to these worlds.

Take off the skin entire (without cutting it). Before evening the navel tear out the omentum! Stop its nothing within (by stopping its mouth)! Thus he (the Hotar) puts its breath in the animals.

Make of its breast a piece like an eagle, of its arms (two pieces like) two hatchets, of its forearms (two pieces like) two spikes, of its shoulders (two pieces like) two hashyapas,<sup>14</sup> its loins should be unbroken (entire); (make of its thighs (two pieces) two shields, of the two kneepans (two pieces) two oleander leaves; take out its twenty-six ribs according to their order; preserve every limb of it in its integrity. Thus he benefits all its limbs.

Dig a ditch in the earth to hide its excrements. Excrements consist of vegetable food; for the ditch is the place for the herbs. Thus the Hotar hides them (the excrements) finally in their proper place.

7

Present the evil spirits with the blood! For the sacrificer having deprived (once) the evil spirits of their due in the Haviryagnas (such as the Fall-and-New-moon offerings) apportioned to them the husks and smallest grams,<sup>15</sup> and after having them turned out from the great sacrifice (such as the Soma and animal sacrifices), presented to them the blood. Thence the Hotar pronounces the words: present the evil spirits with the blood! By giving them this share he deprives the evil spirits of any other share in sacrifice.<sup>16</sup> They say : one should not address evil spirits in the sacrifice, any evil spirits whatever they might be (Rakshas, Asuras, &c.) ; for sacrifice is to be without the evil spirits (not to be disturbed by them). But others say : one should address them ; for who deprives any one entitled to a share, of this share, will be punished (like him whom he deprives) ; and if he himself does suffer the penalty, then his son, and if his son spared, then his grandson will suffer it, and thus he represents on him (the son or grandson) what he wanted to resent on you.

However, if the Hotar addresses them, he should do so with a low voice. For both, the low voice of the evil spirits, are, "as it were, hidden. If he addresses them with a loud voice, then such one speaks in the voice of the evil spirits, and is capable of producing Rakshas-sounds (a horrible, terrific voice). The voice in which the haughty man and the drum and speak, is that of the evil spirits (Rakshas). Who has such a knowledge will neither himself become haughty, nor will such a man be among his offspring.

Do not cut<sup>17</sup> the entrails which resemble an omentum, nor should among your children, O slaughterers! or among the spring, any one be found who might cut them. By speaking these words, he presents these entrails to the slaughterers among the gods as well as to those among men.

<sup>17</sup> Rāvishtha is here to be traced to the root ṛq = lu to cut, ṛ being put instead of l, just as we have here urūka instead of ulūka, as ś of Śāyana explains urvanam karuta. Ravita, a cutter, and ṛ conjunct, are traced by Śāy. to the root ru, to roar ; but there is reason to take the word here in another sense than rāvishtha in the preceding sentence.

The Hotar shall then say thrice: O Adhrigu (and others), kill (the animal), do it well; kill it, O adhrigū. After the animal has been killed, (he should say thrice:) Far may it<sup>18</sup> (the consequences of murder) be (from us). For Adhrigu among the gods is he who silences<sup>19</sup> (the animal) and the Apāpa (away, away!) is he who puts it down. By speaking those words he surrenders the animal to those who silence it (by stopping its mouth), and to those who butcher it.

The Hotar then mutters (he makes japa): "O slaughterers! may all good you might do abide by us! and all mischief you might do go elsewhere." The Hotar<sup>20</sup> gives by (this) speech the order (for silencing the animal), for Agni had given the order for killing (the animal) with the same words when he was the Hotar of the gods.

By those words (the japa mentioned) the Hotar removes (all evil consequences) from those who allocate the animal and those who butcher it, in that they might transgress the rule by cutting one piece too soon, the other too late, or by cutting a large, or a too small piece. The Hotar enjoys this happiness, cleans himself (from all guilt), and attains the full length of his life (and it serves as a sacrifice) for obtaining his full life. He who has such a knowledge, attains the full length of his life

<sup>18</sup> Apāpa. This formula is evidently nothing but the repetition of the particle apa, away! It was very early misunderstood, as we may see from the very explanation given of it by the author of our Brāhmanam; for he takes it as apāpah, i. e. guiltless, and takes it the name of one of the divine slaughterers.

<sup>20</sup> The Hotar must recite at the sacrifice the whole formula, from "Ye divine slaughterers," &c. The whole of it, consisting of many so-called prāśhas or orders ought properly to be repeated, by the dharmyū, who generally calls upon the different priests to do their respective duties. This exception to the rule is here explained by reference to what Agni, the model Hotar, had once done when assisting at a sacrifice brought by the gods.

The gods killed a man for their sacrifice. The part in him which was fit for being made an offering, went out and entered a horse. Thence the horse became an animal fit for being sacrificed. The gods then dismissed that man after that part which was only fit for being offered had gone from him, whereupon he became deformed.<sup>21</sup>

The gods killed the horse; but the part fit for being sacrificed (the medha) went out of it, and entered an ox; thence the ox became an animal fit for being sacrificed. The gods then dismissed (the horse) after the sacrificial part had gone from him, whereupon it turned to a white deer.

The gods killed the ox; but the part fit for being sacrificed went out of the ox, and entered a sheep; thence the sheep became fit for being sacrificed. The gods then dismissed the ox which turned to a gayal (bos goaveus).

The gods killed the sheep; but the part fit for being sacrificed went out of the sheep, and entered goat; thence the goat became fit for being sacrificed. The gods dismissed the sheep, which turned a camel.

<sup>21</sup> In the original: kimpurusha. According to the original etymological meaning, the word signifies "a deformed or low man." In later mythology the kimpurushas or kinnaras were attached to Kuber, the god of treasures. They were regarded as musical. But this meaning is certainly not applicable here. The author is likely means a dwarf.

The sacrificial part (the medha) remained for the longest time (longer than in the other animals) in the goat; thence is the goat among all these animals pre-eminently fit (for being sacrificed).

The gods killed the goat; but the part fit for being sacrificed went out of it, and entered the earth. Hence the earth is fit for being offered. The gods then dismissed the goat, which turned to a arabha.<sup>22</sup>

All those animals from which the sacrificial part had gone, are unfit for being sacrificed, thence one could not eat (their flesh).<sup>23</sup>

After the sacrificial part had entered the earth, the gods surrounded it (so that no escape was possible); then turned to rice. When they (therefore) divide the Purodāśa into parts, after they have killed the animal, when they do it, wishing "might our annual sacrifice be performed with the sacrificial part (which is obtained in the rice of the Purodāśa) ! might the sacrificial part be provided with the whole sacrificial essence !" The sacrificial animal of him, who has such a knowledge becomes then provided with the sacrificial part, with the whole sacrificial essence.

<sup>23</sup> That is to say: all beings who owe their origin to a loss of the sacrificial part in a higher species of the same class, such as the dwarf, the gaval, the camel, &c. are unfit to be used as food. Here is a hint given as to why certain animals are allowed and others prohibited to be eaten. We see from this passage clearly, that animal food was very extensively used in the Vedic times.

(The relation of the rice cake offering to that of flesh
The Vapâ and Purodâs'a offerings).

The Purodâs'a (offered at the animal sacrifice) is the animal which is killed. The chaff and straw of the rice of which it consists are the hairs of the animal, its husks<sup>24</sup> the skin, its smallest particles the blood, all the fine particles to which the (cleaned) rice is ground (for making, by kneading it with water, a ball) represent the flesh (of the animal), and whatever other substantial part<sup>25</sup> is in the rice, are the bones (of the animal). He who offers the Purodâs'a, offers the sacrificial substance of all animals (for the latter is contained in the rice of the Purodâs'a). Thence they say: the performance of the Purodâs'a offering is to be attended to.

Now he recites the Yajyâ for the Vapâ (which is about to be offered): yaṁ am etâni divi, i. e. Ye, O Agni and Soma, have placed, by your joint labours, those lights on the sky! ye, Agni and Soma, have liberated the rivers which had been taken (by demons) from imprecation and defilement. (Rigveda 1, 93, 5.)

The man who is initiated into the sacrificial mystery (the Dikshita) is seized by all the gods (as their property). Thence they say: he should not eat of a thing dedicated (to the gods).<sup>26</sup> But others say: he should eat when the Vapa is offered; for the Hotar

<sup>26</sup> The text offers some difficulties; •literally means. he should not eat of the Dikshita, which latter word can here not be taken in its usual sense, "one initiated into the sacrificial rites," but in that of a thing consecrated to the gods. Sây. gets over the difficulty by inserting the word grîhe after dikshitasya, and understands it of a meal to be taken in the house of a sacrificer when the Vapâ offering is performed.

erates the sacrificer from the gods by (the last words of the mantra just mentioned): "Ye, Agni and Soma, have liberated the (rivers) which had been taken." Consequently he becomes a sacrificer (a janâna), and ceases to belong as a Dîkshita exclusively to the gods.<sup>27</sup>

Now follows the Yajvâ verse for the Purodâs'a mentioned): ânam dico mâtaris'vâ (1, 93, 6). i. e. mataris'vâ brought from heaven another (Soma),<sup>28</sup> and the eagle struck out another (Agni, fire) of the âk, &c. (On account of the meaning of the last words "and the eagle," &c., the verse is used as Yajvâ, the Purodâs'a offering.) For it expresses the idea, that the sacrificial essence had gone out and had been taken away (from man, horse, &c.), as it were, just as gpi had come out (of the rock).

With the verse: Taste (O Agni) the offerings, burn them well, &c. (3, 54, 22), the Hotar makes the Śrishat of the Purodâs'a. By this mantra the Hotar makes the sacrificer enjoy such an offering (to be eaten by the gods in return to the gift), and purifies for himself food and milky essences.

He now calls the Ilâ (and eats from the Purodâs'a). For Ilâ means cattle; (by doing so) he therefore calls cattle, and provides the sacrificer with man.

10.

The offering of parts of the body of the animal.
The Manotâ).

The Adhvaryu now says (to the Hotar): recite the verses appropriate to<sup>29</sup> the offering of the parts of the

<sup>29</sup> After the Vapâ (omentum) and the Purodâs'a, which forms part of the animal sacrifice have been thrown into the fire, the sacrificial animal which are cut off for the Manotâ. He then repeats the hymn : Thou, O Agni, art the first Manotâ (6, 1). (This hymn being exclusively devoted to Agni), and the sacrificial animal belonging to another deity (besides Agni, viz. Soma), they ask : Why does he recite verses (exclusively) addressed to Agni, when the sacrificial parts (of the animal) intended for the Manotâ are being cut off? (The answer is : There are three Manotâs among the gods, in which all their thoughts are plotted and woven, viz., Indra (speech), Gâus (the cow); and Agni, in every one of whom the thoughts of the gods are plotted and woven, but Agni is the complete Manotâ (the centre for Adhvaryus offers different parts of the body of the slaughtered animal. Most of them are put in the Juhû-ladle, some in the Upabhrît. For the Adhvaryu generally holds when giving an oblation two ladles, Juhû and Upabhrît, in his hand, placing the first over the latter. The names of the parts of the body which are to be sacrificed, are differently stated in the Kâtîya (6, 7, 6-11) and Hiranyakesi Sûtras (4, 14), but they appear to mean always the same parts. They are : the heart, tongue, the breast, the two ribs (with the ribs which are not to be broken), the liver (called guk in Kât., and tanuman in the Hiranyakesi and Baudhâyana Sûtra), the two reins (rahkân in the K., atasnâ in the H. and B. Sûtra), the left shoulder blade (savyâdaś in H. and B., savyâśakthipravâdakaṁ in K.), the right part of the loins, the middle part of the anus. These are put in the Juhû. The remainder, the right shoulder blade, the third part of the anus which is very small and the left part of the loins are put in the Upabhrît. Besides the penis (vanishthâ), the straight gut (vanishthâ), and the testicles are cut off for being sacrificed. If the parts to be given with the Juhû and Upabhrît are laid and dropped over with melted butter then is the Hotar ordered to repeat the Anuvâkyâ mantra by the words : manotâyâ harisho avadigumanasya anubrâhi, i. e. "repeat a mantra to the offering, which has been cut off for the Manotâ." This offering which is called the angayâgâ is given to the Manotâ, the weaver of thoughts, who is said to be Agni.

<sup>30</sup> The word is explained by Sâyana as a compound of man "thought" and otâ, which means literally the "weaving of thoughts," that is, the seat of intelligence. Here it is used as a feminine; but in the hymn referred to, it is evidently a masculine: prathamô manotâ "the first weaver of thoughts," which means about the same as "the first poet or priest," another denomination of Agni.

thoughts); for in him all Manotās are gathered. From his reason the priest repeats verses as *Anuvākya*s addressed to Agni at that occasion. By the verse : "O Agni-Soma, eat the food which is waiting (for you) etc. (1, 93, 7)," he makes the Yājñā to the offering. This verse ensures, on account of the words "food" (annisho) and "waiting for you" (prasthitasya), success for the offering of him who has such a knowledge ensures success and goes to the gods (only) by means of all parts of a particular ceremony being well performed.<sup>31</sup>

<sup>32</sup> The offering of melted butter to Vanaspati (in form of the Yāpa) takes place immediately after the so-called rasahoma, or the offering of the water in which entrails (heart, &c.) of the slaughtered animal have been fed. In the Apastamba Sūtras the performance is thus described : Six mentions. The Adhvaryu puts a plant on the Juhā (large ladle), takes once liquid ajvā (melted butter), drips it twice about it (the plant), and says to the Hotar : address Vanaspati. He then first repeats an anuvākya : deevbhya vanaspataye. I give him the text of this mantra, which I found in its entirety only in the Sapta-hautra.

देवभ्यो वनस्पत इवीषि हिरण्यपर्णं प्रदिवसे अर्थे । प्रदक्षिणिद्रु- नया विभूय क्रतस्य वक्षि पथिभी रजिष्ठोम् ॥

i. e. Mayst thou, O tree (the Yāpa), with golden leaves of old, who art quite straight, after having been freed from the bonds (with which thou wast tied), carry up, on the paths of right, turning towards the bath, the offerings for thy own sake to the gods' (The "hands" refer to the cord with which the animal was tied to the Yupa; they are to be taken off. The golden leaves refer to the decoration of the Yupa with flowers. "For thy own sake," this offering belongs to himself.)

After the Hotar has repeated this Anuvākya, the Matravarama then gives the prasha (orders) to repeat the Yājñā mantra by the gods. हाता यक्षद्वनस्पति, &c. (See the mantra in full in the Yājñavalkya Smṛti. 21, 46, with some deviations).

The Hotar thereupon repeats the Yājñā mantra, which runs as follows :—

ये र यजामहे । वनस्पते रश्मया नियूय पिष्टमया वयमनामि
वेदान् ॥ वह देवत्रा दिक्षिषो इवीषि प्र च दातारमस्तेषु वाचा । kingdom). Vanaspati is the vital air; therefore the offering of him who, knowing this, sacrifices to Vanaspati, goes endowed with life to the gods.
पिष्ट ॥

He gives an offering to the Svishṭakṛit.<sup>33</sup> The Svishṭakṛit is the footing on which he finally places the sacrificer.

He calls Īlā.<sup>34</sup> The cattle are Īlā. By calling Īlā he calls cattle and provides the sacrificer with them.

O tree! after having been loosened from the meely decorated earth thou who art experienced in wisdom and knowledge, carry up to the gods the offerings, and proclaim to the immortals the (name of the) giver!

<sup>33</sup> After the oblation to Vanaspati follows that to Agni Svishṭakṛit, including all the duties of the annual sacrifice, viz. Agni, Soma, Agni-Somān, Indragān, Aśvina, Vanaspati, Devā ājyagā (da which drink melted butter). The Anuvakyā of the Svishṭakṛit oblation is at the annual sacrifice the same as at other Iṣtis, viz. पिप्रिहि देवानुशतो (Rigveda 10, 1, 2, Asv. S'r. S. 1, 6). Then follows the praisha by the Maitrāvaruṇa, where the names of all the deities of the Iṣti (as given above) are mentioned. It runs as follows:

The Devas spread the sacrifice. When doing so, the Asuras attacked them, intending to put an obstacle in their way (to prevent the successful performance of the sacrifice). The attack was made against the sacrificial post from the eastern direction after the animal had been consecrated by the Apri verses (see 4), and before the fire was carried round the animal. The Devas awoke, and surrounded for their own protection, as well as for that of the sacrifice, (the altar) with a three-fold wall resembling fire. The Asuras seeing those walls shining and blazing, did not venture an attack, but ran away. Thus the Devas defeated the Asuras on the eastern side as well as on the western. For this reason the sacrificers perform the rite of carrying fire round (the animal, when consecrated), and have a mantra recited; for they thus surround (the animal), with a three-fold wall shining like fire for their own protection and that of the sacrifice.

After the animal is consecrated, and fire carried round it, they take it northwards. They carry before the sacrificer a firebrand, meaning thereby that the animal is ultimately the sacrificer himself; they believe that he will go to heaven having that light (the firebrand) carried before him. And in this way he really goes to heaven.

The Adhvaryu throws sacred grass (barhis) on the spot where they are to kill the animal. When they carry it outside the Veda, after having consecrated and carried fire round it, they make it sit on the sacred grass (barhis).

They dig a ditch for its excrements. The excrements consist of herbs; the earth is the proper place for herbs; thus he puts them at the end in their proper place (by throwing them into a ditch, dug in the earth).

They say: when the animal is the offering, then many parts (of this offering) go off (are not used) such as hairs, skin, blood, half-digested food, horns, the two horns, some pieces of flesh which fall to the ground. (Such being the case) in what way then is the deficiency made up? The answer is: if the sacrifice Purodāśa divided into its proper parts along with the animal, then the animal sacrifice is made complete. When the sacrificial essence had gone from the animals, both rice and barley sprang out of it. When they offer Purodāśa divided into its proper parts along with the animal, they should think, "our animal was sacrificed with the sacrificial essence in it; our animal has been sacrificed in its entirety." The animal of him who has this knowledge is sacrificed in its entirety.

After the Vapâ (omentum) has been torn out (of the belly), they bring it (to the fire for being fried). The Adhvaryu causes to drip out of a small drops of hot melted butter. When the drops are falling to the ground), the Adhvaryu orders the Hotar to recite the mantra appropriate to the drops (falling down). For the drops belong to all deities. He might think, they are not mine. (I, the priest, have nothing to do with them); they may, therefore, be invited to go to the gods; (but he ought to repeat mantras for them).

He repeats the Anuvákya (for the drops :) "Be favourable to our loud voice (to be heard at a distance) which is agreeable to the gods, when swallowing our offerings with thy mouth! (1, 75, 1)" By this mantra he throws the drops into the mouth of Agni. He further repeats the hymn: "bring this our sacrifice among the gods" (3, 21). By the words (of the second pada of the first verse :) "be favourable to our offerings, O Játavedas!" he begs for the acceptance of the offerings. In the words (in the third pada of the first verse :) "eat, O Agni, the drops of the marrow and the melted butter," the drops of the marrow and the melted butter are mentioned. The words (of the fourth pada of the first verse :) "eat, O Hotar, having first taken thy seat!" mean: Agni (for he is the lotar of the gods) eat, after having taken, &c.

(In the first half of the second verse :) "the drops of melted butter drip for thee, O purifier, from the marrow," the drops both of the melted butter and the marrow are mentioned. (By the second half :) "grant us the best things which are desirable, for worshipping (thee) in the proper way," he pronounces blessing.

(In the first half of the third verse :) "O! Agni! these drops are dripping melted butter for thee, the wise, who art to be worshipped with gifts," the drops (of marrow) are described as "dripping melted butter."

By medas, Śāy. understands the Vapâ, which is certainly the best explanation.

(By the second half :) “thou, the best Rishi ; kindled ; be a carrier of the sacrifice !” he (the priest) orders the sacrifice to be successful.

(In the first half of the fourth verse :) “to thee O Adhrigu ! drip the drops of marrow and melted butter, O Agni ! thou strong one !” the drops both the marrow and melted butter are mentioned. (In the second half :) “mayst thou, praised by poets, come (to us) with thy brightly shining flame ! kindly accept our offerings, O wise !” the priest asks the acceptance of the offerings.

(After the recital of the fifth verse :) “we offer thee the most juicy marrow (the Vapâ) taken out of the midst (of the belly) ; these drops (of melted butter) drip on this thin skin<sup>3</sup> (the Vapâ), carry the same severally up to the gods !” the priest pronounces the formula Vaushat ! for the drops (and thus concludes the offering of the drops).

He then repeats the same formula (the Anuvakâra as if sacrificing the Soma), O Agni, enjoy the Soma ! (using instead of “Soma” the word “drops.” These drops belong to all the gods. Thence the rain falls, divided in drops, down upon the earth.

13.

(On the Svâhâkritis and the offering of the Vapâ)

They ask : which are the Puroṣuvâkyâs, the Praishas and the Yâjyâs for the call : Svâhâ<sup>4</sup> ? (1)

<sup>3</sup> From this passage it is clear that by medas in the whole of the hymn, the Vapâ or omentum is to be understood ; for it is called tvach, i. e. skin, which (although it is very thin) it resembles.

<sup>4</sup> The author of the Brahm. alludes here to a practice which appears to be contrary to the general rules established regarding the offering of oblations. To make it clear, I here extract the passage concerning it from the Manual, used by the seven Hotṛi priests (called Sapta hautra). On pp. 22, 23 of my manuscript is said, answer is :) The Puroṇuvākyaś are just the same as those recited (for the drops), the Praishas and the Yajyas are also the same. They further ask : which are the deities for these Svāhākritis? (To this) one could answer, the Viśve devâh; for there are (at the end) of the Yājyâ the words, "may the gods eat the oblation over which Svāhâ ! is spoken."

The gods conquered by means of the sacrifice, austerities, penances, and sacrificial oblations the heavenly world. After the Vapâ had been offered, the heavenly world became apparent to them. Regardless of all the other rites, they went up to heaven by means of the donation of the Vapâ (alone). Thereupon Men and Ishis went to the sacrificial place of the gods (to Hotar after having repeated the hymn addressed to the drops dripping from the Vapâ, is requested by the Maitrâvaruna (who then in the praisha, i. e. order) to make the Svāhas (svāhākritis), i. e. the pronunciation of the formula: svāhâ! of the ājyâ, the das (Vapa) of the drops dripping from the Vapâ, of the *dhakriti*s in general, and of the verses which are addressed to the oblations in the hymn mentioned (mam no yajnam, 3, 21, above). Thus order the Maitrâvaruna concludes by the words "Svāhâ! the gods pleased with the Ajyâ may first taste the oblation." Hotar, repeat the Yajyâ!" Thereupon the Maitrâvaruna orders a Puroṇuvākya for the offering of two portions of Ajya. In the Maitravaruna orders the Hotar to recite two Yajyas, one for Agni, the other for Soma, in order to induce these deities to accept the offering given after the recital of the Yajyâ. After having repeated in he is ordered to repeat the Yajyâ for the medas (Vapâ), addressing Agushomâh.

Now the deviation from the general adopted rules of the sacrificial practice is, the formula Svāhâ is here several times used without giving a proper Anuvākya and Yajyâ. To this practice some opponents of sacrifices had raised some objections. But the author of the Brahm, defends the practice, asserting that the Puroṇuvākyaś required for the Svāhākritis are included in those mentioned for the drops (p. 99), their praisha is contained in the general praisha, in the words, Hotar agnum vakshat, may the Hotar recite the Yājyâ for Agni! &c., which formula the different Svāhâs follow, one of which is, svāhâ svāhākritinâm (see above); and their Yājyâ contained in the general Yājyâ, which is according to the Asvâlây. At. 3, 4, the last verse of the Apri sūktâ.

see) whether they might not obtain something without knowing. Having gone round about and searched all the place, they found nothing but a disembowelled animal lying there. Thence they learnt that verily the value of the animal (for sacrifices) consists only in its Vapâ, which part is just as much as the whole animal.

When they, at the third libation, fry the remaining portions (all save the Vapâ) of the animal and offer them; then they do so, wishing, "may our sacrifice be performed with many many oblations! may our sacrifice be performed with the entire animal!"

14.

The oblation of the Vapâ is just like an oblation of ambrosia; such oblations of ambrosia are (beside the throwing of the fire<sup>5</sup> (produced by the friction of wooden sticks) into the sacrificial hearth) the oblation of Ajyâ and that of Soma. All these oblations are without an (apparent) body (they disappear at once when thrown into the fire). With such bodiless oblations the sacrificer conquers the heavenly world. The Vapâ is just like sperm; for just as sperm (when effused) is lost (in the womb), the Vapâ is lost (disappears in the fire on account of its thinness). Further, the Vapâ is white like sperm, and without a substantial body just as sperm. Blood and flesh making up the substance of the body, the Hotar therefore should say (to the Adhvaryu), Cut off all that has no blood.

The Vapâ oblation must consist of five parts, even if there are only four parts (all except the gold plate) at the sacrificer's disposal. The priest first puts<sup>6</sup> melted utter for the Vapâ in the ladle, then follows a thin old plate, the Vapâ, the melted butter for the gold ate, and (lastly) the dripping of melted butter in the whole).

They ask : if there is no gold to be had, what should he do then ? (The answer is :) he should first put twice melted butter in the ladle, then the Vapâ, and drip twice hot melted butter on it. The melted butter is ambrosia, the gold is also ambrosia. Therefore everything wished for (by the sacrificer) when throwing the melted butter and the gold (in the ladle), is attainable, together with the melted butter (to be taken twice), and the gold, the Vapâ oblation consists of five parts.<sup>7</sup>

Man is composed of five parts, viz. hairs, skin, flesh, bones, and marrow. The priest having (by the Vapâ oblation) made (the sacrificer) just such a man (composed of five parts), offers him in Agni, who is the tomb of the gods. For Agni is the womb of the gods ; fier having grown together in Agni's womb with the different other oblations, he then goes up to heaven with a golden body.

On the repetition of the Prâtar-anurâka, or early morning prayer, on the day of the Soma libation.)

The Adhvaryu orders the Hotar to repeat the mantras appropriate for the gods who appear in the early morning. These gods are Agni, Ushâs (dawn), and the As'vins (twilight) ; they come, if each of them is addressed in mantras of seven different metres.<sup>8</sup> They come on the call of him who has such knowledge.

As Prajâpati, when he himself was (once) Hotr was just about to repeat the Prâtar-anuvâka, the presence of both the Devas and Asuras, the first thought, he will repeat the Prâtar-anuvâka for our benefit; the latter believed, he will do so for them. He then repeated it for the Devas. Thence the Devas became masters of the Asuras. He who has such knowledge becomes master of his enemy, adversary and gainsayer. It is called Prâtar-anuvâka (morning prayer); for Prajâpati prayed early in the morning. It is to be repeated in the dead of night. For people follow in their sayings him who possesses the whole speech, and the full Brahma, and who has obtained the leadership.<sup>10</sup>

Therefore the Prâtar-anuvâka is to be repeated in the dead of night: for it must be repeated before people commence talking. Should he, however, repeat the Prâtar-anuvâka after people have commenced talking, he would make the Prâtar-anuvâka (which should be the first speech uttered in the morning) follow the speech of another. (Such being contrary to its nature) it must be repeated in the dead of night. He should repeat it even before the voice of the cock is heard.<sup>11</sup> For all the birds, including the cock, are the

uth (the very end) of the goddess Nirriti (destruction, death). If he thus repeats the Prâtar-anuvâka before the voice of the cock is heard, (he should do considering) that we cannot utter the sacred words required at a sacrifice, should others already animals or men) have made their voices heard. Hence (to avoid this) the Prâtar-anuvâka should be recited in the dead of night. Then verily the thyanu should begin his ceremonies<sup>12</sup> (by calling the Hotar to repeat the Prâtar-anuvâka), and the Hotar then should repeat it. When the Adhvaryu begins his work (by ordering the Hotar to repeat), he begins with speech, and the Hotar repeats (the Prâtar-anuvâka) through Speech. Speech is Brahma. His every wish which might be attainable either through Speech or Brahma<sup>13</sup> is attained.

16.

Prâpatî being just about to repeat the Prâtar-anuvâka, when he was himself Hotar (at his own sacrifice), all the gods were in a state of anxious expectation, as to who of them would be first mentioned. Prâpatî looked about (and, seeing the state of anxiety which the gods were, thought), if I commence by dressing (the mantra) to one deity only, how will the other deities have a share (in such an invocation)? He then saw (with his mental eyes) the verse: âpô revatîr, i. e. the wealthy waters (10, 30, 12). Apo, i. e. waters, means all deities, and revatîr (rich) means also all deities. He thus commenced the Prâtar-anuvâka by this verse, in which all the gods felt joy: (for each of them thought), he first has mentioned me; they all then felt joy when he was repeating the Prâtar-anuvâka. He who has such a knowledge (i. e. who commences his Prâtar-anuvâka by the same verse), commences his Prâtar-anuvâka with a joint address to all the gods.

The Devas were afraid of the Asuras robbing them of their early morning sacrifice (the Prâtar-anuvâka), for they (the Asuras) were so very strong and powerful. But Indra said to them : "do not be afraid ! I shall strike them with the three-fold power of my morning thunderbolt." He then repeated the verse mentioned (10, 30, 12). This verse is in three respects a thunderbolt, viz. it contains "the destroying waters" <sup>14</sup> (apô naptiryô), it is in the Trishtubh (Indic metre, and it contains "speech" <sup>15</sup> (it is recited with a loud voice). With this thunderbolt he struck and destroyed them. Thence the Devas became masters of the Asuras. He who has such a knowledge, becomes master of his enemy, adversary, and gainsayer.

They say : he should be the Hotar who produces in this verse (when reciting it) the number contained in all metres. This is the case, if it be repeated thrice. This is the production of the metres.

17.

He who wishes for long life, should repeat a hundred verses. For the (full) life of man is a hundred (years); he has (besides) a hundred powers, and hundred senses.<sup>16</sup> (By repeating one hundred ver-priest secures to the sacrificer his full age, his mental and bodily powers, and his senses.

<sup>16</sup> According to Sây. the number of "a hundred" for the senses to be obtained, if the senses are stated at ten, and if to each of the ten tubular vessels, in which they move, are ascribed.

He who wishes for (performing successfully the subsequent great) sacrifices, should repeat 360 verses. The year consists of 360 days; such a year (is put here). The year is Prajápati. Prajápati is sacrifice. The intelligent Hotar who recites 360 verses turns (in this way) the sacrifice (regarded as a divine being, the mediator between gods and men) towards the sacrificer.

He who wishes for children and cattle should repeat 720 verses. For so many days and nights make a year (one of 360 days). Prajápati is the year. After he is produced (prájāyamaṇa), the whole verse is produced (prájāyate).<sup>4</sup> He who has such knowledge, obtains, if being born after Prajápati (by means of the sacrifice), children and cattle.

He who is not recognized as a Brahman, one who has a bad reputation on account of being charged with crimes, should bring a sacrifice, then 360 verses should be repeated. The Gâyatrî consists of eight syllables (three times eight). The gods, knowing of the nature of the Gâyatrî, removed the evil consequences of sin and crime. He who has such knowledge, removes the evil consequences of sin and crime from himself by means of the Gâyatrî.

He who wishes for heaven should repeat a thousand verses. For the heavenly world is at a distance of about 1,000 days' travelling on horseback from here (this earth). (To repeat a thousand verses, done) for reaching the heavenly world everywhere. He who then wishes for acquisition of things to be enjoyed, and of communion (with the gods), should repeat an unlimited number (of verses). For Prajápati is boundless. To Prajâpati belongs the recitation which makes up the Prâtar-anuvâka. Therein are desires contained. When he repeats an unlimited number (it is done) to obtain fulfilment of all desires. He who has such a knowledge obtains fulfilment all wishes.

Thence one should repeat an unlimited<sup>18</sup> number (of verses). He repeats verses of seven (kinds of) metres for Agni; for there are seven worlds of the gods. He who has such a knowledge becomes successful in all of them. He repeats verses of seven (kinds of) metres for Ushas; for there are seven (kinds of) cattle<sup>19</sup> in villages. He who has such a knowledge obtains these seven (kinds of) cattle in the villages.

He repeats seven (kinds of verses) for the Asvins for speech spoke in seven (different tones). In many tones (i.e. seven) then spoke Speech (in all manner). (These seven tones are made) for comprising the whole speech (the worldly talk and singing), the whole Brahma. He repeats verses for three deities for three worlds are three-fold. (This repetition therefore serves) for conquering (all) these worlds the gods.

18.

They ask: how should the Prâtar-anuvâka be repeated? It is to be repeated<sup>20</sup> according to the metres (verses of the same metre to be put together). The metres are the limbs of Prajâpati. He who brings the sacrifice is Prajâpati. For the benefit of the sacrificer the several verses of the Prâtar-anuvâka are to be recited pada (foot) by pada.<sup>21</sup> For cattle

<sup>20</sup> That is to say: he should take together all the verses in the Gâyatri, or in the Trishtubh or other metres, without mixing them.

is four feet, (if he do so) he obtains cattle. He could repeat it by half verses. When he repeats it this way, (then he does so for securing) a footing to the sacrificer). Man has two legs, and animals have four. He thus places the two-legged sacrificer among the four-legged animals.<sup>22</sup> Thence he should repeat the Prâtar-anuvâka only by half verses.

They ask : the (metres of the) Prâtar-anuvâka being developed, <sup>23</sup> how do they become then undeveloped ? The answer should be : if the Brihatî metre is not moved from its centre.

Some deities have a share in the invocation offerings, others in the Stomas (the chants of the Sâma singers), others in the metrical verses (chhandas) repeated (by the Hotar). By means of the invocation offerings (śhutis) one makes pleased those deities who have share in these offerings, and by means of the chants and recitations those also who have their shares in the Stomas and metres. He who has such a knowledge, makes pleased and well-disposed both parties of deities (those who have their share in the invocation offerings, and those who have theirs in the Stomas and metres).

<sup>23</sup> Asy. Sr. Sutr. 4, 13. The regular order of metres which commences by Gayatri and goes on by Ushnih, Anushtubh, &c. based on the increase by four syllables of each subsequent metre, is not in the Prâtar-anuvâka. Ushnih is here not second, but fifth, Anushtubh is second. The expression vyûlha means, one metre being followed by an increase of the number of syllables out of the preceding one. Thus increase in the Prâtar-anuvâka goes as far as the fourth metre, the Brihatî, which is the centre ; then the turn from the lower order to the higher commences again. The first turn is Gayatri, Anushtubh, Tushitubh, and Brihatî ; the second Ushnih, Jagatî, and Anushtubh. There being after the Brihatî a return to lower numbers, development is stopped : thence the Prâtar-anuvâka is avyûlha.

There are thirty-three gods who drink Soma and thirty-three who do not drink Soma.

The Soma-drinking gods are : eight Vasus, eleven Rudras, twelve Adityas, Prājapati, and Vashat-l. The not Soma-drinking gods are : eleven Prayājas, eleven Anuyājas,<sup>25</sup> and eleven Upayājas.<sup>26</sup> The

<sup>25</sup> At the animal sacrifice there are eleven Anuyājas required. This is briefly stated in Aśv. Sūtr. Sūtras 4, 6, where, however, in addition to those occurring at a previous sacrifice (Chaturmāsya), only two are mentioned ; and on reference to the rules on the Chaturmāsya Ishti (2, 16), we find also in addition to three which are supposed to be already known, only six mentioned. The three previous ones are then to be found in the rules on the Darśa pūrṇima (1, 8). The formula is for all Anuyājas the same. First on the name of the respective deity in the nominative, then follow the words : rasurane rasudheyasya retū (or vītām, or vaantū). The first Anuyāja, which is addressed to the caritas, or sacrificial seat, is for instance, as follows : देवं बर्हिर्वसुवने वसुधेयस्य वेतु i.e. "O the divine sacrificial seat, O giver of wealth (Agni) ! taste of wealth (food) which is to be put by." The latter expression refers to the remainder of the sacrificial food which had been eaten by priests and the sacrificer just before the offering of the Anuyāja. The gods are to have a share in the food already eaten. It is regarded as the wealth to be put by ; for it serves for the acquisition of vigour and strength. The term rasa is frequently used in reference to food at the time of eating the remainder of the sacrifice. See 2, 27. The order of the Anuyājah deities at the animal sacrifice is the following : 1) divir drāvak (the gates), 2) usha u-no (dawn and night), 3) divi joshiti (satiation), 4) āj and ā (vigour and oblation), 5) divyā hotārā (the two divine Hotars, the fire on earth and that in the sky), 6) tvādivir (the three deities Ilā, Sarasvatī, and Bhārati, see 2, 5), 7) barhis, 8) varas (see 2, 5), 9) vanaspati, 10) barhis vācīnam (the stalks of kusa grass, thrown in water jars), 11) Agni Srishtakrit.

The Rishis, when once holding a sacrificial session on (the banks of) the Sarasvati, expelled Kavasha,

माध्यमाः सरस्वत्यां सवमासत तद्वापि कवषो मध्ये निषसाद् । तं हं

i. e. the Rishis called the "middle ones" (Gutsamada, Vis'vam Vāmadeva, Atri, Bharadvaja, Vasishtha, see As'v. Gṛhya Sū. 3, 4), held once a sacrificial session on the Sarasvati. Among them there sat Kavasha. These (Rishis) reproached him (who had come among them) saying : "thou art the son of a Slave, we shall neither eat nor drink with thee." Having become angry he ran to the Sarasvati, and obtained her favour by means of a hymn (pūṇa devatrā brahman). She followed him. The R. then thought that he was guiltless. Turning to him, they (Rishi) adoration be to thee, do us no harm ! thou art the best excellent among us, for she (Sarasvati) follows thee. They made him the manager of the sacrifice, and thus appeased his wrath. It is the importance of Kavasha, and he it was who made that known.

The occasion on which Kavasha had this hymn revealed to him thus related in the Kaushitaki Brāhm. (12, 1).—

son of Ilūsha, from (their) Soma sacrifice, (saying) how should the son of a slave-girl, a gamester, who is a Brahman, remain among us and become initiated into all sacrificial rites) ? They turned him out (of the place) into a desert, saying, that he should die by thirst, and not drink the water of the Sarasvatī. After having been driven (from this place), into a desert, he, being vexed by thirst, saw (the mantra called) Apo naptriyaṃ : pra deratrā brahmaṇe gātur ā, &c., i.e. may there be a way leading to the gods for the Brahman (may he be received among them). By its means he obtained the favour of the waters. He went out (of their house) to (meet) him. Sarasvatī surrounded him on all sides. Therefore that place is called Parisāraha (from enam-karasham-vasata). As Sarasvatī had surrounded him on all sides, the Rishis said, the gods know him; let us call him back. All consented, and called him back. After having called him back, they made po naptriyaṃ, by repeating : pra deratrā brahmaṇe (10, 30); by its means they obtained the favour of the waters and of the gods. He who having this knowledge, makes the Apo naptriyaṃ,<sup>2</sup> obtains the favour of the waters and the gods, and conquers the ghost world (the heavenly-world).

of the Rakshas, the disturbers of the sacrifice guarded the waters of the bathing places. Some persons had come to the waters. Upon the Rakshas killed them all. Kavasha then saw this man which comprises fifteen verses : pra deratrā. He then repeated and by means of it turned the Rakshas from the bathing places, killed them.

He should repeat it without stopping. (If he does so) the god of rain (Parjanya) will bless his children with incessant rain. Should he stop in regular intervals, when repeating (the hymn, as usual), the rain-god would keep away in the clouds the rain from his children. Thence it is to be repeated without stopping. If he repeats thrice the first verse of this (hymn) without stopping, in this manner the whole (of the hymn) becomes repeated without stopping.<sup>3</sup>

20.

(The ceremony of mixing the Vasativarî and Ekadhanâ waters.)

After having repeated these (first) nine verses of the hymn, 10, 30) in the same order as they fall (one another in the Sañbhutâ), he repeats the (11th verse), hinotâ no adhravân, &c. as the tenth, &c. (after it, he adds the 10th :) âvarritatîr, where the waters<sup>4</sup> filled (in jars) by the Ekadhanins.

<sup>3</sup> He has to repeat only the first verse thrice without stopping whilst all remaining verses of the hymn may be repeated in usual manner. For the repetition of the first holds good for the whole remaining part.

ined away (from the river or tank whence they have been taken to the sacrificial compound). When they are seen (by the Hotar) he repeats: prati yad âpô dris'rom (10, 30, 13). When the waters approach the Châtvala, then he repeats the verse: âdhenavah igrasa (5, 43). When the (Vasativari and Ekadhana) waters are joined together (in the Chamasa of the Hotar and Mastravaruna) then the Hotar repeats: va anâ yanti (2, 35, 3).

(To illustrate the origin of this rite, the following story is related.)

Both kinds of waters, those called Vasativari, which were brought the day previous (to the Soma feast), and those called *Ekadhana*s, which were brought in the very morning (of the Soma feast), were once jealous of one another, as to which should first carry off the sacrifice. Bhṛigu, becoming aware of their jealousy, bade them to be quiet, with the verse: va anâ yanti, &c. He restored peace among them. The waters of him who, having such a knowledge, restores peace among them (in this manner) will carry his sacrifice.

adhvanyu), that the Adhvaryu should first throw one stalk (ekadha) into the jug, and thus consecrate it. Thence these waters are called *ekadhana*s. The Neshitar brings the wife who holds a jug in her right hand. After all have come, the Adhvaryu throws one stalk of kusâ into the waters, and after having repeated the mantra, dhruvâ, he puts four snuvalulls of ghee on the stalk, and sacrifices with it. The Adhvaryu brings the Chamasa of the Hotar and that of the Mastravaruna in which the Ekadhana waters are, into mutual contact, and pours the Vasativari water jug near it. He pours water from it into the Chamasa of the Hotar, and leads it into that of the Mastravaruna, and again from that of the Mastravaruna into that of the Chamasa. When the waters poured by the Adhvaryu from this jug are near the Hotar, the latter asks the Adhvaryu thrice, adhvanyo va apt. Hast thou brought the waters, Adhvaryu? Instead of this we find in the Kaushitaki Br. (12, 1,) अध्वर्यवो यो वाह which means exactly the same.

When (both kinds of waters) the Vasatīvanis and the Ekadhanûs are poured together in the Chamaśa the Hotar, he repeats : âpo na derir upayanti (1, 2). Then the Hotar asks the Adhvaryu : hast thou obtained the waters ? For the waters are the sacrifice (The question therefore means :) hast thou obtained <sup>5</sup> the sacrifice ? The Adhvaryu answers : these (waters) are completely obtained.<sup>6</sup> This means : see these waters.

(The Hotar now addresses to the Adhvaryu the following words :) "With these waters you will squeeze, O Adhvaryu, for Indra, the Soma, the honey-like, the rain-giving, the inevitably-successful making <sup>7</sup> at the end, after having included so many ceremonies (from the first to the last); (you will squeeze) for him (Indra), who is joined by the Vasus, Rudras, Adityas, Ribhus, who has power, who has food, who is joined by Brihaspati, and by all gods ; (you will squeeze the Soma) of whom Indra (formerly) drank, slew his enemies, and overcame his adversaries. Om !" (After having spoken these words) the Hotar rises from his seat (to show his respect). Respect is to be paid to the waters rising, just as people rise to salute a distinguished person who is coming near. Thence the waters are besluted by rising from the seat, and turning towards them. For in the same manner people salute a distinguished man. Therefore the Hotarist go behind the waters for saluting them. In the Hotar, even if another one brings the offering, has (in this way) the power of earning merit. Therefore the repeater (of the mantra) should go behind them. When going behind them, he repeats: ambayo gantya adhi abhih (1, 23, 16) i. e. the waters which are the friends of the sacrificers become (various) ways mixing their (own) liquid with honey. (In the word madhu, honey, there is an allusion to Soma.) If a man who has not tasted (formerly) the soma juice, should wish to earn fame (he ought to repeat this verse). If he wishes for beauty, or for the acquirement of sacred knowledge (Brahma-knowledge), he should repeat the verse, amir yā na soṇe (1, 23, 17). If he wishes for cattle, he should repeat, apo deri upahraṇe (1, 23, 18). Should he when repeating all these verses go behind (the waters), he would obtain fulfilment of (all) these wishes. He who knows this, obtains these wishes.

When the Vasatirari and Ekadhamās are being put (on the Veda) then he repeats, inā āpmaniracatir te dhanā (10, 30, 14): and with the verse, āpmanirah (10, 30, 15), he concludes when they are finally put (on the Veda).

The libations from the Upāṁśu and Antaryāma Gārhastya. The healing in and out of the air by the Hotar.

The Pratara-Anuvāka is the head of the sacrifice (soma sacrifice). The Upāṁśu and Antaryāma Grahas<sup>8</sup> are the air inhaled (prāṇa) and the exhaled (apāna<sup>9</sup>). Speech is the weapon. Therefore the Hotar should not make his voice heard before the libations from the Upāṇś'u and Antaryāma grahas are poured (into the fire). Should the Hotar make his voice heard before these two li-<sup>8</sup> Upāṇś'u and Antaryāma are names of vessels from which the two first Soma libations are poured into the Ahavaniya, as soon as the pice is obtained by squeezing. Both libations precede those from the other Soma vessels (Amdhavyaya, 3) poured in the fire of the Uttarā Vēdī, are not accompanied by mantras recited by the Hotar, as all other libations are, but they are performed by the Adhvaryu, whilst the Hotar is drawing in breath, or holding out the air which was breathed in. When at the first, the libation from the Upāṇś'u graha is poured into the fire, when doing the latter, that from the Antaryāma graha is 2. The Adhvaryu repeats some sacrificial formulas (see the Taitt. Sāhita 1, 4, 2, 3), whilst the Hotar mutters only the two four-syllabled technical names of such formulas repeated by the Hotar (ugāda) which are mentioned here (2, 21), and also in the 4 Sū. Sūtras (5, 2).

In the books belonging to the Yajurveda, we meet the terms upāṇś'u graha, and upāṇś'u pātra, and likewise antaryāma graha and antaryāma pātra. These terms require some explanation. The pātra is a vessel, resembling a large woollen jar with but a slight cavity on the top, in which the Soma juice is filled. The graha is a small cup, like a saucer, made of earth, and put over the cavity of the Soma vessel, in order to cover the "precious" pice. The bottom of it is first put in water, and a gold leaf placed beneath it. There are as many grahas as there are pātras, they are together just as cup and saucer, and are regarded as inseparable. The word graha is, however, taken often in the sense of the word naming both graha and pātra. On the different names of grahas required at the three great libations, see the Grahaśūtra of the Śatap. Brāhma, 4, and the commentary on the Taittiriya Sū. (vol. i. p. 593-693 ed. Cowell). I am in possession of several grahas and pātras.

en poured into the fire, then he would carry off the vital airs of the sacrificer by means of the speech, which is a weapon. For (if he do so) some one should say to the Hotar (afterwards), that he has made the vital airs of the sacrificer go off, (and he Hotar) would lose his life<sup>10</sup>. It happens always so. Thence the Hotar should not make his voice heard, before the libations from the Upâñs'u and Anavam grahas are poured into the fire. He should, when the libation from the Upâñs'u graha is given, mutter the words: "Keep in the air inhaled! Sváhâ! (I emit) thee, O speech of good call for pleasing the sun (which is thy presiding deity)." He should then draw in the air, and say (with a low voice): "O breath, O goest in (my body), keep in (my body) the breath!" He should, when the libation from the Anavam graha is given, mutter the words: "keep in the air exhaled! Sváhâ! (I emit) thee, O speech of good call for pleasing the sun." (After having spoken these words) he should hale out the air, and say, "O air, haled out, keep this very air (which is haled out, in my body)." By the words "(I emit) thee (O speech!) for the air, circulating (in my body)," he then touches<sup>11</sup> the stone used to squeeze the Soma juice for the Upâñs'u graha, and makes his voice heard. This stone to squeeze the Soma juice for the Upâñs'u graha is the soul. The Hotar after having put (thus) the vital airs in himself, emits his voice, and attains his full age (100 years). Likewise does he who has such a knowledge.

(The Hotar has no share in the Bahish-param meal. The Soma libation for Mitrâ-Varunâ to be mixed with milk).

(After the libations from the Upâmsu and taryâma have been poured into the fire, the Soma is squeezed, and poured in the different vessels—gâṇas—such as Âindhraṇyara, &c., which are then kept in readiness for making the libations, five of the priests—Adhvaryu, Prastotar, Pratihartar, Udgatar, and Brahmâ, one holding the hand of the other—samarârabdhâ—walk in the direction of the Châtrâla, and ultimately take their seats for performing the ceremony of the Stotra, i. e. chanting a sacred verse—a Sâman. Now the question is, whether the Hotar is allowed to walk or not at the same time that the other priests just mentioned do so.)

At that (occasion, when the priests walk) † (the theologians) ask, whether he (the Hotar) ought to walk or not (together with the others). So say, he ought to walk; for this meal<sup>12</sup> in honour of the Bahish-paramânu-stotra<sup>13</sup> (which is about performed by the Sâma singers) is enjoyed equally both gods and men; thence (both gods and men) participate in it. But those who say so are not to be attended to. Should he walk (along with the Sâma singers), then he would make the Rik (which is recited by the Hotar) follow the Sâman. (If any should see him do so) he at that occasion should rebuke him: "the Hotar here has been behind the Sâma singers, and ceded his fame to the Udgâtar; he has fallen from his place and will (in future) also fall in it." So it always happens to the Hotar (he walks after the Sâma singers).<sup>14</sup> Therefore he ought to remain where he is sitting, and repeat the following Anumantrecita<sup>15</sup> verse: "which Soma might here at the sacrifice, placed on the sacred grass, be dear, belong to the gods, of this we also have a share." Thus the credit of the Hotar is not deduced from that Soma draught (which is drunk by the Sâma singers after the Bahish-pavamâna Riti is over). Then (after having repeated the above mentioned) he ought to repeat: "thou art the mouth (of the sacrifice); might I become the most (first among my people) also! For the Bahupavānā draught is the very mouth of the sacrifice (sacrificial personage).” He who has such a knowledge, becomes the mouth of his own people, the chief among his own people.

Notes. The five lines, are for the nine Pavamâna-stotra verses, following ones सान्, साम् सुवा, इडा, वाक्, and आ (for the 11 verses).

The Rik is regarded as a solid foundation on which the Sâman is recited. See the passage in the Chândogya-Upanishad (1, 6, 1), quoted by Sayana: "The Rik is the earth, the Sâman Agni, (the fire is put) on the earth, the Sâman is placed over Rik (as its foundation); thence the Sâman is sung placed on the Rik." This means, before the singers can sing the Sâman, which serves for this purpose, is first to be repeated in the Rik which it is in Rigveda. This is generally done. See besides loc. cit. 23.

An Asura woman, Dirghajihvi (long-tongued) licked the morning libation of the gods. It consequently became inebriating everywhere. The gods wished to remedy this, and said to Mitra and Varuna: “ye two ought to take off this (the inebriating quality from the Soma).” They said: “Yes, but let us choose a boon from you.” The gods said: Choose. They chose at the morning libation curd of milk whey (payasīśā) in milk. This is their everlasting share; that is, the boon chosen by them. What has been made by her (the Asura woman) inebriating, that was made good (again) by the curd; for both Mitra and Varuna removed, through this curd, the inebriating quality, as it were (from the Soma juice).<sup>16</sup>

The libations (saranāni) of the gods did not hold (they were about falling down). The gods saw rice cakes (Parodāśas). They portioned them for each libation, that they should hold together the libations. Thence their libations were held together. When, therefore (at the libations) rice cakes are put out for holding together the libations, the grains offered by the sacrificers are then (really) put together. The gods made these rice cakes one (the Soma offering). Thence it is called gauś'a (from puro before). •

<sup>16</sup> The translation of this sentence offers some difficulty. I here sayana, who refers the one asvā to Dirghajihvi, the to payasīśā. We have here an allusion to mixing the Soma with milk (dadhyaśā) in order to make it less inebriating. The put in it, are Mitra's and Varuna's everlasting share. By this which is here told the author tries to account for the fact that the libation for Mitra-Varuna is mixed with curds of milk whey present the Soma is not generally mixed with sour milk. A quantity of water is taken in order to weaken its strength.

About this they say: for each libation one ought to portion out rice cakes, one of eight potsherds (all put on eight kapálas) at the morning, one of eleven potsherds at the midday, and one of twelve at the evening libation. For the form of the libations is defined<sup>17</sup> by the metres. But this (opinion) is not to be attended to. For all the rice cakes, which are portioned out for each libation, are Indra's. Hence they ought to be put (at all three libations) on eleven potsherds only.<sup>18</sup>

About this they say: one ought to eat of such a portion of a rice cake which is not besmeared with melted butter in order to protect the Soma draught. For Indra slew with melted butter as his thunderbolt ura. But this (opinion) is not to be attended to.<sup>19</sup> If the offering (besmeared with butter) is a liquid mixed (into the fire), and the Soma draught is such liquid sprinkled (into the fire). (Both—Ghee and ura—being thus of the same nature) the sacrificer should eat of any part of the offering (whether besmeared with ghee or not).

<sup>19</sup> The Soma is not to be brought into contact with anything that is prohibited to have been an instrument of murder, as in this case the melted butter was.

These offerings, viz. melted butter, fried grain of barley (dhāmāḥ), karambha,<sup>20</sup> pariāpa,<sup>21</sup> purōḍā and payasyā,<sup>22</sup> come by themselves to the sacrificer from every direction. To him who has such knowledge come these (offerings) by themselves.

24.

(Harish-paṇkti. Akshara-paṇkti. Narāśaṃsa-paṇkti. Sarvama-paṇkti.)

He who knows the offering consisting of five parts prospers by means of this offering. The offer consisting of five parts (harish-paṇkti) comprises (the following five things): fried grains of barley karambha, pariāpa, purōḍāśa, and payasyā.

He who knows the Akshara-paṇkti sacrifice (offering of five syllables) prospers by means of this very sacrifice. The Akshara-paṇkti comprises (the following five syllables): su, mat, i, rag, de.<sup>23</sup> He who has such a knowledge, prospers by the sacrifice consisting of five syllables.

He who knows the Narāśaṃsa-paṇkti<sup>24</sup> sacrifice

<sup>20</sup> This is a kind of pap, prepared of curds and barley juice (or by kneading both together). Instead of curds, slightly melted (sarpis) might be taken. See Katyayana Śrauta Sūtra, 9, 1, 17.

<sup>23</sup> These five syllables are to be muttered by the Hotar when making japa (the uttering of mantras with a low inaudible voice) after the harish-paṇkti is over. They, no doubt, correspond to the five parts of the harish-paṇkti offering.

<sup>24</sup> This means: the assemblage of five Narāśaṃsas. Narāśaṃsa is, as is well known, a name of Agni, and of some other gods, when with the Narāśaṃsa of the Zend-Avesta (see Haug's notes on the Sacred Language, Writings, and Religion of the Parsis, p. 232). According to the explanation given by Sayana, who prosper by means of it. For two Narāśaṁsa offerings belong to the morning, two to the midday, and one to the evening libation. This is the Narāśaṁsa-paṅkti sacrifice. He who has such a knowledge prospers by it.

He who knows the Sarana-paṅkti sacrifice prospers by it. This Sarana-paṅkti sacrifice consists of a animal which is sacrificed the day previous to the festival (pasturāpyasathā), the three libations (avartā), and the animal to be sacrificed after the festival is over (pasturātā antthiyoh). This is the Sarana-paṅkti sacrifice. He who has such a knowledge prospers by means of the Sarana-paṅkti sacrifice.

The Yajña-mantra for the harish-paṅkti is :<sup>25</sup> Know, Indra with his two yellow horses eat the three grains (first part of the harish-paṅkti), with Pushan the harish-paṅkti; may the par-rāpa (be enjoyed) by Sarasvatī and Bhārati, and the cake (apapa-parodasa) by Indra! The two yellow horses (hava) of Indra are the Rik and Sāman. Pushan, a guardian of flocks, the divine herdsman; cattle, and harish-paṅkti is food.<sup>26</sup> As to the words: Sarasvatī and Bhārati, Sarasvatī is speech, of the masters (Acharvas), the word Narāśaṁsa, i. e. belonging to Narāśaṁsa means the soma cups (chanāsa). After one has drunk out of them sprinkled water over them, and put them down. For this reason they belong to Narāśaṁsa. At the morning and midday libations the soma cups (chanāsa) are filled twice each and at the evening libation only once. Thus the soma cups are used during the day of libations five times Narāśaṁsas. This is the Narāśaṁsa-paṅkti sacrifice.

It is not in the Saṁhita. As it stands here it appears to have been taken from another Sākhā. For whilst we found above five cups of the harish-paṅkti mentioned, here in this mantra we have only four, the pagasā being omitted.

<sup>25</sup> According to Sayana the meaning of the latter sentence is: Pushan is called by this name from his feeding (push) the cattle and harish-paṅkti is called food from being itself the nourishment.

and Bhūvata (bearer) means vital air. Parirūpa food, and apīpa is sharpness of senses.

(By repeating this Yājñá-mántra) the Hotar makes the sacrificer join those deities, assume the same form, and occupy the same place with them. It is (the Hotar) who has such a knowledge become (also) joined to the best beings and obtains the highest bliss.

The Yājñá-mántra for the Svishṭakṛit of the Purodāśa offering at each libation is "Agni, eat offering."<sup>27</sup>

इविरग्ने वीहीत्यनुमवन् पुरोडाशः स्विष्टकृते यजत्यवसाने अग्रे देवानां होतासु तमेतस्मिं यज्ञे स्तुत्यः प्रत्यानित्ये धिरेव स स इविरग्ने वीहीति इविषाग्निं प्रीत्वा ऽ यातिमुमुचे तयो एवैविविद्वत् ता इविरग्ने वीहीत्येव इविषाग्निं प्रीत्वा यातिमुच्यत एतैर्हिया अमराकामर्दना स्वर्गं लोकं जग्मसानेतस्मिं यज्ञे स्तुत्यः प्रत्यानित्ये धिरे स्तुत्यो इविरग्ने वीहीति इविषाग्निं प्रीत्वा ऽ यातिमुमुचिर । तथेवं विद्वान् होता इविरग्ने वीहीत्येव इविषाग्निं प्रीत्वा यातिमुच्यत । तस्मिन् वा एतानि पडक्षराणि इविरग्ने वीहीति पठद्भ्यो ऽ अमाज्ञा यदि ऽ खदाग्रनैवात्मानं निष्क्रीयानृणां भूत्वा यजते स एषा ऽ यतः पायवणं मयः

i. e. The Hotar uses, as Yājñá of the Svishṭakṛit offering, the Purodāśa which accompanies the libations, the formula "Agni, eat the offering."

(On the origin of this formula the following is reported.) Aśvina, the son of Praśavya, was (once) the Hotar of the gods. In that abode of light, Death (one of the gods) attached himself to him. "Agni is Death. He pleased Agni with an offering, repeated, "Agni, eat of the offering," and was released.

(There is another story reported on the origin of this formula which runs as follows:—)

The gods went by means of their innate light and splendour to the celestial world. In that abode of light, Death attached himself to by repeating this mantra, Aratsâra (an ancient son) obtained Agni's favour and conquered the ghost world. The same happens to him who has the knowledge, and who knowing it has this aratsâra offered (i. e. the sacrificer), or repeats the Aratsâra-mantra belonging to it (i. e. the Hotar).

25.

Story of a race run by the gods for obtaining the right to drink first from a Soma libation. The Amṛitavapa Gāha. Explanation of a certain custom in the Bhāratas.

The gods could not agree as to who of them should first taste the Soma juice. They tallly wished to do so, in saying, "might I drink first, might I not?" They came (at length) to an understanding. They said, "Well, let us run a race<sup>1</sup>. He of us who shall be victor, shall first taste the Soma juice." They did. Among all those who ran the race, Vānu arrived at the goal; next Indra; next Mitra and Varuṇa, next the Asvins. Indra thinking he would be on hand with Vānu, ran as fast as he could and) fell down close to him. He then said, "We both have (arrived at the goal) together; let both of us be winners of the race." Vāyu answered, "No! I (alone) am winner of the race." Indra said, "Let the third part (of the prize) be mine; let both of us be winners of the race!" Vāyu said, "No! I alone am winner of the race." Indra said, "Let the fourth part (of the prize) be mine; let us both be winners of the race." To this Vāyu agreed, and invested him with the right to the fourth part (of the first Soma presented). Thence Indra is entitled only to the fourth part; but Vāyu to three parts. If Indra and Vāyu won the race together; as followed Mitra and Varuṇa together, and then As'vins.

<sup>2</sup> Aratsâra (aratsâra aratsâra) consists of six syllables; the soul has six parts,--six-fold. Thus the sacrificer releases (by reciting this formula) through a soul (represented by this formula) his soul and clears off his debts. This is the mantra of Aratsâra of Prasavata.

According to the order in which they arrive at the goal, they obtained their shares in the Soma juice. The first portion belongs to Indra and Vāyu; then follows that of Mitra and Varuṇa, and lastly that of the As'vins.

The Aindriyāra Soma jar (graha) is that in which Indra enjoys the fourth part. Just this (fourth part as belonging to Indra) was seen (by means of revelation) by a Rishi. He then repeated the mantra appropriate to it, nigutrāṇ indrah sārathīr, i. e. Vāyu (and) Indra his carriage driver! Thence we now-a-days the Bharatas<sup>3</sup> spoil their enemies (conquered in the battle field), those charioteers<sup>2</sup> size the booty, say, in imitation of that example set by Indra, who won his race only by becoming the charioteer (of Vāyu), "the fourth part (of the booty is ours) alone."<sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Nigutrāṇ is a frequent epithet of Vāyu, see the hymn 2 meaning, one who has teams, oxen, cows, &c.

26.

On the meaning of the libations from the Aindra-vāyava, Maitrāvurūpa, and Asvina Grahas. The two Anuvākyās for the Aindra-vāyava Graha.

The Soma jars (graha) which belong to two anuvākyās are the vital airs. The Aindra-vāyava jar is speech and breath, the Maitrāvurūpa jar is eye and mind, the Asvina jar is ear and soul. Some (sacrificial priests) use two verses in the Anushtubh metre : Puroṇuvākyās, and two in the Gāyatri metre as anuvākyās when offering (the Soma juice) from the Aindra-vāyava jar. As the Aindra-vāyava jar represents speech and breath, thus the proper metres Anushtubh being speech, and Gāyatri breath) will be applied. But this (practice) ought not to be observed. For where the Puroṇuvākyā mantra exceeds (in syllables) the Yājyā mantra,<sup>5</sup> there is no success in the sacrifice, but where the Yājyā exceeds the Puroṇuvākyā (in syllables) there is success.

(Likewise success is not obtained) by using the same metres (for Anuvākyā and Yājyā mantras). In order to obtain any desire whatever, referring to speech and breath, the Hotar ought to do so (i. e.

to repeat two verses in the Anuṣṭubh metre, Anuvākyās, and two in the Gāyatrī metre as Yāgyamantras). In this way (all he desires) will be fulfilled. The first Puroṇuvākyā belongs to Vāc (1, 2, 1), the second to Indra and Vāyu (1, 2, 1). By that Yāgyā<sup>1</sup> which belongs to Vāyu, the H<sub>o</sub> makes (produces) breath (in the sacrificer). <sup>1</sup> Vāyu (wind) is breath, and by means of that p<sub>i</sub> (foot) of the Indra-Vāyu-Yāgyā mantra, wh<sup>o</sup> refers to Indra, he makes speech. For speech is Indra's. He (thus) obtains every desire (grant<sup>ed</sup> which refers to breath and speech, without producing any inequality (by having the one set of mantras too long, the other too short) in the sacrifice.<sup>2</sup>

The Soma offerings belonging to two deities are the vital airs; <sup>3</sup> but they are offered in the same way for both (deities); for the reason is, that (all) the vital airs are of one and the same nature. They are sacrificed from two <sup>4</sup> grahas (jars with small cups) for the vital airs are a pair (such as the eye

is a good which has knowledge; ruler of the eye,

This formula resembles very much one of the most sacred prayers the Parsees, viz. as hem vohû vahustem aste which is particularly cited when the Zota priest (the Hotar of the Brahmans) is aking the Homa (Soma) juice; vohû is etymologically vasu, which ery frequently used in formulas repeated by the Hotar before he the sacrificial food; vahustem is the superlative of vohû, convey-the same sense as priâvasu.

In this translation I followed the reading वाक्पा. One of my manuscripts and Sâvâna read वाक्या, which appears to be only a susceplum for वाक्पा.

only being thus put twice.

"eye with the mind call (also) me! The divine Rishis," &c. (just as above).

(By the words): "This is a good, a good which is lasting; here is a good, a good which is lasting; me is a good, a good which is lasting; ruler of the sense of hearing! <sup>8</sup> protect my sense of hearing the Hotar drinks Soma from the As'vina graha (Then he repeats): "The sense of hearing with the soul is called hither; may the sense of hearing with the soul call (also) me! The divine Rishis &c. (just as above).

When drinking from the Aindra-vâyava graha, the Hotar facing the cup turns its mouth towards his face (and drinks); for the inhaled and exhaled air are in his front. In the same manner he drinks from the Mâtrâvaruṇa jar; for the two eyes are in his front. When drinking from the As'vina jar, he turns its mouth<sup>9</sup> round about; for men and animals by speech sounding from all sides.

(On the repetition of the two Yâjyâ mantras for libation from the Deidetya-grahas. No Anurashthan allowed. On the Agur for those Yâjyâs).

The Soma jars belonging to two deities are the vairs. The Hotar ought to repeat the (two) Yaj mantras (for the offering poured out of such a jar.

<sup>9</sup> The Aindra-vâyava graha has one, the Mâtrâvaruṇa two mouths. The drinking from the two latter ones is described as pratyancham, that is, to take the graha in one's hands, so that one mouth faces the mouth of the drinker, and when drinking to turn the lower part of the vessel aside.

The As'vina graha has three mouths. The drinking from it is described as prâkham, that is, to turn its three mouths successively after the other to one's mouth when drinking, so that the whole vessel becomes turned round. (Oral information.)

without stopping (at the end of the first mantra) in order to keep together the vital airs and to prevent their being cut off. The Soma jars belonging to two deities are the vital airs. (Thence) the Hotar should not make the Anuvashatkâra (i. e. not pronounce the formula: "Agni, eat the Soma!"<sup>10</sup> with the formula vaushat! after the Yâjyâ has been repeated). If he does so, then he stops the (circulation of the) vital airs which are not stopped (in any other way). For this formula (the anuvashatkâra) is a stop. (If one should serve a Hotar repeat the Anuvashatkâra) one ought to tell him, that he had stopped the vital airs, which are not stopped (otherwise), and that he would consequently lose his life. This always happens. Hence he ought not to repeat that formula (the anuvashatkâra) when pouring oblations from the Soma jars belonging to two deities.

They ask, (what is the reason that) the Maitrâvaruṇa priest gives twice his assent that the Yâjyâ mantra should be repeated, and calls twice (upon the Hotar) to do so, whilst the Hotar declares his readiness to repeat the Yâjyâ mantra only once, and concludes (with) pronouncing twice, Vaushat! vaushat! (instead of doing it once)? What is the meaning of the Hotar's declaration of his readiness to repeat the Yâjyâ mantra<sup>11</sup> (that he repeats it only

<sup>11</sup> The words "assent that the Yâjyâ mantra," &c. and "declaration of his readiness to repeat," &c. are only a translation of the śāgur, stating its full import. After the Hotar has repeated two Puronuvâkyâ mantras, mentioned on p. 130, he is addressed by the Maitrâvaruṇa priest in two formulas, following immediately one another, which are called Praisha-mant 2, i. e. mantras containing an order to repeat. Both commence by the formula: Hotâ vaushat! i. e. may the Hotar repeat the Yâjyâ mantra. The Hotar is obliged to repeat both Yâjyâ mantras uno tenore without stopping, he can declare his readiness to respond to the order given by the Maitrâvaruṇa only before he commences to repeat the first Yâjyâ mantras. His readiness he declares by the words once at the beginning, and not before the second mantra) ?

(The answer is ) The Soma jars belonging to two deities are the vital airs. The Agur formula is the thunderbolt. If therefore the Hotar were to put between (the two Yājyâ mantras) the Agur formula, he would deprive the sacrificer of his life (as if striking him) with (a weapon like) the thunderbolt. (If one should observe a Hotar doing so) one ought to tell him, that for having, by means of the Agur weapon, deprived the sacrificer of his life, he himself would also lose his life. Thus it always happens. (Therefore) the Hotar ought not to repeat the Agur formula in the midst of (the two Yājyâ mantras). •

ये३ यजामहे. This is the āgur of the Hotar. That ये is to be pronounced with pluti, i. e. with three moras, is remarked by Pāṇini 8, 2, 88 (ये यज्ञकर्मणि). Patanjali, in his Mahābhāṣya, explains ये as an elliptical expression, implying the whole verse. ये देवाहो दिवेकादशस्य (Rigveda 1, 139, 11). On the Agur formula, see As'val. Śrauta Sūtras 1, 5, where it is said that the Agur formula : ये यजामहे, is required at the so-called Prayājas, (at the first and fifth), and principally 5, 5. In this latter passage the rule is given to which the author of the Brāhmaṇa refers, that the two Yājyās for the Aindra-vāyava graha require two Praishas, i. e. orders, one Agur, and two Vashatkāras; whilst the two other grahas, the Maitravaruna and the As'vina, require each only one Yājyā, one Praisha, and one Vashatkāra. See also the Sāṅkhāyana Sūtras 7, 2. The formula ये यजामहे is always at the beginning of the Yājyā, as well as the words होता यज्ञन् at that of the Praisha mantra. The proper order to repeat is conveyed at the end of the latter by the words होतयंज i. e. Hotar, repeat the Yājyā mantra, whereupon the Hotar repeats the Yājyā. The repetition of this formula appears to go back to a very remote antiquity. For we find both the formula and its technical term in the Zend-Avesta. Yajān is completely identical with the Zend Yazamāiē, which always precedes the names of Ahura-mazda, the archangels, and other divine beings, and the souls of the deceased, when homage is paid to them. The technical term for repeating this formula is : ā-ghare (the same as ā-gut). See the Fravardin Yasht 50, kahe no idha nānā āghairyāt, i. e. to whose name of us will he pay homage by repeating Yazamāiē i. e. we worship. That the word āghairyāt has this meaning, is well known to the Parsi Desturs.

And further the Maitrâvaruṇa priest is the mind of the sacrifice, and the Hotar its speech. Speech speaks only when instigated by the mind (to do so). If any one utters speech different from what he thinks, such a speech is liked only by the Asuras, but not by the Devas. The Agur formula of the Hotar is contained in the two Agur formulas (hotâ yakshaṭ) pronounced at this (occasion) by the Maitrâvaruṇa priest.

The mantras repeated for the offerings to the Ritus<sup>12</sup> (seasons) are the vital airs. By performing •

<sup>12</sup> There are twelve Grahas for the Ritus, from which the Soma juice is offered in three sections; first six, then four, and lastly two are taken. The mantras required are to be found among the so-called praiśha sūktas. See As'val. Śraut. S. 5, 8. Sāṅkhāyana 7, 8. About the particulars of the Ritu Yājās see Taittiriya Saṁhita 1, 4, 14 and 6, 5, 3, with Sāyana's commentary ed. Cowell, i., p. 643-46. The Yājyâ mantras and the Praishas for the Ritu offerings are essentially the same. All (12) Praishas are given by the Maitrâvaruṇa. The first is addressed to the Hotar, and runs as follows:

हेता यज्ञर्दिद्रं होत्रात्सजूर्दिव आ पृथिव्या ऋतुना सोमं पिबतु
हेतर्यज्ञ i e. May the Hotar repeat the Yājyâ mantra for Indra! May he drink Soma from the cup of the Hotar with the Ritu! The Yājyâ contains the same words, with the only difference that instead of yakshaṭ the appropriate formula ये रे यजामहे is used.

In the second Rituyâja which is repeated by the Potar, the Marutas are invited to drink with the Ritu from the offering of the Potar. The third belongs to Tvashṭar and the wives of the gods. It is repeated by the Neshtar (ये रे यजामहे द्यावे नेष्टास्वद्या सज-निमा सजूर्दिवानां पत्नीभिर्ऋतुना सोमं पिबतु).

The fourth which is repeated by the Agniḥhra belongs to Agni. The fifth belongs to Indra-Brahmâ, and is repeated by the Brâhmathem, they (the priests) provide the sacrificer with vital airs. By repeating six mantras containing the singular ṛitunā to the Ritus, they provide the sacrificer with the air inhaled (prāna); by repeating four mantras containing the plural ṛitubhiḥ they provide him with the air exhaled (apāna); by repeating, at last, two mantras containing the singular ṛitunā they provide him with the circulating vital air (vyāna). For the vital airs are three-fold, viz. air inhaled, air exhaled, and the air circulating in the body. (These Ritu offerings being made in three sections) in the first (series of mantras when six are given) the singular ṛitunā is used; in the second the plural ṛitubhiḥ; and in the third the singular again ṛitunā are applied. (This is done) to keep together the vital airs, to prevent them from being cut off.

nāchhansi. The sixth is repeated for Mitra-Varuṇa (who are called प्रशास्तारौ) by the Maitrāvaruṇa. These six mantras contain the formula ऋतुना सोमं पिबतु.

The seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth Ritusyajas which are repeated by the Hotar, Potar, Neshtar and Achhāvāka respectively, belong to deva dravinodāh (a name of Agni). These four mantras contain the term ऋतुभिः सोमं पिबतु. The eleventh and twelfth Ritusyajas are repeated by the Hotar with the term ऋतुना सोमं. The eleventh belongs to the Asvins as the two Adhvaryus; the twelfth to Agni Gṛihapati.

The first Soma libation for the Ritus is poured from the Hotra-pātra, the second from the Potra-pātra, the third from that of the Neshtar, the fourth from that of the Agnid, the fifth from the Brāhmaṇa-pātra, the sixth from that of the Prasāstar (Maitrāvaruṇa).

The seventh, eighth and ninth from the Pātras of the Hotar, Potar, and Neshtar respectively. The tenth libation is not poured from one of these Pātras already mentioned, but in addition to the Pātras of the Hotar, Potar, and Neshtar, a "fourth vessel" (turiyam pātram) is mentioned, which is called amartyam, i. e. immortal. The devo dravinodāh (Agni) is called upon to prepare the Soma draught himself and repeat himself the Yājñ. The eleventh libation is poured from the Adhvaryava-pātra, and the twelfth from the Gārhapatya. (Sapta-Mautra).

The Ritu Yâjâs<sup>13</sup> are the vital airs. (Thence) the Hotar ought not to repeat the Anuvashathâra. For the Ritus have no end ; one (always) follows the other. Were the Hotar to repeat this formula (the anuvashathâra) when making the offerings to the Ritus, he would bring the endless seasons (their endless succession) to a stand still. For this formula is a stand still. Who (therefore) should repeat it would bring the Ritus to a stand still, and difficulty would be created (for the sacrifice). This always happens. Thence he ought not to repeat that formula, when repeating the mantras for the offerings to the Ritus.

(The Hotar eats the Purodâs'a and drinks from the Grahâs.)

The Soma jars belonging to two deities, are the vital airs, and cattle is food (ilâ). (Thence) after having drunk from the Soma jars belonging to two deities, he calls Ilâ (food).<sup>14</sup> Ilâ is cattle. He thus calls cattle, and (consequently) provides the sacrificer with cattle.

They ask, Should the Hotar first eat the food (remainder of the Purodâs'a offering previous to the Soma offering) which he has in his hand, or should he drink<sup>15</sup> first from his Soma cup (chamasa)? (The answer is) he should first eat the food which he has in his hand, then he may drink Soma from his cup. In consequence of the circumstance that he first drinks from the Soma jars (grahas) belonging to two deities, the Soma draught is first (before he takes any other food) enjoyed by him. Therefore (after having tasted already the Soma juice by drinking from the Grahas belonging to two deities) he ought to eat the food (Purodâs'a) which he has in his hand, and then drink from his own cup (chamasa). In this way he takes (for himself) nourishment of both kinds (food and drink).

<sup>13</sup> The same speculations on the nature of the Ritusyâjâs, viz. that they are the vital airs, we find in the Kaushîtaki Brâhm. 13, 9, and in the Gopatha Brâhm. 8, 7.

<sup>14</sup> The term used for "drinking" is bhaksayati, which is also the common word for eating. That bhaks must have been used already in very ancient times for "drinking" the Soma juice, is shown in a passage in the Homa Yasht of the Zend-Avesta (see Yasna 10, 13.) yoše tē būdha haoma zāirē gavā irištahē bakshaiti, i. e. who enjoys thee O Homa, (Soma) when being dead (by bruising and squeezing) in the yellow milk. (The Homa juice of the Parsis is of yellow colour, and actually mixed with a little fresh milk).

By taking both Soma draughts (from the graha and the chamasa) he obtains (for himself) nourishment (of all kinds).

(The Hotar pours some drops of Soma from the Graha into his Chamasa; the meaning of this proceeding is given in the following :)

The Soma jars belonging to two deities are the vital airs; the Chamasa of the Hotar is the soul. By pouring drops from the Soma jars belonging to two deities in the Chamasa of the Hotar, the Hotar puts (in his own body) the vital airs for obtaining his full age. He who has such a knowledge attains to his full age (100 years).

31.

The Asuras performed at the sacrifice all that the Devas performed. The Asurâs became thus of equal

<sup>16</sup> See about this particular part of the Soma service, As'val. Śr. S. 5, 9, which passage is quoted by Śāyana in his commentary on the Aitareya Brâhmanam. The three formulas which constitute the Silent Praise (as mentioned here) form also with the exception of the ryâhritîs (the three great words bhûr, bhuvah, svah) a chant called the Jyotugîta, which is sung by the Udgâtar when holding the power (with the Devas), and did not yield to them (in any respect). Thereupon the Devas saw (by their mental eyes) the tishnīm s'aṁsa, i. e. silent praise.<sup>17</sup> The Asuras (not knowing it) did not perform this ceremony) of the Devas. This "silent praise" is the silent (latent) essence (of the mantras). Whatever weapon (raja) the Devas raised against the Asuras, the latter got (always) aware of them.<sup>18</sup> The Devas then saw (by their mental eyes) the "silent praise" as their weapon; they raised it, but the Asuras did not get aware of it. The Devas aimed with it a blow at the Asuras and defeated the latter, who did not perceive (the weapon which was aimed at them). Thereupon the Devas became masters of the Asuras. He who has such a knowledge becomes master of his enemy, adversary, and hater.

The Devas thinking themselves to be victors spread the sacrifice (i. e. made preparations for performing it). The Asuras came near it intending to disturb it. When the Devas saw the most daring (of the Asuras) draw near from all quarters, they said "let us finish this sacrifice, lest the Asuras slay us. So they did. They finished it by repeating the "silent praise." (The words which constitute the "silent praise" now follow.) By the words, bhūr agnir jyotir jyotiṣa, they finished the Ajya and Pra-uga Shastras (the two principal liturgies at the morning libation). By the words, indro jyotir bhuvo jyotir indrah, they finished the Nishkevalya and Marutvatīya Shastras both through which the Soma juice is strained (it is called das'ā-paratra) in his hand. The metre of the three formulas (if all are taken together) is Gāyatri. The Rishi to whom it was revealed is said to be Pushkala (Sāma prayoga).

(the two principal liturgies at the midday libation). By the words, sūrya jyotir jyotiḥ svah sūryah, they finished the Vaisvadeva and Agnimâruta Shastras (the two liturgies of the evening libation).

Thus they finished the sacrifice by the "silent praise." Having thus finished the sacrifice by means "of the silent praise" they obtained the last mantra required for the safety of the sacrifice.<sup>10</sup> The sacrifice is finished when the Hotar repeats the "silent praise."

Should any one abuse the Hotar or curse him after having repeated the "silent praise," he should tell him (the man who abuses or curses him) that he (the abuser) would be hurt by doing so.

(In order to make abuses or curses retort upon their author, the Hotar repeats the following mantra: "At morning we (the Hotars) finish to-day this sacrifice after having repeated the "silent praise." Just as one receives a guest (who comes to our houses) with ceremony, in the same way we receive (the sacrifice as our guest with due honours) by repeating this (silent praise)." He who having such a knowledge should abuse or curse the Hotar after he has repeated the "silent praise," suffers injury. Therefore he who has such a knowledge should not abuse or curse, after the "silent praise" has been repeated.

32.

(On the meaning of the Silent Praise.)

The "silent praise" are the eyes of the (three libations). Bhûr agnir, &c. are the two eyes of the morning libation. Indro jyotir, &c. are the two eyes of the midday libation. Sūryo jyotir, &c. are the two eyes of the evening libation. He who has such a knowledge prospers by means of the three libations which are provided with eyes, and goes by means of such libations to the celestial world. ●

<sup>10</sup> The sacrifice is believed to be a chain; none of its links is to be broken. If finished it is rolled up. The last mantra represents the last link. Without the last link a chain cannot be wound up.

This "silent praise" is the eye of the sacrifice (the sacrificial man). There being only one of the "great words" (bhūr, bhuvah, svar), (in the "silent praise" of every libation) it must be repeated twice, for though the eye is (according to its substance) only one, it is double (in its appearance).

The "silent praise" is the root of the sacrifice. Should a Hotar wish to deprive any sacrificer of his standing place, then he must not at his sacrifice repeat the "silent praise;" the sacrificer then perishes along with his sacrifice (the sacrificial personage) which thus has become rootless.

About this they say: the Hotar ought to recite (it at any rate); for it is for the priest's own benefit when the Hotar repeats the "silent praise." In the priest rests the whole sacrifice, and the sacrificer in the sacrifice. Thence the "silent praise," ought to be repeated.

FIFTH CHAPTER.

(The different parts of the Ajya Shastra: Ahāva, Nivid, Sūktā.) ●

33.

The call, s'omśāvom<sup>1</sup> (called āhāva) is the Brahma;

<sup>1</sup> This formula, which is very frequently used, is only a corruption and contraction of शंसव ओम् i. e. let us both repeat the Shastra. To this call by the Hotar the Adhvaryu responds with the words: शंसामो देव i. e. we repeat, God! (dēva meaning here only priest). This call of the Hotar is called Ahāva, and the response of the Adhvaryu Pratigāra. See As'val. Śr. S. 5, 9, where the following rules rethe address (Nivid)<sup>2</sup> is the Kshatram (royal power), and the hymn (sūkta) are the subjects (vis). By repeating (first) the call s'om-āvom (representing the Brahma), and then setting forth the titles (representing the royal power), the Hotar joins subsequently the Kshatram to the Brahma. By repeating the Nivid before he recites the hymn, he joins subsequently the subjects to the Kshatram, the Kshatram being the Nivid, and the hymn the subjects.

Should the Hotar wish to deprive the sacrificer of his Kshatram, he has only to put in the midst of guarding the repetition of the Āhāva, by which the Adhvaryu is informed that the Hotar is about to repeat his recitation, are given: एष आहवः प्रातःसवने शस्त्रादिषु पर्यायप्रश्नतीर्णां च सर्वेषां चान्तः शस्त्रं तेन चोपसृतानः this Āhāva (the call s'om-āvom with a loud voice by the Hotar) takes place at the commencement of the Shastras at the morning libation, and at the beginning of the several parts of the Shastras (as in those of the Pra-uga Shastras), and everywhere (at all Shastras) within the Shastra of which it forms an integral part. The first syllable श्र is always pluta, i. e. spoken with three moras, and also the om (pranova) at the end. In the Prayogas it is thus written : श्रेश्रिसवाम्. At the midday libation the āhāva is preceded by the word अध्वर्यो Adhvaryu (As'v. Sr. 8, 5, 14), which is wanting at the morning libation. At the evening libation there is another modification of the āhāva, viz. अध्वर्यो श्राश्रांसवाम् the syllable s'o being repeated twice. This āhāva is regarded as a matter of great importance, and required at the beginning of all Shastras, be they recited by the Hotar, or the Maitrāvaruṇa, or Brahmanācūhansī or the Achhāvāka. (See 3, 12.)

<sup>2</sup> The Nivid is an address either to a single deity or to a class of deities, inviting them to enjoy the Soma libation which had been prepared for them. It generally contains the enumeration of the titles and the qualities of the respective deities. Its proper place is only in the midday and evening libations. All the Nivids for these libations are given in full in the S'ankhāyana Sr. S. 8, 16-23. The twelve formulas addressed to Agni which are enumerated in 2, 34, are properly speaking no Nivid, but only a Puroruk, i. e. a mere preliminary address. They are actually called so in 2, 40. We find the word also in the Zend Avesta in the verbal form : niraidayema i. e. I address my prayer to such and such beings (which are then mentioned).

the Nivid the hymn. By doing so, he deprives him of his Kshatram.

Should the Hotar wish to deprive the sacrificer of his subjects (his income, &c.) he has only to put in the midst of the hymn the Nivid. By doing so he deprives the sacrificer of his subjects.

But should he wish to perform the sacrifice in such a way as to keep the sacrificer in the proper possession of all he had (Brahma, Kshatra, or Viś)<sup>3</sup> then he must first repeat the âhâva, (śoṃśāvom), then the ivid, and (lastly) the sūkta (hymn). This is the proper performance for all (the three castes).

Prajapati was in the beginning only one (not distinguished from the world). He felt a desire of creating beings and (thus) multiplying himself. (Therefore) he underwent austerities, and remained silent. After a year had elapsed, he uttered twelve times (words) which constitute the Nivid of twelve sentences. After this Nivid had been pronounced, all creatures were produced.

(That the world had been created by means of the Nivid) this saw (also) a Rishi (Kutsa by name) when repeating the following versè in which there is an allusion to it: sa pūrvayâ nividâ (1, 96, 2), i. e. "he (Agni) created through the first Nivid, through the praise of life in songs, all the creatures of the Manus, (regents of large periods of time); through his lustre shining everywhere (he made) the heavens and water; the gods (priests) kept Agni (back on earth), the giver of treasures."

This is the reason that the Hotar gets offspring, when he puts the Nivid before the hymn (sūkta). He who has such a knowledge is blessed with children and cattle.

34.

(The several words of the Nivid are explained).

The Hotar repeats : Agnir devedilhah,<sup>4</sup> i. e. Agni lighted by the gods. The Agni lighted by the gods is that Agni (in heaven); for the gods kindled him. By these words he (the Hotar) has command over that Agni in that world (the fire in heaven).

The Hotar repeats : Agnir manvidilhah, i. e. Agni lighted by men. The Agni lighted by men is this one (on earth); for men lighted him. Thus he has command over Agni who is in this world (on earth).

The Hotar repeats : Agniḥ sushamit, i. e. Agni who lights well. This is Vāyu. For Vāyu lights himself through himself and all that exists. Thus he has command over Vāyu in the airy region.

He repeats : hotā devavṛitah, i. e. the Hotar chosen by the gods. The Hotar chosen by the gods is that Agni (in heaven). For he is everywhere chosen by the gods. Thus he has command over him in that world (heaven).

He repeats : hotā manuvṛitah, i. e. the Hotar chosen by men. The Hotar chosen by men is this Agni (on earth). For this Agni is everywhere chosen by men. Thus the Hotar has command over Agni in this world.

He repeats : prāṇīr yajñānām, i. e. the carrier of sacrifices. Vāyu is the carrier of sacrifices. For when he blows (prāṇiti), then the sacrifice exists, and consequently the Agnihotram. Thus he has command over Vāyu in the airy region.

<sup>4</sup> The address to Agni at the Dars'apūrnāmāsa-ishti after the name of the chief patriarchs (pravara) of the sacrificer's family have been pronounced is just like this one mentioned here, which is required in the Ajya Shastra. See As'val. S'r. S. 1, 3.

He repeats : rathir adhvarânûm, i. e. proprietor of the carriage laden with offerings. The proprietor of the carriage laden with offerings is that one (Agni in heaven, Aditya). For he moves to his place (to which he wishes to go) just as one who has a carriage. Thus the Hotar has command over him (Agni) in this world.

He repeats : atúrto hotâ, i. e. the Hotar who is not to be overcome. This Agni (the Agni on earth) is the Hotar who is not to be overcome. None can come across his way. Thus the Hotar has command over Agni in this world (on earth).

He repeats : tûrîr havgârat, i. e. the runner who carries the offerings. Vâyû is the runner who carries the offerings. For Vâyû runs in an instant through the whole universe ; he carries the offerings to the gods. Thus he has command over Vâyû in the airy region.

He repeats : â devo derân rakshat, i. e. may the god bring hither the gods. That god (Agni in heaven) is it who brings hither the gods. Thus he has command over that (Agni) in that world.

He repeats : yakshad agnir dero derân, i. e. may Agni the god repeat the sacrificial mantras addressed to the gods. This Agni is it who repeats the sacrificial mantras addressed to the gods. Thus he has command over Agni in this world.

He repeats : so adhrâvâ karati jâtavedâh, i. e. may Jâtavedâs (Agni) prepare the sacred food. Vâyû is Jâtavedâs. Vâyû makes the whole universe. Thus he has command over Vâyû in the airy region.

35.

(On the recitation of the Sûkta of the Ajya Shastra. The peculiar recitation of the first verse represents copulation.)

(When the Hotar repeats) the (seven) Anushṭubh verses : pra vo devâya ugnaye (3, 13), he separates the first pada (from the second one). For a female disarticulates her thighs (at the time of coitus). He joins the two last padas (when repeating the hymn). For a male contracts his thighs (at the time of coitus). This (represents) copulation. Thus he performs the act of copulation (in a mystical way) at the very beginning of the recitation (of the Ajya Shastra) in order to produce (offspring and cattle for the sacrificer). He who has such a knowledge is blessed with the production of offspring and cattle.

By separating the two first padas when repeating (this hymn) he thus makes the hindpart of the weapon (represented by the Ajya Shastra) very thick, and by joining the two latter padas (of the hymn) he makes its forepart thin. (The same is the case with) an iron club or with an axe (that is to say, the forepart, the shaft is thin, and the (iron) part of them thick). Thus he strikes a blow with the weapon at his enemy and adversary. Whatever (enemy) of his is to be put down, this weapon will accomplish it.

36.

(Why the Hotri priests repair to the Dhishnyas or fire places, stretching a straight line from the Agnidhra hearth. On the name of the Ajya Shastra. The Shastra of the Achhâûka belongs to Indra Agni.)

The Devas and the Asuras were fighting in these worlds. The Devas had made the Sadas (sitting place) of the priests (on the right side of the Uttara Vedi) their residence. But the Asuras turned them out of it. They then repaired to the Agnidhra<sup>3</sup> hearth (on the left of the Uttarâ Vedi). Thence they were not conquered by the Asuras. Therefore the priests take their seats near the Agnidhra, and not in the Sadas. For when sitting near the Agnidhra, they are held (from dhri to hold). Thence that hearth is called Agnidhra.

The Asuras extinguished the fires of the sitting place of the Devas. But the Devas took the fires (which they required) for their sitting places <sup>6</sup> from the Agnidhra. By means of them they defeated the Asuras and Rakshas, and drove them out. Thence the sacrificers, by taking out the different fires (required) from the Agnidhra, defeat the Asuras and Rakshas and turn them out.

They conquered (ajayanta) by means of the (four) Aya Shastras at the morning libation and entered (the place) which they had conquered. Thence the name ājya (from ji to conquer, and ā-yā to come near, enter).

Among the bodies of the minor Hotri priests (Maitravaruna, Brāhmanachhānsi, and Achhāvāka) that of the Achhāvāka was missing when they conquered and entered (the place); for in his body Agni and Indra had taken up their abode. Agni and Indra are of all the gods the strongest, mightiest, defeating best (the enemies), the most excellent, saving best (their friends). Thence the Shashtra of the Achhāvāka <sup>7</sup> at the morning libation belongs to <sup>6</sup> The places to which the Brāhmanam alludes are the so-called Dushnyas, extending in a straight line from the Mārgāli to the Agnidhra fire. They are eight in number, all occupied by the so-called Hotri priests in the following order, commencing from the Mārgāli fire: Maitravaruna, Hotar, Brāhmanachhānsi, Potar, Neshtar, Achhāvāka, and Agnid. Before each of these priests there is a small earthen ring, in which sand, dust, &c. is thrown and a little fire lighted on it for the protection of the Hotri priest who stands near it. See Mahidhara's commentary on the Vājasaneyi Sūhītā, p. 151-52 ed. Weber, and the Kātyā Sūtras 8, 6, 16-23. (p. 708-10 ed. Weber).

Indra and Agni (whilst in those of the other Hotri priests Agni alone is praised). For Indra and Agni took their abode in his (the Achhâvâka's) body. Thence the other Hotri priests walk first to their sitting places, and last comes the Achhâvâka. For he who is behind, is missing; he will join (the others) at a later time.

Thence the sacrificer should have a very strong Bahvricha<sup>8</sup> Brâhmaṇa to repeat the Achhâvâka Shâstra, for only then (if be strong) his (the priest's) body will not be missing.

37.

(On the meaning of the Ajya and Pra-uga Shâstras. How they correspond with their respective Stotras. On the Yâgyû of the Hotar.)

The sacrifice is the carriage of the gods. The Ajya and Pra-uga Shâstras are the two reins between (the carriage and the horses). By repeating the Ajya Shâstra after the Pavamânaḥ Stotra (has been sung by the Sâma singers), and the Pra-uga after the Ajya Stotra,<sup>9</sup> the Hotar holds asunder the reins of the carriage of the gods in order to prevent it from being broken to pieces. In imitation thereof charioteers hold asunder the reins of human carriages. Neither the divine nor the human carriage of him who has such a knowledge will be broken.

They (the theologians) ask: how does the Ajya Shâstra of the Hotar, which belongs to Agni, correspond with the Pavamâna verses (for the fermentation of the Soma juice) which are chanted by the Sâma singers, (the rule being) that the Shâstra should be just like the Stotra ?<sup>10</sup> (The answer is :) Agni is pavamānah, i. e. purifying, as even a Rishi (already) said : Agnir ṛishiḥ pavamānah (9, 66, 20). The Ajya Shastra which begins with verses addressed to Agni, thus corresponds with the Pavamānya verses of the Stotra (for Agni is also pavamānah).

<sup>8</sup> This means a Rigvedi, i. e. a repeater of the mantras, of which the Rigveda Saṁhitâ is made up.

They ask : Why is the Stotram of the Sāma singers in the Gâyatrī, and the Ajya Shastra of the Hotar in the Anuṣṭubh metre, (the rule being) that the Stotram must be like the Shastram (i. e. both must be of the same metre) ? He ought to answer : one ought to look only to the total. There are seven verses, (i. e. the hymn of the Ajya Shastra) in the Anuṣṭubh metre ; by repeating the first and last verses thrice, the number is brought to eleven ; as the twelfth verse the Yajyā in the Virāt metre is to be counted, for the metres are not changed by an excess of one or two syllables.<sup>11</sup> These twelve (Anuṣṭubhs) are equal to sixteen Gâyatrīs. The Shastra being in the Anuṣṭubh metre corresponds with the Gâyatrīs of the Stotram (the metres thus being equalized).

The Yajyâ mantra (belonging to the Ajya Shastra of the Hotar) is, agna indras'cha dâs'usho (3, 25, 4.) (Instead of the regular order indrâgnî there is agna indras'cha in the Yajyâ, Agni thus being first ; but this must be so, for) these two (deities) did not conquer, as Indrâgnî, but they conquered, when being made, Agnendrâu. The reason that the Hotar repeats a Yajyâ verse addressed to Agni-Indra is that he might be victorious. This verse is in the Virāt metre, which consists of thirty-three syllables.

<sup>10</sup> There appeared to be an exception to the rule in the fact that the Shastra and the Stotra have not the same deity, the first being addressed to Agni, and the latter to Indra, whilst according to the rule, both Shastra and Stotra ought to refer to one and the same deity.

There are thirty-three gods, viz : eight Vasus, eleven Rudras, twelve Adityas, one Prajâpati, and one Vashatkâra. Thus he makes the deities participate in the syllables at the very first recitation (the Ajya Shastra being the first among the twelve recitations of the Soma-day). According to the order of the (thirty-three) syllables, the gods severally (one after the other) drink (the Soma). Thus the deities are satisfied by the vessel holding the gods.<sup>12</sup>

They ask, Why is the Yâjyâ verse addressed to Agni-Indra, whilst the Ajya Shastra of the Hotar belongs to Agni alone, (the rule being) that the Yâjyâ verse is to correspond with the Shastra (to which it belongs)? (The answer is) The Agni-Indra-Yâjyâ is the same with the Indra-Agni one ; and this Shastra belongs to Indra-Agni, as may be seen from the (Aindâgna) Graha (mantra), and the " silent praise " (used at this occasion). For the Adhvaryu takes the Graha under the recital of the following mantra : indrâgni âgatam sutam <sup>13</sup> (3, 12, 1. Vâjasaneyya-Sâmhita 7, 31), i. e. "Come ye, Indra and Agni ! to the Soma juice, (which is like a) fine cloud. Drink of it, driven by your mind." The " silent praise " is, bhûr agur jyotir jyotir agur, indro jyotir bhuvro jyotir indrah ; sūryo jyotir jyotih srah surgah. Thus the Yâjyâ verse is in accordance with the Shastram.

38.

(The Japa which is repeated before the libations from the Drideratya Grahas are given. Its several sentences explained.)

The Japa <sup>14</sup> which the Hotar mutters, is the seed.

<sup>14</sup> This Japa or mandible utterance of words is the very commencement of the Ajya Shastra. It is given in full, As'val. S'r. 8. 5, 9.

The effusion of seed is inaudible ; so is the Japa. It is, as it were, the effusion of the seed.

He mutters the Japa before the call, s'omśávom. For all that is repeated after the call, s'omśávom, forms part of the Shastra. The Hotar addresses this call (s'omśávom) to the Adhvaryu when the latter with his face turned away is lying prostrate on the earth (using the two hands as his two forelegs like beasts). For four-footed beings (animals) emit their sperms (at the time of copulation) having turned their faces away from one another. He (the Adhvaryu) then stands upright on his two legs. For two-footed beings (men) emit their sperms when facing one another in a straight line.

(The several sentences of the Japa are now explained).

He mutters, pitá mâtis'rá. The breath is pitá (father), and the breath is mâtis'rá; the breath is seed.

Just the Adhvaryu is called upon by the Hotar to turn away his face with the words : पराङ्मध्या a. c. Away, Adhvaryu! Then he commences the Japa with the words : su-mat, &c. (see 2, 24).

We here give the whole of it :

सुमयद्रदे पिता मातरिश्वादिद्रा पदा धाद्विद्राक्ष्या कवयः शं- कुलोमा विश्वविघ्नोथानि नेषव्यहस्यतिरक्था मदानि शंसिषदुवागा- तिशायु विश्वमायुः क इदं शंसिष्यति स इदं शंसिष्यति.

" May the father Mâtis'van (wind, breath) make the verse without a breach ! May the Kavis repeat the recitations without breach ! May Soma, the all-possessing, guide our performances ! May Brihaspati repeat the recitations (and) the joyful choruses ! Each (speech) is life, she has the whole life. She is life. Who will repeat this (Shastra) ! He (i. e. the Hotar, representing Vâch) will repeat it." From the contents of this Japa it is evident, that the Hotar invokes the deities presiding over breath, speech, and literary skill, for a successful recitation of the whole Shastra, to accomplish which is regarded as an arduous task. In one of the sentences of this Japa the repeaters are called kavis, which appears to have been the more ancient name of the Hotri priests. It is mentioned as sufficing a class of priests in the Zend-Avesta also.

By repeating these words, he (the Hotar) emits the seed (for a spiritual birth).

Achhidrâ paûâ dhâ.<sup>15</sup> Achhidrâ, i. e. without breach, is seed. Thence a being which is unbroken (a whole) rises out of the seed.

Achhidrâ ukthâ kavayah s'aũsann. Those who have learnt by heart (the mantras) are called kavis. The sentence means: "they produced this unbroken (matter), i. e. the seed."

Somo vis'aravid—saũs'ishat. Brihaspati is Brahma, the Soma who is praised by the singers, is the Kshatram. The nithâni and ukthâ madâni are the Shastras. By repeating this sentence the Hotar recites his Shastras, instigated (prasuta) by the divine Brahma and by the divine Kshatra. Both these (Brihaspati and Soma) preside over the whole creation, whatever exists. For all that the Hotar is doing without being incited by these two (deities) is not done. (Just as) they reproach one (in common life, when something is done without order, saying) he has done what was not done (not to be done). Of him who has such a knowledge all that is done will be done, and nothing that is done be undone.

Vâg-âyur. Ayuh (life) is breath; seed is breath; the womb is vâch. By repeating this sentence he pours the seed into the womb.

Kaidam-s'aũsishyati. Kah (who?) is Prajâpati. The meaning of the sentence is, Prajâpati will generate.

39.

(On the meaning of the six members of the "silent praise," and the twelve members of the Purohuk. Way Jâtavedâs is mentioned in the Purohuk. The meaning of the Ajya-sũkta.)

Having called s'aũsârom he recites the "silent praise." This transforms the seed (represented by ie Japa). First the effusion of the seed takes place; then follows its transformation.

He repeats the "silent praise" without proper articulation of the voice<sup>10</sup> (in order to make its proper words unintelligible even to those who stand nearest), or in the same way the seeds are transformed (going across one another).

He repeats the "silent praise" in six padas<sup>17</sup> (i. e. repeating six times). For man is six-fold, having six limbs. Thus he produces by transformation the soul as six-fold, consisting of six parts.

After having repeated the "silent praise" he repeats the Puroruk (Nivid 2, 34). Thus he brings forth (as a birth) the seed which had been transformed. The transformation (of the seed) occurs first; then follows birth.

He repeats the Puroruk with a loud voice. Thus he brings him (the mystical body of the sacrificer) forth with a loud voice (crying).

He repeats it in twelve padas. The year has twelve months; Prajâpati is the year; he is the producer of the whole universe. He who is the producer of the whole universe produces also him (the sacrificer) and (provides him) with offspring and cattle for propagation. He who has such a knowledge prospers in offspring and cattle.

He repeats a Puroruk addressed to Jâtavedâs<sup>18</sup> (agni), the word Jâtavedâs occurring in the last (selfish) part (of it).

<sup>10</sup> This is called : tira iva, i. e. across as it were.

<sup>17</sup> Its six parts are as follows : 1) भूरग्न्योतिर् 2) ओतिरग्निरग्नेर्योतिर्भुवो 3) ओतिरिन्द्रो 4) ओतिरिन्द्रो 5) सूर्योयोतिर् 6) ओतिः सूर्योम्. See As'val. S'r. 6. 5, 8. Properly speaking, the "silent praise" consists only of three padas. See Ait. Br. 2, 31.

<sup>18</sup> This refers to the last pada of the Puroruk or Nivid, where Agni mentioned by the name of Jâtavedâs, See 2, 34.

They ask, Why do they repeat at the morning libation a Puroruk addressed to Jâtavedâs, where this deity has its proper place at the evening libation (The answer is) Jâtavedâs is life. For he knows (vedu) all that are born. As many as he knows are born, (jâtânâm) so many (only) exist.<sup>19</sup> He could those exist of whom he does not know (that they are born?) Whosoever (what sacrificer) knows that he himself is made a new man (by means of the Ajya Shastra), he has a good knowledge.

He repeats (the hymn), pra vo devâya Agna (3, 13).<sup>20</sup> (The word) pra means prâna (life). For all these beings move only after having been endowed with prâna. Thus the Hotar produces the pra (for the sacrificer), and makes it ready (for use).

He repeats, didivâmsam apûriryam (3, 13, 5). For the mind has become shining (didîva), as nothing exists anterior (apûriryam) to the mind. Thus he produces the mind (of the sacrificer), and makes it (ready for use).

He repeats, sa nah s'armâni vîtaye (4). Vâch s'arma (refuge). For they say about one who repeating with his speech (the words of another) "have stopped his talkativeness (s'armavat)."<sup>22</sup> 1

repeating this verse the Hotar produces speech (in the sacrificer), and makes it ready (for use).

He repeats, uta no brahman (6). Brahma is the sense of hearing. For by means of the ear one hears the Brahma;<sup>23</sup> Brahma is placed in the ear. By repeating this verse he produces (in the sacrificer) the sense of hearing, and makes it ready (for use).

He repeats, sa yantâ vipra (3). The air exhaled Yantâ, i. e. restrainer. For the air inhaled (prâna) held back by the air exhaled (apâna), and does consequently not turn away. By repeating this verse he produces the apâna (in the sacrificer), and makes it ready (for use).

He repeats, ritâvâ yasya rodasi (2). Rita i. e. true the eye. For if two men have a dispute with one another (about anything), they believe him who says, "I have seen it by the exertion of (my own) eyes." By repeating this verse he produces the eye (in the sacrificer), and makes it ready (for use).

With the verse, nâ no râsva (7), he concludes the whole (man) "endowed with thousand-fold gifts, with offspring, and thriving well,"<sup>24</sup> is the âtmâ (soul). By repeating this verse he thus produces the soul as the aggregate man, and makes it ready (for use).

He repeats a Yâjyâ mantra. The Yâjyâ is a gift, meritorious, and fortune. By repeating it, he makes (in the sacrificer) a pure (goddess) of fortune<sup>25</sup> and prepares her for assisting him.

He who has such a knowledge merges into the Aties, after having been identified with the metres, the deities, the Brahma, and immortality. Who thus knows how to become identified with metres, &c. has (certainly) a good knowledge; is beyond the soul and beyond any deity, (i. e. the knowledge is of higher value than the soul, or a god).

41.

• (The meaning of the several verses of the Ajya Sûkta

He repeats the "silent praise" in six padas. There are six seasons. By doing so he makes the seasons and enters them.

He repeats the Puroruk in twelve padas. There are twelve months. By doing so he makes the months and enters them.

He repeats, pra vo derâja<sup>26</sup> (3, 13). Pra is the air. For all beings go after air. By repeating this verse he makes the air and enters it.

He repeats, didizânsam. The sun is didizâ, nothing is earlier<sup>27</sup> than the sun. By repeating this verse he makes the sun and enters it.

He repeats, sa nah s'armâni vîtaye. S'armâni (places of refuge) means Agni. He gives nourishment. By repeating this verse he makes Agni and enters Agni.

He repeats, uta no brahman. The moon is Brahmanâ. By repeating this verse he makes the moon and enters her.

He repeats, sa yantâ. Vâyû is yantâ (the restrainer); for by Vâyû (wind) the universe is kept up, who prevents the air from gathering in the atmosphere only. By repeating this verse he makes Vâyû and enters him.

<sup>26</sup> The Ajya-sûkta (3, 13), which has been explained in the preceding chapter, is here explained again.

He repeats, ṛitāvâ yasya rodasî. Heaven and earth are the two rodas. Thus he makes heaven and earth and enters them.

He concludes with the verse, nû no râsva. The year is a whole with thousand-fold gifts, produces, and well-being. Thus he makes the year as a whole and enters it.

He repeats a Yâjyâ mantra. The Yâjyâ is rain, (and rain is) lightning. For lightning (produces) rain, and rain gives food. Thus he makes lightning and enters it. He who has such a knowledge becomes identified with (all) these things<sup>28</sup> and with the deities.

<sup>28</sup> Such as the seasons, months, Agni, &c., which are severally mentioned in this paragraph.

THIRD BOOK.

FIRST CHAPTER

(The Pra-uga Shastra. Vashatkâra. The Nivids.

1.

(The deities of the Pra-uga Shastra.)

The Pra-uga Shastra is the recitation appropriate to the Soma offerings from the Grahās. Nine<sup>2</sup> Soma Grahās are taken at the morning. With nine

<sup>1</sup> The Pra-uga Shastra is the most peculiar of all the recitations by the Hotar on the day of the Soma feast ; for it comprises a large number of deities, divided into regular sections, than any other one and has neither a proper Nivid, nor Pragâthas, nor Dhâryas, nor Sûktas, as we constantly find at the Shastras of the midday and evening libations. It consists only of the verses in seven sections, mentioned in the Rîgveda-Samhitâ (1, 2-3). Each section is preceded by a so-called Puroruk, along with the Ahûya. Before the Puroruk of the first section there are, besides, the Himikâra and the three great words required. I here write these introductory words in the same order in which they are repeated by the Hotri-priests up to the present day: हिं भूर्भुवः स्वरोऽं श्रोत्रं सार्वे वायुरग्रेमा यज्ञप्रोः साकगद नसा यज्ञं। शिवो निगुद्विः शिवाभोऽं वायवायाहि० (sec 1, 2, 1-4)

i. e. May Vâyu who walks first, be the enjoyer of the sacrifice, come with his mind to the sacrifice ; (may he come) the happy with his happy crowd ! Om ! Come, O Vâyu, &c.

The Puroruk of the second triplet, (1, 2, 4-6), which is addressed to Indravâyn, is :

श्रोत्रं सार्वेऽं द्विरण्यवर्त्तनी नरा देवा पतो अभिष्टये। वायुश्चन्द्रो सुसखोऽं मिद्रवायू इमे सुता० i. e. the two divine men who come on golden paths, the two masters (who are) for protection, Indra and Vâyu, the happy ones, &c.

verses forming the Bahish-pavamāna chant,<sup>3</sup> they are praised by singers. After the singers have finished Puroruk of the third triplet, which is addressed to Mitra-Varuṇa (1, 2, 7-9):

ग्रा३० काया राजाना कृत्वा दक्षस्य दुरोणे । रिशदसा सधस्य
ओ३ मिचंजवे० the two Kavyas (descendants of the Kavis) the two kings (who are distinguished) through skilful performance (of sacrifices) at home, and who destroy the enemies in the combat.

Puroruk of the fourth triplet, which is addressed to the As'vin, (1, 3, 1-3):

ग्रा३० दैव्य अध्वर्यु आगतं रथेन सूर्यत्वचाः । मध्वा यज्ञं समं-
जाधो३ माश्विना यज्वरो० Ye two divine Adhvaryus whose skin is sun-like, come up with (your) carriage; may ye anoint the sacrifice with honey !

Puroruk before the fifth triplet, which is addressed to Indra (1, 3, 4-6):

ग्रा३० इंद्र उक्थेभिर्भदिद्यो वाजानांच वाजपतिः । हरिवां सुतानां
मखो३ मिन्द्रायाहि० Indra who is most stimulated (to action) through the recitations (of the Hotris), and is the lord of booty, he with his two yellow horses, the friend of the Soma drops.

Puroruk before the sixth triplet, which is addressed to the Vis'va Deva (1, 3, 7-9):

ग्रा३० विश्वान्देवान्हवामहे ऽस्मिन्यज्ञे सुपेशसः । त इमं यज्ञमागमन्
देवानो देवा धिया । जुषाणा अध्वरे सदा ये यज्ञस्य तनूततः
विद्य आ सोमपीतयो३ मोमामश्व० We call all the gods the well adorned to this sacrifice; may these gods come to this sacrifice with divine thought, favourably accepting the seat (prepared for them) at the preparation (by cooking) of the self-making sacrifice (i. e. of the sacrificial personage whose body is always restored by itself, when the sacrificial rites are performed), (may) all (come) to drink the Soma !

Puroruk before the seventh triplet, which is addressed to Sarasvatī (1, 3, 10-12):

ग्रा३० वाचमहं देवीं वाचास्मिन्यज्ञे सुपेशसा सरस्वतीं हवामहे-
पवका० I (invoke) the goddess of Speech with my excellent speech at this sacrifice; we invoke Sarasvatī, &c. (Sapta-hāntṛa).

their chant, the Adhvaryu takes the tenth Graha (the Asvins); the sound “hiṁ” uttered by singer when chanting the other verses, counts as the tenth part. Thus, an equality<sup>4</sup> of the Grahas and verses of the chant is obtained.

The Hotar repeats a triplet addressed to Vāy (1, 2, 1-3). By this the Vāyu graha is celebrated. He repeats a triplet addressed to Indra-Vāyu (1, 2, 4-6). By this the Indra-Vāyu graha is celebrated. He repeats a triplet addressed to Mitra-Varuṇa. By this the Mitra-Varuṇa graha is celebrated. He repeats a triplet addressed to the Asvins (1, 3, 1-3). By this the Asvin graha is celebrated. He repeats a triplet addressed to Indra (1, 3, 4-6). By this the Sūkra and Manthi grahas are celebrated. He repeats a triplet addressed to the Viśve Devāḥ (1, 3, 7-9). By this the Agrayaṇa graha is celebrated. He repeats a triplet addressed to Sarasvatī (1, 3, 10-12), though there is no Sarasvatī graha (no such vessel as in the other cases). Sarasvatī is Speech. Whatever grahas are taken by means of Speech (under recital of a mantra) all these are celebrated by means of Shastras. He who has such a knowledge gets (thus) celebrated (all his Grahas).

(On the meaning of the several parts of the Pra-uga Shastra.)

By means of the Pra-uga Shastra one obtains food. In (each part of) the Pra-uga Shastra, there is always another deity praised, and (thus) always another being celebrated. He who has such a knowledge keeps different kinds of food in his Grahas.<sup>5</sup> The Pra-uga Shastra is, as it were, most intimately connected with the sacrificer. Thence they say, the greatest attention is to be paid to it by the sacrificer. For by means of it the Hotar makes him (his new body) ready.

He repeats a triplet addressed to Vâyu, because they say, life is Vâyu, seed is life. Seed is first produced (in the body) before a man is produced (out of it). By repeating a triplet addressed to Vâyu, the Hotar makes the prâna (air inhaled) of the sacrificer.

He repeats a triplet, addressed to Indra and Vâyu. Where there is prâna (air inhaled), there is apâna (air exhaled). By repeating a triplet, addressed to Indra and Vâyu, he thus makes the prâna and apâna of the sacrificer.

He repeats a triplet, addressed to Mitra-Varuṇa. That is done, because they say, the eye is first produced when a human being is being called into existence. By repeating a triplet, addressed to Mitra-Varuṇa, he thus makes eyes to the sacrificer.

He repeats a triplet, addressed to the As'vins. Because parents say in their conversations about a child when it is born, "it has the desire of listening (to us); it is very attentive." By repeating a triplet, addressed to the As'vins, he makes to the sacrificer the sense of hearing.

He repeats a triplet, addressed to Indra. Because parents say in their conversations about a child when it is born, "it endeavours to raise its neck, then its head." By repeating a triplet, addressed to Indra, he makes to the sacrificer, strength.

He repeats a triplet, addressed to Vis've Devâḥ. Because a child when it is born, uses hands and feet after (it has been able to use the eye, ear, and to raise its neck). The limbs (for they are many) belong to the Vis've Deváh, i. e. All Gods. By repeating a triplet, addressed to the Vis've Deváh, he thus makes the limbs to the sacrificer.

He repeats a triplet, addressed to Sarasvatî. Because Speech enters the child, when it is born, last Sarasvatî is speech. By repeating a triplet, addressed to Sarasvatî, he thus makes speech to the sacrificer.

The Hotar who has such a knowledge, as well as the sacrificer for whom the Hotri priests repeat the recitations (Shastras) are, though already born (from their mother), born again from all these deities, from all the recitations (Shastras), from all the metres, from all the triplets of the Pra-uga Shastra, from all the (three) libations.

3.

(The Hotar has it in his power to deprive the sacrificer of his life, &c. by not repeating the several parts of the Pra-uga Shastra in the proper way.)

This Pra-uga Shastra represents the vital airs. The Hotar addresses this recitation to seven deities. For there are seven vital airs in the head. By doing so the Hotar places the vital airs in the head (of the sacrificer).

There is the question asked, Whether the Hotar might be able to produce woe as well as happiness to the sacrificer? (The answer is) He who might be the Hotar of the sacrificer at that time (when the Pra-uga Shastra is to be repeated) can do with him what he pleases. If he think, "I will separate him from his vital airs," he need only repeat the triplet addressed to Vâyu confusedly, or forego a pada, by which means the (several parts of the) triplet become contused. In this manner he separates him (the sacrificer) whom he wishes so to separate, from his vital airs.

Should he think, "I will separate him from his prāṇa and apāna," he need only repeat the triplet addressed to Indra-Vāyu confusedly or forego a pada. In this way the triplet becomes confused, and he thus separates the sacrificer, whom he wishes so to separate, from his prāṇa and apāna.

Should he think, "I will separate the sacrificer from his eye," he need only repeat the triplet addressed to Mitra-Varuṇa confusedly, or forego a pada. In this way the triplet becomes confused, and he thus separates the sacrificer, whom he wishes so to separate, from his eye.

Should he think, "I will separate him from the sense of hearing," he need only repeat the triplet addressed to the Aśvins confusedly, or forego a pada. In this way the triplet becomes confused, and he separates the sacrificer, whom he wishes so to separate, from the sense of hearing.

Should he think, "I will separate him from his strength," he need only repeat the triplet addressed to Indra confusedly, or forego a pada. In this way the triplet becomes confused, and he separates him whom he wishes so to separate, from his strength.

Should he think, "I will separate him from his limbs," he need only repeat the triplet addressed to the Vis've Devah confusedly, or forego a pada. In this way the triplet becomes confused, and he separates the sacrificer, whom he wishes so to separate, from his limbs.

Should he think, "I will separate him from his speech," he need only repeat the triplet addressed to Vasatī confusedly or forego a pada. In this way the triplet becomes confused, and he separates the sacrificer, whom he wishes so to separate, from his speech.

Should he think, "I will keep him joined with all his limbs and his soul," he ought to repeat the triplet, as it was first told (to him by his master) the right way. Thus he keeps him joined with all his limbs and his whole soul. He who has such knowledge remains joined with all his limbs and the whole soul.

4.

(All the dieties of the Pra-uga Shastra are said to be forms of Agni.)

They ask, How (can it be accounted for) that the verses addressed to Agni which the Sâma singers chant,<sup>6</sup> are celebrated by a recitation of the Hotṛa commencing with a verse addressed to Vâyu, (the rule being) that the Shastra exactly corresponds to the Stotra? (The answer is) Those deities are only the bodies of Agni. When Agni is blazing up, as he were, that is his Vâyu (wind) form. Thus he celebrates by means of this (Vâyu form) that (Agni form).

Divided into two halves, the fire burns. Indra and Vâyu are two. That is his Indra-Vâyu form. Thus he celebrates by means of this (Indra-Vâyu form) that (Agni form).

It moves up and down (when being lighted and extinguished); this is his Mitra-Varuṇa form. Thus he celebrates by means of this (Mitra-Varuṇa form) that (Agni form).

<sup>6</sup> The recitation of the Pra-uga Shastra is preceded by the singing of the so-called Ajya-stotra: ajna âyâhi vitaye (Sâma-veda 2, 10 12). The deity of it is Agni, whilst the deities of the Pra-uga Shastra to which it is said to stand in connection, are different.

The dangerous touch<sup>7</sup> of Agni is his Varuṇa form. His Mitra form is (shown in the fact) that men who make friends with him may sit near him though his touch be dangerous. Thus he celebrates by means of these (Mitra and Varuṇa forms) that (Agni form).

His As'vina form is that they produce him by friction through two arms and two wooden sticks, the As'vins being two. Thus he celebrates by means of this (As'vina form) that (Agni form).

That he burns with a loud crackling voice, imitating the sound bababâ as it were, on account of which all beings flee trembling from him, this is his Indra form. Thus the Hotar celebrates by means of the (Indra form) that (Agni form).

That they divide him into many parts (when taking fire from the hearth) though he is only one, this is his Vis've Devâḥ form. Thus the Hotar celebrates by means of this (Vis've Devâḥ form) that (Agni form).

That he burns with a roaring noise, uttering speech, as it were, this is his Sarasvatî form. Thus the Hotar celebrates by means of this (Sarasvatî form) that (Agni form).

In this way the triplet of the Sâma singers<sup>8</sup> becomes celebrated, notwithstanding these (different) deities in the several triplets, for him who thus has commenced (the Shastra) with a verse addressed to Vâyu.

Having repeated the Shastra addressed to all the gods<sup>9</sup> (Pra-uga), he recites a Yâjyâ mantra addressed to the Vis've Devâh (all gods): vis'vebhih, son madvagna (1, 14, 10). Thus he satisfies all dei giving to each his due share.

5.

(On the Vashatkâra and Anuvashatkâra.)

The Vashatkâra<sup>10</sup> (the formula vaushat!) is drinking vessel of the gods. By making the Vashatkâra the Hotar satisfies the deities with (presenting a drinking vessel.

He makes the Anuvashatkâra (the formula "Ag eat!"). In this way he satisfies the deities repeatedly placing before them the Vashatkâra (representing the drinking vessel), just as men place before their horses or cows repeatedly grass, water &c.<sup>11</sup>

They ask, Why do they sacrifice in the same Agni (the Agni of the Uttarâ Vêdi) where they die before, and make the Vashatkâra there, when sitting near the Dhishnya<sup>12</sup> fires (after having left the place near the Uttarâ Vêdi)? (The answer is) By making the Anuvashatkâra "Agni, taste the Soma!" he makes there the Vashatkâra and pleases the Dhishnya.

They ask, Which is the Svishtakrit portion of the Soma at those offerings, <sup>13</sup> of which the priest tastes without having finished them, and without making the Anuvashatkâra? (The answer is) By repeating the Anuvashatkâra (when repeating the Yâgyas of the Shastras), "Agni, taste the Soma!" they (complete

the ceremony and) drink from the Soma juice after the completion (of the ceremony).<sup>14</sup> This very (Anuvashatkâra) is the Svishtakrit portion of the Soma. Thence he makes the Vashatkâra (and Anuvashatkâra).

6.

(On the meaning of the Vashatkâra and its different parts).

The Vashatkâra is a weapon. If one has an enemy (and wishes to destroy him) one has only to think of him when making the Vashatkâra in order to strike him a blow with a weapon (in the form of the Vashatkâra).

The word shat (six) is contained in the formula rau-shat<sup>15</sup> (the so-called Vashatkâra). There are six seasons. Thus he makes the seasons and establishes them. To him who is established in the seasons becomes afterwards (also) established in all other things. He who has such a knowledge obtains a firm footing.

Hiranyadan, the son of Beda, said about this (the Vashatkâra) as follows: By this part shat (six) of the formula vaushat the Hotar establishes these six (things). The sky rests on the air; the air on the earth; the earth on the waters; the waters on the reality (satya); the reality on the Brahman the Brahman on the concentrated heat of meditation (tapas). If these places are established, then things are consequently established. He who has such a knowledge has a firm footing.

<sup>14</sup> The priests are not allowed to eat from the sacrificial food, or drink of the Soma, before all the ceremonies pertaining to the offerings to the gods are completed. The Svishtakrit ceremony is regarded as the completion of the principal rites attending any oblation given to the gods. At this ceremony the Anuvashatkâra does not take place. After it is completed the priests are allowed to eat the remainder of the food or drink the remaining juice.

<sup>15</sup> The etymology which is here given of the word vaushat is of course quite fanciful. It is only as very much lengthened pronunciation of a conjunctive form vokshat of the root vah to carry, meaning, may he (Agni) carry it (the offering) up. Instead of the original ôh, âu was substituted.

The part vā of the formula vaushat means the six seasons. By repeating the Vashaṭkāra the Hotar places the sacrificer in the seasons, gives him footing in them. Just as he does unto the gods, the gods do unto him.

7.

(The three kinds of the Vashaṭkāra: vajra, damachhad, and rikta. In what tone the Vashaṭkāra is to be repeated. The Hotar can, by not repeating properly, injure the sacrificer.)

There are three (kinds of the) Vashaṭkāra, vajra (weapon), damachhad (who covers beings), and rikta (empty, void).

It is a vajra (weapon) in consequence of its being pronounced with a loud and strong voice by the Hotar. With it he strikes, whenever he pleases, a blow to his enemy and adversary who is to be put down by him, in order to put him down. Thence is the weapon, in the form of the Vashaṭkāra, to be used by the sacrificer who has enemies.

It is dhâmachhad, i. e. protecting the beings, on account of its being pronounced as an integral part of the verse to which it belongs without omitting any part of it.<sup>16</sup> Children and cattle stand near (this part the Vashaṭkāra) and follow it. Thence ought he who desires children and cattle to make this Vashaṭkāra.

<sup>16</sup> The term in the original is nīrhāṇarcha, i. e. without losing any part of the Rich. This means, that no vowel is to be dropped at the end of the Yājñik verse when Vaushat is joined to it as an integral part. The remark is made on account of the way in which the syllable om (when pranava is made) is joined to the last syllable of a verse. In that case the last vowel disappears and ô is substituted.

It is rikta, i. e. void, the syllable shat being pronounced with a low accent. He thus makes void (rikta) the soul, and the sacrificer. He who makes such a Vashaṭkāra becomes a great sinner, and also he for whom such a Vashaṭkāra is made. Thence he should not wish to make it.

As regards the question whether the Hotar might make the sacrificer happy or unhappy, the answer is, that he who might be the Hotar of any sacrificer can do so. At this (occasion, i. e. at the sacrifice) the Hotar may just do with the sacrificer as he pleases.

Should he wish to deprive the sacrificer of the fruit of his sacrifice, he has only to repeat the (Yājyâ) verse, and the Vashaṭkāra in the same tone<sup>17</sup> (i. e. monotonously). If he do so, he deprives the sacrificer of the fruit of his sacrifice.

Should he wish to make the sacrificer liable to the consequences of a great guilt, he has only to repeat the (Yājyâ) verse with a very loud voice, and the Vashaṭkāra with a very low one. (If he do so) he makes the sacrificer liable to the consequences of a great guilt.

Should he wish to make the sacrificer very happy, he has to repeat the (Yājyâ) verse with a very low, and the Vashaṭkāra with a very loud voice. (That is done) for obtaining fortune. By doing so, he puts the sacrificer in (the possession of) fortune.

The Vashaṭkāra is to form an integral part of the (Yājyâ) verse (no stopping between the end of the uted in its stead. If for instance the last syllable of the Rich be a, then in the Praṇava yom is pronounced. See the rules for making the Praṇava in the Sāmidhenī verses, As'v. Śr. S. 1, 2.

<sup>17</sup> The Yājyâ is repeated monotonously, and at the morning oblation in a low tone, whilst the Vashaṭkāra is pronounced with a loud voice.

verse and vaushat being allowed) in order to have an uninterrupted whole. He who has such a knowledge becomes possessed of children and cattle.

8.

(The danger which might be imminent upon the Hotar and sacrificer, in consequence of the Vashaṭkâ weapon, is to be averted by certain formulas.)

The Hotar ought to think of the deity to whom the oblation is given when he is about to repeat the Vashaṭkâra. Thus he pleases the deity personally and addresses the Yājyâ mantra direct to it.

The Vashaṭkâra is a weapon.<sup>18</sup> The weapon, like a flash when one strikes with it without having conjured its evil effects.<sup>19</sup> Not every one knows how to conjure it, nor its (proper) place. Therefore the mantra, vāg ojah (As'v. S'r. S. 1, 5) is at such occasions, when even many are killed (as is the case in battle), the propitiation, and the assignation of the proper place (after the Vashaṭkâra). For this reason the Hotar has, after every Vashaṭkâra, to repeat the Anumantrana<sup>20</sup> formula, vāg ojah. If thus propitiated the Vashaṭkâra does not hurt the sacrificer.<sup>21</sup>

<sup>18</sup> This idea is clearly expressed in an Anumantrana formula वषट्कारेण वज्रेण योऽस्मान्देष्टि यंच वयं द्विष्मस्वहन्मि. i.e. I strike with the Vashaṭkâra as a weapon, him who hates us as well as him whom we hate (As'v. S'r. S. 1, 3).

<sup>19</sup> For the mischief done by a weapon, he who strikes with it, is answerable. To guard himself against the evil consequences of such an act, propitiation (śānti) is required.

<sup>20</sup> This is the technical name of those formulas which are to be repeated by the Hotar and the sacrificer after the proper mantra has been recited. They follow the mantra. Thence the name anumantrana. They must be always uttered with a low voice.

<sup>21</sup> Up to the present day the Shrotriyas or sacerdotal priests never dare to pronounce this formula save at the time of sacrificing. They say that if they would do so at any other time, they would be cursed by the gods.

The sacrificer ought to repeat this Anumantraṇa formula: "O Vashaṭkāra, do not sweep me away, "I will not sweep thee away. I call hither (thy) "mind with great effort, thou art a shelter (having "joined thy) body with the air circulating (in my "body). Go to (thy) place, let me go to (my) place."

Some one (a theologian) has said: this (just mentioned anumantraṇam) is too long and has no effect. (Instead of it) the sacrificer ought to repeat after the Vashaṭkāra the words, ojah saha ojah. Ojah (vigour) and sahah (strength) are the two most beloved bodies (forms) of the Vashaṭkāra. By making him repeat this Anumantraṇa formula he thus makes the sacrificer prosper through (the Vashaṭkāra's) own nature. He who has such a knowledge prospers through (the Vashaṭkāra's) own nature.

The Vashaṭkāra is speech, and prāṇa (air inhaled) and apāna (air exhaled). These (three) leave as often as a Vashaṭkāra is repeated. (But that ought to be prevented; thence) he ought to include them (their names) in the Anumantraṇa formula. (This is done by repeating the following formula) vāg ojah saha oja mayi prāṇāpānau, i. e. May speech, vigour, strength (and) the prāṇa and apāna (be) in me! Thus the Hotar puts speech, prāṇa and apāna in himself (he prevents them from going), reaches his full age. He who has such a knowledge reaches his full age.

(Etymology of the words praisha, puroruk, vedi, nivid, gaha.)

The sacrifice went away from the gods. They wished it (to return) by means of the Praishas.<sup>22</sup>

That is the reason that the Praishas (orders to repeat a mantra given by the Adhvaryu or Mitra Varuṇa to the Hotar) are called so (from pra + ish "wish"). They made it shine forth (prârochayanti) by means of the Puroruks. Thence the Puroruk is called so (from prârochayanti). They found it on the Vêdi. Thence this place is called Vêdi (from vid "find"). After having found it, they caught it with the Grahas; thence they are called so (from grih "catch, seize"). Having found it they announced it to the gods by means of the Nivids. Thence they are called Nivids (from nivedayati he announces).

A person who wishes to recover something lost wants either much (of it) or little. Among two, the elder (most experienced) wishes for the best (portion). He who knows that the Praishas are exceedingly strong (give most power), knows (at the same time) that they are the best portion. The Praishas being the desire to recover something lost, he (the Mitra Varuṇa) repeats them with his head lowered (prahvas (just as supplicants do)).

(On the proper place of the Nivids in the three libations.)

The Nivids are the embryos of the Shastras (ukthas). At the morning libation they are put before the Shastras (ukthas), because the embryos are lying in the womb with their heads turned downward, and thus they are born (the head coming first out of the womb). At the midday libation, the Nivids are put in the midst (of the Shastras). This is done because the embryos have their hold in the middle of the womb. At the evening libation, the Nivids are repeated at the end (of the Shastras), because the embryos are coming down from thence (the womb).

when they are brought forth. He who has such a knowledge is blessed with children and cattle.

The Nivids are the decorations of the Shastras. They are put, at the morning libation, before the Shastras, just as a weaver weaves decorations in the beginning of a cloth.

At the midday libation they are put in the midst (of the Shastras), just as a weaver weaves decorations in the midst (of a cloth).

At the evening libation they are put at the end (of the Shastras) just as the weaver weaves decorations in the end of a cloth (avaprajana). He who has such a knowledge is ornamented on all parts with the decoration of the sacrifice.

11.

(How the Nivids should be repeated. How to correct mistakes arising from confusion.)

The Nivids are deities connected with the sun. When they are put at the morning libation at the beginning (of the Shastras), at the midday libation in the midst, and at the evening libation at the end, then they follow the regular course of the sun.

The gods had obtained (once) one portion of the sacrifice after the other (pach-chhas). Thence the Nivids are repeated pada by pada. When the gods had obtained the (whole of the) sacrifice, a horse came out of it. Thence they say, the sacrificer ought to give a horse to the reciter of the Nivids. By doing so (presenting a horse) they present really the most exquisite gift (to the reciter). ●

The reciter (of the Nivid) ought not to forego any of its padas. Should he do so, he would make a rupture in the sacrifice; if this (rupture) increases, the sacrificer then becomes guilty of the consequences of a great sin. Thence the reciter ought not forego any of the padas of the Nivid.

He ought not to invert the order of two padas the Nivid. Should he do so, he would confound the sacrifice, and the sacrificer would become confounded. Thence he ought not to invert the order of the padas.

He ought not to take together two padas of the Nivid. Should he do so, he would confound the sacrifice, which would prove fatal to the sacrificer. Thence he ought not to take together two padas the Nivid when repeating it.

He ought to take together only the two padas predam brahma and predam kshatram.<sup>23</sup> If he do so, is (done) for joining together the Brahma and the Kshatra. Thence the Brahma and Kshatra become joined. •

He ought, for the insertion of the Nivid, to select hymns consisting of more than a triplet, or stanza of four verses;<sup>24</sup> for the several padas of the Nivid ought to correspond, each to the several verses in the hymn.<sup>25</sup> Thence he ought for the insertion of the

<sup>23</sup> These two sentences form part of every Nivid, used at the midday or evening libation. They occur in the following connection
प्रेमां देवो देवहूतिमवतु देव्या धिया। प्रेदं ब्रह्म प्रेदं क्षत्रं। प्रे
सुख्यन्तं यजमानमवतु।

<sup>24</sup> This refers to the sûkta or hymn which stands in connection with the Nivid.

<sup>25</sup> The expression richam sūktam prati is evidently a Heud adjoin; for the distributive meaning of prati can only refer to richam but not to sūkta; because there are not as many sūktas as the are padas of the Nivid. The sentence न ह्येवं न चतुर्लक्षं अतिमन्त्रे निविद्धानं can easily be misunderstood. At the first glance appears to mean "he ought not to think of selecting any other hymn for inserting the Nivid save such ones as consist of three or four verses." Say, followed this explanation which most naturally suggests itself to every reader. But in consideration that all the Nivid

Nivid to select hymns<sup>26</sup> consisting of more than of tanzas with three or four verses. Through the Nivid the celebration of the Sâman is made successive.<sup>26</sup>

At the evening libation he ought to put the Nivid when only one verse (of the Shastra) remains (to be recited). Should he recite the Nivid when two verses (of the Shastra) are still remaining, he would thus destroy the faculty of generation, and deprive the offspring of their embryos. Thence he ought to repeat the Nivid at the evening libation when only one verse (of the Shastra) remains (to be recited).

He ought not to let fall the Nivid beyond the hymn (to which it belongs).<sup>27</sup> Should he, however, do it, he ought not to revert to it again (not to use the hymn), the place (where the Nivid is to be put) being destroyed. He ought (in such a case) to select another hymn which is addressed to the same deity and in the same metre, to put the Nivid into it.

(In such a case) he ought before (repeating the new) Nivid hymn, to recite the hymn: mâ pragâma hymns, actually in use, and mentioned in the Aitareya Br. exceed in number four verses (some contain eleven, others even fifteen verses), that explanation cannot be correct. The passage can only have the sense given to it in my translation.

<sup>27</sup> The meaning is: he should not repeat the Nivid, after he might have repeated the whole of the hymn in which it ought to have been inserted. Should he, however, have committed such a mistake, then he must select another hymn, and put the Nivid in its proper place, i. e. before the last verse of the hymn. The Hotar is more liable to commit such a mistake at the evening libation, than at the two preceding ones. For at the evening libation there are seven Nivids (to Savitar, Dyâvâprithivî, Ribhus, Vaisvânara, Vis'vedevâh, Marutas, and Jâtavedâs) required, whilst we find at the morning libation only one (which is rather a Puroruk than a Nivid), and at the midday libation two (to the Marutas and Indra).

patho vayam (10, 57), i. e., let us not go astray. For he loses his way who gets confounded at sacrifice. (By repeating the second pada) na yajñā indra somināḥ (10, 57, 1) i. e., (let us not lose) Indra, the Soma sacrifice, he prevents the sacrifice from falling out of the sacrifice. (By repeating the third pada) mā antaḥ sthūr no arātayaḥ, i. e., "May wicked men stand among us!" he turns away : who have wicked designs and defeats them.

In the second verse (of this hymn) yo yajñas prasādhanas tantur, i. e., "Let us recover the sū thread which serves for the performance of sacrifice and is spread among the gods<sup>28</sup> by means of which was (hitherto) sacrificed (by us)," the expression tantu (thread) means offspring. By repeating the Hotar spreads (saṁtanoti) offspring for the sacrificer.

(The words of the third verse are) mano mā hūṛāmahe nārāśaṁsena somena, i. e., "Now we bring an offering<sup>29</sup> to the mind (mana) by pouring water in the Soma cups (devoting them thus to Nārāśaṁsa). By means of the mind the sacrifice is spread; means of the mind it is performed. This is verily atonement at that occasion (for the mistake pointed out above).

<sup>29</sup> Of आहवामहे Śāy. gives two different explanations in his commentaries on the Ait. Br. and in that on the Rigveda Saṁhitā. In the first he explains it by आहवामि I call hither (from hré call) in the other he derives it from hu to sacrifice. The la

(On the Ahâva and Pratigara.)

They (the theologians) say: the subjects of the gods<sup>1</sup> are to be procured. (To achieve this end) one metre is to be put in another metre. (This is done when) the Hotar calls (the Adhvaryu) by s'omśârom "Let us both repeat, yes!" which (formula) consists of three syllables. At the morning libation the Adhvaryu responds (prati-grinâti) (to this formula of three syllables) with one consisting of five: samśamo daivôm.<sup>2</sup> This makes eight on the whole. The Gâyatri has eight syllables (i. e. each of its three padas). Thus these two (formulas) make the Gâyatri at the commencement of the recitation at the morning libation. After the Hotar has finished his recitation, he uses this (formula of) four syllables: uktham vâchi,<sup>3</sup> i. e. the recitation has been read, to which the Adhvaryu (responds) in four syllables : ow ukthas'â, i. e. thou hast repeated the recitation <sup>4</sup> (uktham, shastram). This makes eight syllables. The Gâyatrî consists of eight syllables. Thus the two (formulas) make at the morning libati there is instead of it only : उक्थं वाचीन्द्राय शृण्वते त्वा. At every Shastra repeated by the Hotar there is a little difference in the appendages to this formula. The rules as given here in this paragraph refer only to the conclusion of the Shastras of the minor priests ; they alone conclude in the way here stated without any other appendage (see As'val. 5, 10). The concluding formulas for the Hotar are, according to As'val. S'r. S. as follows :

<sup>3</sup> The formula uktham vâchi, with some additional words always concludes a Shâstra. In the Kaushîtaki Brâhmanam (14, 1), and in the Sâukhây. S'rânta Sûtras (8, 16, 17-20) this formula is called uktham vâchi. In the As'val. Sûtras no particular name is given to it. The Kaushîtaki and Sâukhây. Sâkhas differ here a little from that of the As'valayana. According to the former, uktham vâchi is always preceded by a few sentences which are not to be found in As'val. Thus, we find, for instance there, at the end of the Marutvatiya Shâstra, the following formulas: रूपमनुरूपं प्रतिरूपं सुरुपमिहोपादेो भद्रमाप्नुते . सोऽक्षमवाचोद्गाय. In the As'val. Sûtras (5, 14)

- (a) For the Ajya Shastra : उक्थं वाचि घोषाय त्वा (5, 0).
- (b) For the Pra-uga Shastra : उक्थं वाचि श्लोकाय त्वा (5, 1).
- (c) For the Marutvatiya Shastra, (see above).
- (d) For the Nishkevalya Shastra : उक्थं वाचीन्द्रायोपशृण्वते (5, 15).
- (e) For the Vaisvadeva Shastra : उक्थं वाचीन्द्राय देवेश ३ इत्यै त्वा (5, 18).
- (f) For the Agnimûruta Shastra : उक्थं वाचीन्द्राय देवेश ३ श्रुताय त्वा (5, 20).

All these appendages express the idea, that the god to whom recitation is addressed should hear it, and take notice of it. ghoshâya tvâ means "that it (the recitation) might be sounded to thee;" upas'rinvate tvâ "that it might be for thy hearing;" the active participle in the present tense must here have something the meaning of an abstract noun, corresponding with shlokâya âs'rutyaû. Literally upas'rinvate appears to mean "that the hearer (of this recitation might come) to thee."

After the repetition of these formulas which conclude all Shastras the Yajña verse belonging to the particular Shastra is recited.

<sup>4</sup> This alone can be the meaning of the obscure formula uktham which comes no doubt from the remotest antiquity. It is perhaps a corruption of uktham s'âs, the neutral character m being left out. Sây. explains : त्वं शस्त्रं शंसि "thou art the repeater of the Shastras."

But this meaning is not appropriate to the occasion at which the formula is used. This is done only when the recitation is over. The only proper meaning of the formula therefore is either "the recitation is repeated," or "thou hast repeated the recitation."

the Gâyatrî<sup>5</sup> at both ends (at the commencement and the end).

At the midday libation the Hotar calls: adhvaryo s'omârom, i. e. "Adhvaryu, let us two repeat! Om!" with six syllables! to which the Adhvaryu responds with five syllables: s'amâmo daivom. This makes eleven syllables. The Trishtubh has eleven syllables. Thus he makes the Trishtubh at the beginning of the Shastra at the midday libation. After having repeated it, he says, uktham vâchi indrâya, i. e. the Shastra has been read for Indra, in seven syllables; to which the Adhvaryu responds in four syllables: om ukthas'â. This makes (also) eleven syllables. The Trishtubh has eleven syllables. Thus the two (formulas) make the Trishtubh at both ends of the Shastra at the midday libation.

At the evening libation the Hotar calls: adhvaryo s'omârom, in seven syllables, to which the Adhvaryu responds in five syllables: s'amâmo daivom. This makes twelve syllables. The Jagatî has twelve syllables. Thus (with these two formulas taken together) he makes the Jagatî at the beginning of the Shastra at the evening libation. After having repeated the Shastra, he says, in eleven syllables: uktham vâchi indrâya devabhyaḥ, i. e. "the Shastra has been repeated for Indra," for the Devas, to which the Adhvaryu responds in one syllable: om! This makes twelve syllables. The Jagatî has twelve syllables. Thus the two (formulas) make the Jagatî at both ends at the evening libation.

This (the mutual relation of the three chief metres to one another and to the sacrificer) saw a Rishi, and expressed (his opinion) in the mantra: yaḍ gayatre adhi (1, 164, 23), i. e. "those who know that the Gâyatrî is put over a Gâyatrî, and that out of Trishṭubh a (another) Trishṭubh is formed, and Jagat (Jagatî) is put in a Jagat, obtain immortality.

In this way he who has such a knowledge of metre in metre, and procures "the subjects of the gods."

13.

On the distribution of the metres among the gods Anusṭubh Prajâpati's metre.)

Prajâpati allotted to the deities their (different) parts in the sacrifice and metres. He allotted Agni and the Vasus at the morning libation the Gâyatrî, to Indra and the Rudras the Trishṭubh the midday libation, and to the Vis've Devâs and Adityas the Jagatî at the evening libation.

His (Prajâpati's) own metre was Anusṭubh. He pushed it to the end (of the Shâstra), to the very end repeated by the Achhâvâka (which is the last). Anusṭubh said to him: "Thou art the most wicked of all gods; for thou hast me who am thy metre pushed to the end (of the Shâstra), to the very end repeated by the Achhâvâka." He acknowledged (that he had wronged her). (In order to give redress) he took his own Soma (sacrifice) and put it at the beginning, at the very mouth of it, Anusṭubh. Thence Anusṭubh is joined (to the Shâstras) as the first metre, as the very mouth-piece at all libations.

He who has such a knowledge becomes the first, at the very mouth (of the others), and attains to supremacy. Prajâpati having thus made (the beginning) of all libations) at his own Soma sacrifice (with Anushtubh), the sacrificer (who does the same) becomes master of the sacrifice, and the latter becomes (properly) performed. Wherever a sacrificer has a sacrifice performed so that he remains master of it, it is performed for this (the whole) assemblage of men <sup>7</sup> (who might be with the sacrificer).

<sup>6</sup> The meaning is, that no pada of a metre, neither that of Gâyatrî nor Trishṭubh, nor Jagatî can stand alone, but must be joined to another pada of the same metre. The âhâra and prâtra must therefore be at the beginning as well as at the end of the Shâstra in the same metre; for each time they consist only of one pada, and that is not auspicious.

(How Agni, as Hotar of the gods, escaped the meshes of Death.)

When Agni was the Hotar of the Gods, Death sitting in the Balushpavamânâ Stotra <sup>8</sup> lurked for him. By commencing the Ajya Shastra <sup>9</sup> with the Anushtubh metre he overcame Death. Death repaired to the Ajya Shastra lurking for Agni. By beginning (to repeat) the Pra-uga Shastra, he overcame Death (again).

At the midday libation Death sat in the Pavamâna Stotra <sup>10</sup> lurking for Agni. By commencing the Mantvatiya Shastra with Anushtubh, he overcame Death. Death could not sit, at that libation, in the Bṛihati verses (repeated by the Hotar at the commencement of the Nishkevalya Shastra). For the Bṛihatis are life. Thus Death could not take away the life. This is the reason that the Hotar begins (the Nishkevalya Shastra) with the Stotriya triplet (corresponding to the Sâman which is sung) in the Bṛihati metre. The Bṛihatis are life. By commencing <sup>7</sup> The sacrificer is to make the sacrifice, i. e. the sacrificial man, his own, i. e. he must subject it to his own will, just as Prajâpati did. Thus he makes it beneficial to others, just as Prajâpati benefited gods and men by it.

his second Shashtra (with Bṛihatīś) he has the preservation of (his) life in view.

At the evening libation Death sat in the Pavamāna Stotra lurking for Agni. By commencing the Vaiśvadeva Shashtra with Anuṣṭubh, Agni overcame Death. Death repaired to the Yajñā yajñīya Sāman.<sup>11</sup> By commencing the Agni-Māruta Shashtra with a hymn addressed to Vaiśvânara, he overcame Death. For the hymn addressed to Vaiśvânara is a weapon, the Yajna yajñīya Sāman is the place. By repeating the Vaiśvânara hymn he thus turns Death out of his place.

Having escaped all the meshes of Death, and his clubs, Agni came off in safety. The Hotar who has such a knowledge comes off in safety, preserving his life to its full extent, and attains to his full age (of a hundred years).

15.

(Marutvatīya Shashtra. Indra conceals himself. How he was found.) Indra after having killed Vṛitra, thought, I might perhaps not have subdued him (apprehending his revival), and went to very distant regions. He (ultimately) arrived at the most distant place. This place is Anuṣṭubh, and Anuṣṭubh is Speech. He having entered Speech, lay down in her. All beings scattering themselves here and there went in search of him. The Pitaras (manes) found him one day earlier than the gods. This is the reason that ceremonies are performed in honour of the Pitaras previous to the day on which they sacrifice for the gods.<sup>12</sup> They (the gods) said, "Let us squeeze the Soma juice; (then) Indra will come to us very quickly." So they did. They squeezed the Soma juice. By repeating the verse, â tva ratham (8, 57, 1), they made him (Indra) turn (towards the Soma juice). By the mantra, idam vaso sutam (8, 2, 1), he became visible to the gods on account of the term (suta) i. e. squeezed (contained in it).<sup>13</sup> By the mantra indra nedhya ed ihi (8, 53, 5),<sup>14</sup> they made him (Indra) come into the middle (of the sacrificial place).

He who has such a knowledge gets his sacrifice performed in the presence of Indra, and becomes (consequently) successful by means of the sacrifice having Indra (being honoured by his presence).

16.

(Indra-Nihava Pragâtha.)

As Indra had killed Vṛitra, all deities thinking that he had not conquered him, left him. The Maruts alone who are his own relations<sup>15</sup> did not leave him. The "maruto svâpayaḥ" (in the verse, indra nedhya) are the vital airs. The vital airs did not leave him <sup>13</sup> These two first are called the pratipad and anuchara of the Marutvatiya Shastra, the beginning verse and the sequel.

<sup>15</sup> Svâpi, which term occurs in the Indra-Nihava Pragâtha (8, 53, 5), is explained by Sây. सुषुप्तिकाले ऽपि वर्तमानाः. But this interpretation, which is founded on Vedantic ideas strange to the poets of the Vedic hymns, is certainly wrong; for "being in profound sleep" does not suit the sense of the passage at all. How could the Maruts assist Indra when they were in "profound sleep" (śushupti)? In order to countenance his interpretation, Sây. refers to the meaning "prâṇa" life, attributed to the word by the author of the Ait. Br. itself in this passage. The word is however to be traceable only to su-âpi or sva-âpi. That âpi means "fiend, associate" follows from several passages of the Saṁhitâ. See Boehtlingk and Roth's Sanscrit Dictionary, i., p. 660.

17.

(Brâhmanaspati Pragâtha. To what Stotras the Indra-Nihava and Brâhmanaspati Pragâtha belong. The Dhânyâs.)

He repeats the Pragâtha<sup>16</sup> addressed to Brâhmanaspati. Led by Brihaspati as Purohita (spiritual guide) the gods conquered the celestial world, and were (also) victorious everywhere in this world. Thus the sacrificer who is led by Brihaspati as his Purohita, conquers the celestial world, and is (also) victorious everywhere in this world.

These two Pragâthas<sup>17</sup> not being accompanied by a chant, are recited with repetition<sup>18</sup> (of the last pada of each verse). They ask, "How is it that these two Pragâthas, which are not accompanied by a chant, are recited with repetition (of the last pada of each verse), the rule being that no Shastra verse can be recited with such a repetition if it be not accompanied by a chant?" (The answer is) The Marutvatîya (Shastra)

<sup>16</sup> A Pragâtha comprises two richas according to As'v. S'r. S. 2, 14: तृचाः प्रतिपदनुचरा द्विचाः प्रगाथाः i. e. the Pratipad (opening of the Marutvatîya Shastra) and its Anuchara (sequel) consist of three richas, the Pragâthas of two richas.

<sup>18</sup> The two Pragâtha verses are to be repeated so as to form a triplet. This is achieved by repeating thrice the fourth pada of each verse if it be in the Brihati metre. In a similar way the Sama singers make of two verses three.

is the recitation for the Pavamāna Stotra; <sup>19</sup> they perform this Stotra (in singing) with six verses in the Gayatri, with six in the Brihatī, and with three in the Trishtubh metres. Thus the Pavamāna (Stoma) of the midday libation comprises three metres, and is fifteen-fold.<sup>20</sup> They ask, "How becomes this Pavamāna Stoma celebrated (by a Śāstra)?" The two last verses of the Pratipad triplet (8, 57, 1-3, â tvā ratham)

<sup>20</sup> For the explanation of this and similar terms Śāyana refers always to the Brahmanas of the Sāmaveda. The explanatory phrase of the pañchadasaḥ stoma of the Sāmaveda theologians is constantly the following: पंचम्यो हिं करोति सः तिष्ठभिः स एकया न एकया। पंचम्यो हिं करोति स एकया। स तिष्ठभिः स एकया पंचम्यो हिं करोति स एकया स एकया स तिसृभिः These enigmatical words are utterly unintelligible without oral information, which I was happy enough to obtain. They refer to the number of verses obtained by repetition of the triplet which forms the text of a Sāman. The Sāman consists of two verses only, it is first to be made to consist of three, by repetition of some feet of the two principal verses, before it can be used as a chant at the Soma sacrifices. After a triplet of verses has been thus obtained, it is to be chanted in three turns, each turn containing in three subdivisions a certain number of repetitions. This number of repetitions is indicated by three rows of wooden sticks of the Udumbara tree, called kusā, each row comprising five (if the Stoma is the pañchadasa the fifteen-fold), which the three Sāma singers must arrange according to a certain order before they can chant the Sāman. Each row is called a parvāya. The several sticks in each row are placed in the following order: 1st row—3 in a straight, 1 across, 1 in a straight line; 2nd row—3 in a straight, 3 across, 1 in a straight line; 3rd row—1 in a straight, 1 across, 3 in a straight line. As often as the sticks of one row are laid, the Sāma singer utters the sound hīnī. This apparatus is regarded as quite essential for the successful chanting of the Sāmans. See more on this subject in the notes to 3, 42.

are in the Gâyatrî metre (the first being Anushtubh), and also the triplet which forms the sequel (of the Pratipad) is in the Gâyatrî metre. Thus the Gâyatri verses (of the Pavamâna Stotra) become celebrated. By means of these two Pragâthas (the Indra-Nihava and Brâhmaṇaspati Pragâtha, which are in the Bṛihatî metre) the Bṛihatî verses (of the Pavamâna Stotra) become celebrated.

The Sâma singers perform this chant with these verses in the Bṛihatî metre by means of the Raurava and Yaudhhaja Sâmans (tunes<sup>21</sup>) repeating thrice (the last pada of each verse). This is the reason that the two Pragâthas, though they have no Stoma belonging to them, are recited with repeating thrice (the last pada of each verse). Thus the Stotra is in accordance with the Shastra.

Two Dhâpyâs<sup>22</sup> are in the Trishtubh metre, and also the hymn<sup>23</sup> in which the Nivid is inserted. By these verses (in the Trishtubh metre) are the Trishtubhs of the Stotra celebrated. In this way the Pavamâna Stoma, comprising three metres, being fifteen-fold, becomes celebrated for him who has such a knowledge.

(On the origin of the Dhâpyâs, their nature and meaning.)

He recites the Dhâpyâs. Prajâpati had (once) sucked up from these worlds everything he desired by means of the Dhâyyâs (from dhe to suck). Thus the sacrificer who has such a knowledge sucks up from these worlds everything he desires. The nature of the Dhâyyâs, is, that the gods at a sacrifice wherever they discovered a breach, covered it with a Dhâyyâ; thence they are so called (from dhâ to put). The sacrifice of him who has such a knowledge becomes performed without any breach in it.

As to the Dhâyyâs we sew up with them (every rent in the) sacrifice, just as we sew up (a rent in) a cloth with a pin that it might become mended. A breach in the sacrifice of him who has such a knowledge becomes thus mended.

As to the Dhâyyâs, they are the recitations for the Upasads.<sup>24</sup> The verse Agnir netâ (3, 20, 4), which is addressed to Agni, is the recitation for the first Upasad; the verse trāṁ Soma kratubhiḥ, which is addressed to Soma (1, 91, 2), is the recitation for the second Upasad; the verse pīrvanty apo (1, 64, 6), which is addressed to Vishṇu, is the recitation for the third Upasad. Whatever place one may conquer by means of the Soma sacrifice, he who having such a knowledge recites the Dhâyyâs, conquers (it only) by the several Upasads.

About this last Dhâyyâ some say, the Hotar ought (instead of pīrvanty apo) to repeat tān vo maho (2, 34, 11), asserting, "we distinctly know that this verse is repeated (as the third Dhâyyâ) among the Bharatas." But this advice is not to be cared for. Should the Hotar repeat that verse (tān vo maho), he would prevent the rain from coming, for Parjanya has power over the rain (but there is no allusion to him in that verse). But if he repeat the verse pīrvanty apo where there is a pada referring to rain (the third atyam na mihe), and one referring to the Marutas

(the storms accompanying the rain, in the first pada), and the word vinīyanti, "they carry off," which refers to Vishṇu, whose characteristic feature is said to be vichakrame, i. e. he strode (thrice through the universe), which meaning is (also) implied in the term vinayanti, and (where is further in it) the word ajye "being laden with booty" referring to Indra (then the rain would come). This verse has four padas, and (as we have seen) refers to rain, the Marutas, Vishṇu, and Indra, and though (on account of these allusions just mentioned, and its being in the Jagati metre) properly belonging to the evening libation, it is repeated at the midday libation. Therefore the cattle of the Bharatas which are at their stables at evening (for being milked) repair at noon to a shed erected for giving all the cows shelter (against heat). That verse (pinrauty apo) is in the Jagati metre; cattle are of the Jagatī nature; the soul of the sacrificer is the midday. Thus the priest provides cattle for the sacrificer (when he recites this verse as a Dhâyyâ at the midday libation).

19.

(The Marutcratiya Pragâtha. The Nivid hymn of the Marutcratiya Shuṣtra. How the Hotar can injure the sacrificer by misplacing the Nivid.)

He repeats the Marutcratiya Pragâtha (pra va indrâya brihate, 8, 78, 3). The Marutas are cattle, cattle are the Pragâtha (that is to say, the Pragâthas used) for obtaining cattle.

He repeats the hymn janishthâ ugrah (10, 73). This hymn serves for producing the sacrificer. For by means of it the Hotar brings forth the sacrificer from the sacrifice as the womb of the gods. By this (hymn) victory is obtained; with it the sacrificer remains victor, without it he is defeated.

This hymn was (seen) by (the Rishi) Gauriviti. (Gauriviti the son of S'akti, having come very near the celestial world, saw this hymn (i. e. had it revealed); by means of it he gained heaven. Thus the sacrificer gains by this (hymn) the celestial world.

Having repeated half the number of verses (of this hymn), he leaves out the other half, and inserts the Nivid<sup>20</sup> in the midst (of both parts). The Nivid is <sup>20</sup> This is not strictly in accordance with the rules laid down by Āśvalayana, who says in his S'ānta Sūtras, 5, 14: अनिष्ठा उप-दत्तेकभूयसीः शस्त्वा मरुत्वतीयां निविदं दध्यात्सर्वत्रैवमयुजास्तु मा-ध्वन्दिने i. e. the Nivid Sūkta is, janishthā ugrah. After having repeated one verse more than half the number of verses (the whole has eleven verses) of which it consists, he ought to insert the Nivid. That ought always to be done at the midday libation, where the number of verses of the Nivid Sūkta is uneven. The Sūkta janishthā ugra consists of eleven verses. The number being uneven, the Maṇvatīya Nivid is put in the hymn janishthā ugra after the sixth verse, which concludes with धन्य. The text of this Nivid (see the Sukhāvāna Sūtras, 8, 10) is (according to Sapta Hānta) as follows:

शोऽमावोऽहं मिंद्रो मरुत्वान्त्वामस्य पिबतु । मरुत्स्त्वोचो मरु-

i. e. May Indra with the Marutas drink of the Soma. He has the praise of the Marutas; he has (with him) the assemblage of the Marutas. He is the friend of the Marutas, he is their help. He slew the enemies, he released the waters (kept back by the demons of the air) by means of the strength of the Marutas. The gods following him rejoiced at the (defeat of the) Asuras, the conquest of Vjitra, at the killing of Sambura, at the battle (for conquering cows). Him (Indra) when he was repeating the secret verses, in the highest region, in a remote place, made the sacred rites and hymns (brah- the ascent to heaven; it is the ladder for climbing up to heaven. (Therefore) he ought to recite it (stopping at regular intervals) as if he were climbing up (a height) by means of a ladder. Thus he can take along with him (up to the celestial world) that sacrificer to whom he is friendly. Now he who desires heaven, avails himself of this opportunity of going thither.

Should the Hotar intend to do any harm (to the sacrificer) thinking, "may I slay the Vis' through the Kshatra," he need only repeat the Nivid in three different places of the hymn (in the commencement, middle, and end). For the Nivid is the Kshatram (commanding power), and the hymn the Vis' (prototype of the Vais'yas); thus he slays the Vis' of any one whom he wishes through his Kshatra.<sup>20</sup> Thus he slays the Vis' through the Kshatram.

Should he think, "may I slay the Kshatram through the Vis'," he need only thrice dissect the Nivid through the hymn (by repeating the hymn at the commencement, in the middle, and at the end of the Nivid). The Nivid is the Kshatram, and the mâni) grow (increase in strength); these (sacred rites) are through their power inviolable. He makes presents to the gods, he shares with the Marutas his friends. May Indra with the Marutas hear (our prayer), and drink of the Soma. May the god come to the oblation offered to the gods with (our) thoughts being directed to the gods. May he protect this Brahma (spiritual power), may he protect this Kshatram (worldly power) may he protect the sacrificer who prepares this (the Soma juice); (may he confer) with his manifold help. May he (Indra) hear the sacred hymns (brahmânî), may he confer with (his) aid!

<sup>20</sup> These sentences can be only understood when one bears in mind that men of the higher caste are supposed to have a share in a certain prototype. Kshatra represents the commanding power. A Brahman, deprived of his Kshatra, loses all influence and becomes quite insignificant in worldly things; if deprived of his Vis', he loses his means of subsistence. A Kshatriya loses his power, if deprived of his kshatram, and his subjects, if deprived of his Vis'.

hymn is Vis'. He thus slays whosoever Kshatra he wishes by means of the Vis'.

Should he think, "I will cut off from the sacrificer the Vis' (relation, subject, offspring) on both sides," he need only dissect (at the beginning and end) the Nivîd by the call śoṃsarom. Thus he cuts the sacrificer off from his Vis' on both sides (from father and mother, as well as from his children). Thus he should do who has sinister designs towards the sacrificer. But otherwise (in the manner first described) he should do to him who desires for heaven (if he be friendly to him).

He concludes with the verse, vayalī suparnā upasadar (10, 73, 11), i. e. "the poets with good thoughts have approached Indra, begging like birds with beautiful wings; uncover him who is enshrouded in darkness; fill the eye (with light); release us who are bound (by darkness), as it were, with a rope (vidhā)." When he repeats the words "uncover him," &c., then he should think that the darkness in which he is enshrouded, might go by means of his mind. Thus he rids himself of darkness. By repeating the words "fill the eye," he should repeatedly rub both his eyes. He who has such a knowledge keeps the use of his eyes up to his old age. In the words "release us," &c. the word vidhā means rope. The meaning is, release us who are tied with a rope, as it were. ●

(Why the Marutas are honoured with a separate Shastra.)

Indra when he was about to kill Vṛitra, said to all the gods, "stand near me, help me." So they did. They rushed upon Vṛitra to kill him. He perceived they were rushing upon him for the purpose of killing him. He thought, "I will frighten them. He breathed at them, upon which all the gods were flung away and took to flight; only the Marutas did not leave him (Indra); they exhorted him by saying "Strike, O Bhagavann! kill (Vṛitra)! show thy prowess!" This saw a Rishi, and recorded it in the verse vṛitrasya tvâ s'vasathûl (8, 85, 7), i. e. "all the gods who were associated (with Indra) left him when flung away by the breathing of Vṛitra. I thou keepest friendship with the Marutas, thou wilt conquer in all these battles (with Vṛitra)."

He (Indra) perceived, "the Marutas are certainly my friends; these (men) love me! well, I shall give them a share in this (my own) celebration (Shashtra)." He gave them a share in this celebration. Formerly both (Indra as well as the Marutas) had a place in the Nishkevalya<sup>27</sup> Shashtra. (But to reward their great services he granted them more, viz: a separate Marutvatîya Shashtra, &c.). The share of the Marutas (in the midday libation) is, that the Adhvaryu takes the Marutvatîya Graha, and the Hotar repeats the Marutvatîya Pragâtha, the Marutvatîya hymn, and the Marutvatîya Nivid. After having repeated the Marutvatîya Shashtra, he recites the Marutvatîya Yâjyâ. Thus he satisfies the deities by giving them their shares. (The Marutvatîya Yâjyâ is) ye trâhihatye maghavann (3, 47, 4), i. e. "drink Indra, the Soma juice, surrounded by thy host, the Marutas who assisted thee, O Maghavann, in the battles with the huge serpent (Ahi)," &c. Wherever Indra remained victor in his various engagements, through their assistance, wherever he displayed his prowess, there (in the feast given in his honour) he announced them (the Marutas) as his associates, and made them share in the Soma juice along with him.

(Indra wishes for Prajâpati's rank. Why Prajâpati is called kah. Indra's share in the sacrifice.)

Indra after having slain Vritra and remained victor in various battles, said to Prajâpati, "I will have thy rank, that of the supreme deity; I will be great!" Prajâpati said, "Who am I" (ko aham)? Indra answered, "just what thou hast told (i. e. kah, who!)" Thence Prajâpati received the name kah, who? Prajâpati is (the god) kah, who? Indra is called mahendra, i. e. the great Indra, because he had become great (greater than all the other gods).

He, after having become great, said to the gods, "give me a distinguished reception!"<sup>28</sup> just as one here (in this world) who is (great) wishes for (honourable) distinction, and he who attains to an eminent position, is great. The gods said to him, "tell it yourself what shall be yours (as a mark of distinction)." He answered, "this Mahendra Soma jar (Gruha), among the libations that of the midday, among the Shastras the Nishkevalya, among the metres the Trishṭubh, and among the Sâmans the Prishṭha."<sup>29</sup> They thus gave him these marks of distinction. They give them also to him who has such a knowledge

<sup>29</sup> Prishṭha is a combination of two Sâma triplets for singing. Here the principal chant of the Nishkevalya Shashtra, which is the centre of the whole Soma feast, is to be understood. At the Agnishtoma this chant is the Rathantaram. The four Stotras at the midday libation, which follow the Pavamâna Stotra, are called Prishṭha Stotras. For they are capable of entering into the combination, called Prishṭha, by putting in the midst of them another Sâman. At the Agnishtoma the actual Prishṭha is, however, not required. The four Prishṭha Stotras of the midday libation are, the Rathantaram, Vâmadevyam, Nau-dhasam, and Kaleyam.

The gods said to him, "thou hast chosen for thyself all; let some of these things (just mentioned) be ours also." He said, "No, why should anything belong to you?" They answered, "let it belong to us, Maghavann." He only looked at them (as if conniving).

(Story of Prāsahā the wife of Indra. On the origin of the Dhāyā verse of the Nishkeralya Shūtra. How a king can defeat a hostile army. All gods have a share in the Yājñā in the Virāt metre. On the importance of the Virāt metre at this occasion.)

The gods said, "there is a beloved wife of Indra, of the Vāvāta<sup>30</sup> order, Prāsahā by name. Let us inquire of her (what Indra's intention is)." So they did. They inquired of her (what Indra's intention was). She said to them, "I shall give you the answer tomorrow." For women ask their husbands; they do so during the night. On the morning the gods went to her (to inquire). She addressed the following (verses) to them: yad vāvāna purutamam<sup>31</sup> (10, 74, 6), i. e., what Indra, the slayer of Vṛitra, the con-

<sup>30</sup>The wives of a king are divided into three classes, the first is called mahishi, the second vāvāta, the third or last parivṛkta. Sāy. Vāvāta is in the Rigveda Sāṃhita, 8, 84, 14, a name of Indra's two horses. Sāyana in his commentary on the passage, proposes two etymologies, from the root van to obtain, and vā to go. The latter is the most probable.

यद्वावान् पुरतमं पुरावालात्तुवहेन्द्रो नामान्यथा।

अचेति प्रासहस्यतिस्त्विविद्यान्यदीमुश्मसि कर्तव्यं करतत् ॥

करत is taken by Sāyana in both his commentaries on the Aitareya Brāhmaṇam, and the Rigveda Sāṃhita in the sense of a present tense करत. But it is here conjunctive, which word alone gives a good sense. Besides the present tense is never formed in this way.

quero in many battles of old has gained, filling (the world) with his name (fame), by what he showed himself as master in conquering (prâsahaspati), a powerful (hero), that is what we beseech him to do (now); may he do it!" Indra is the mighty husband of Prâsahâ.<sup>32</sup> (The last pada) "that is what we beseech him;" &c. means, he will do what we have told him.<sup>33</sup>

Thus she (Prâsahâ) told them. The gods said, let her have a share here (in this Nishkevalya shastra) who has not yet obtained one in it (na râ ulat).<sup>34</sup> So they did. They gave her (a share) in it; thence this verse, yad râvâna, &c. forms part of her (Nishkevalya) Shastra.<sup>35</sup>

The army (senâ) is Indra's beloved wife, Vâvâta, Prâsahâ by name. Prayâpati is by the name of hah who is his father-in-law. If one wish that his army might be victorious, then he should go beyond the battle line (occupied by his own army), cut a stalk of grass at the top and end; and throw it against the other (hostile) army by the words, prâsahe kas tvâ pas'yati? i. e. "Ô Prâsahâ, who sees thee?" If one who has such a knowledge cuts a stalk of grass at the top and end, and throws (the parts cut) against the other (hostile) army, saying prâsahe kas tvâ pas'yati? it becomes split and dissolved, just as a daughter-in-law becomes abashed and faints, when seeing her father-in-law (for the first time).

<sup>34</sup> This is nothing but an attempt at an etymology of the name Prâsahâ. That it is perfectly childish, every one may see at a glance.

Indra said to them (the gods), "you also shall have (a share) in this (Shastra)." The gods said, "let it be the Yâjyâ verse<sup>35</sup> in the Virât metre of the Nishkevalya Shastra." The Virât has thirty-three syllables. There are thirty-three gods, viz. eight Vasus, eleven Rudras, twelve Adityas, (one) Prajâpati, and (one) Vashatkâra. He (thus) makes the deities participate in the syllables; and according to the order of the syllables they drink, and become thus satisfied by (this) divine dish.

Should the Hotar wish to deprive the sacrificer of his house and estate, he ought to use for his Yâjya along with the Vashatkâra a verse which is not in the Virât metre, but in the Gâyatrî or Trishtubh, or any other metre (save the Virât); thus he deprives him of his house and estate.

Should he wish to procure a house and estate for the sacrificer, he ought to repeat his Yâjyâ in the Virât metre: piba somam indra mandatu, (7, 22, 1). By this verse he procures for the sacrificer a house and estate.

23.

(On the close relationship between Sâman and Rik. Why the Sâma singers require three ṛichas. The five-fold division of both. Both are contained in the Virât. The five parts of the Nishkevalya Shastra.)

First there existed, the Rik and the Sâman (separate from one another); sâ was the Rik, and the name amâh was the Sâman. Sâ, which was Rik, said to the Sâman, "let us copulate for begetting children." The Sâman answered, "No; for my greatness exceeds (yours)." (Thereupon) the Rik became two; both spoke (to the Sâman to the same effect); but it did not comply with their request. The Rik became three (divided into three); all three spoke (to the Sâman to the same effect). Thus the Sâman joined the three Richas. Thence the Sâma singers use for their chant the Richas,<sup>37</sup> (that is) they perform their work of chanting with three Richas. (This is so also in worldly affairs.) For one man has many wives (represented by the Richas), but one wife has not many husbands at the same time. From sâ and ama having joined, sâma was produced. Thence it is called sâman.<sup>38</sup> He who has such a knowledge becomes sâman, i. e. equal, equitable. He who exists and attains to the highest rank, is a sâman, whilst they use the word asâmanya, i. e. inequitable, partial, as a term of reproach.

Both, the Rik as well as the Sâman, were prepared (for sacrificial use) by dividing either into five <sup>37</sup> The Sâman, to which the Nishkevalya Shastra of the Hotar refers, is the Rathantaram. It consists only of two richas (verses), vr. abhi trî s'ura and na tvâra (Sâmaveda Sañh. 2, 30, 31), but by the repetition of certain parts of these two verses, three are produced. See about this process, called punarâdîyam, above.

<sup>38</sup> The same etymology is given in the Chândogya Upanishad, 3, 6, 1-6, p. 58 in the Calcutta edition of the Bibliotheca Indica):

इयमेव सा अग्निमस्तुताम i. e. the earth is sa, and fire ama, whence comes Sama. The author of this Upanishad also supposes that the Sama rests on the Rik, the latter being compared to the earth, the first to the fire burning on her. This etymology is wholly untenable from a philological point of view. The crude form is not sâma but siman, thence the derivation of the second part of the word from ama (a noun ending in a, not an) falls to the ground. The first part sâ is regarded as the feminine of the demonstrative pronoun, and said to mean Rik, for Rik is a feminine. But such monstrous formations of words are utterly strange to the Sanscrit language and sanctioned by no rules of the grammarians. In all probability we have to trace the word sâman to the root sa "to bind," whence the word arasâna, i. e. pause, is derived. It thus means "what is bound, strung together," referring to the peculiar way of chanting the Sâmans. All sounds and syllables of one of the parts of a Sâman are so chanted, that they appear to be strung together, and to form only one long sound.*

separate parts: (1) âhâva (the call s'omśâvom at the commencement of the Shastras, and hîmkâra (the sound hum, commencing every Sâman); (2) the prastâra (prelude, first part of the text of the Sâman) and the first rich (out of the three, required for the Sâman of the Nishkevalya Shastras); (3) the udgîtha (principal part of the Sâman), and the second rich; (4) the pratihâra (response of the Sâman), and the last rich (out of the three); (5) nidhanam (the finale of the Sâman) and the call vaushat (at the end of the Yâjyâ verses).<sup>30</sup> Thence they say, the sacrifice is <sup>30</sup> Many Sâmans are divided into four or five parts. See the note to 2, 22. If five parts are mentioned, then either the hîmkâra which precedes the prastâra is counted as a separate part, or the pratihâra part divided into two, pratihâra and upadrava, the latter generally only comprising a few syllables.

In order to better illustrate the division of Sâmans into five parts, I give here the Rathantaram according to these divisions:

First rich—(1), prastâra:— ऊम् ॥ आभि त्वा शूर नोनमो वा ॥

(2) udgîtha: ओमादुम्या इव धेनवईशानमस्य जगतः सुवा ईशां

(3) pratihâra: आईशानमा इन्द्रा ।

(4) upadrava: सुसूषा ओवा हा उवा ।

(5) nidhanam: अस् ।

Second rich—(1), prastâra: इशेवा ।

(2) udgîtha: ओनामिन्द्र सुसूषेनत्वावा ॥ अन्यो दिविद्यो न पार्थिवः

(3) pratihâra: न जातो नाजा ।

(4) upadrava: नादद्याता ओवा हा उवा ।

(5) nidhanam: अस् ॥

Third rich: (1) prastâra: नजेवा ।

(2) udgîtha: ओतो न जानिष्यते अद्यायंते मघवर्द्धिर्दवाजिनाः ।

(3) pratihâra: गयंतस्त्वाहा ।

(4) upadrava: वामाहा ओवा हा उवा ।

(5) nidhanam: अस्.—Agnishtoma Sâma prayoga.

From this specimen the reader will easily learn in what way they make of two richas three, and how they divide each into five parts. The prastâra is chanted by the Prastotar, the udgîtha by the Udgatar (the chief of the Sâma singers), the pratihâra by the Pratihartar, the upadrava by the Udgatar, and the nidhanam by all three.

five-fold (is a pentaḡ). Animals are five-fold (consist of five parts, four feet and a mouth).

(Both, the Rik and the Sâman, either of which is divided into five parts, are contained in the Virât, which consists of ten syllables).<sup>40</sup> Thence they say, the sacrifice is put in the Virât, which consists of ten parts.

(The whole Nishkevalya Shastra also consists of five parts, analogous to the five parts of the Sâman and the Rik at this Shastra.) The stotriya is the soul; the anurûpa is offspring, the dhâyyâ is the wife, animals are the pragâtha, the sûktam is the house.<sup>41</sup>

He who has such a knowledge lives in his premises in this world, and in the other, with children and cattle.

24.

(The Stotriya, Anurûpa, Dhâyyâ, Sâma-Pragâtha and Nivid Sûkta of the Nishkevalya Shastra.)

He repeats the Stotriya. He recites it with a half loud voice. By doing so he makes his own soul the Stotriya representing the soul).

He repeats the Anurûpa. The Anurûpa is offspring. It is to be repeated with a very loud voice.

<sup>40</sup> This statement is not very accurate. In other passages it is said, that it consists of thirty-three syllables, see 3, 22. The metre is divided into three padas, each consisting of nine, ten, or eleven syllables.

<sup>41</sup> Here are the five parts of the Nishkevalya Shastra severally enumerated. The stotriya are the two verses of which the Rathantara consists, but so repeated by the Hotar as to make three of them, just as the Sama singers do. The substantive to be supplied to stotriya is pragâtha, i. e. that pragâtha, which contains the same text as the stotram or performance of the Sama singers. The anurûpa pragâtha follows the form of the Stotriya; it consists of two verses which are made three. It must have the same commencing words as the Stotriya. The anurûpa is: abhi tvâ pûrvapitaye (8, 3, 25). The Dhâyyâ is already mentioned (3, 22). The Sâma pragâtha is pûrâ sutasya (8, 3, 12). The sûkta or hymn is mentioned in the following (24) paragraph.

By doing so he makes his children more happy than he himself is (for the Stotriya representing his own self was repeated by him with a half loud voice only).

He repeats the Dhâyyâ. The Dhâyyâ is the wife. It is to be repeated with a very low voice. When he who has such a knowledge repeats the Dhâyyâ with a very low voice, then his wife does not quarrel with him in his house.

He repeats the (Sâma) Pragâtha. It is to be repeated with the proper modulation of the voice (i.e. with the pronunciation of the four accents).<sup>42</sup> The accents are the animals, the Pragâtha are the animals (This is done) for obtaining cattle.

He repeats the Sûkta<sup>43</sup> (hymn): indrasya nurirjita

<sup>43</sup> In this hymn the Nivid of the Nishkevalya Shastra is to be inserted after its eighth verse. The Nivid is as follows:

इन्द्रो देवः सोमं पिबतु । एकजानां वीरतमः । भूरिदानां तव
स्तमः । हयैः स्थाता । शत्रुः प्रेता । वज्रस्य भर्ता । पुरां प्रेता
पुरां दर्मा । अपां खष्टा । अपां नेता । सत्त्वनां नेता । निजघ्निर्य
श्रवाः । उपमानिच्छदसनावान् । इहोऽग्रं देवो बभूवान् । इन्द्रो दे
इह अवदिह सोमस्य पिबतु । प्रेमां देवो देवहृतिमवतु देवा धिया प्रेदं । (the conclusion being the same as in the Marutvatiya Nivid, see page 189) i. e. May the god Indra drink of the Soma juice, he who is the strongest among those who are born only once; he who is the mightiest among those who are rich; he who is the master of the two yellow horses, he the lover of Prishni, he the bearer of the thunder bolt, who cleaves the castles, who destroys the castles, who makes flow the waters, who carries the waters, who carries the spoil from his enemies, who kills, who is far-famed, who appears in different forms (upamâtikrit, lit. making smiles), who is busy, he who has been here a willing god (to listen to our prayers). May the god Indra hear &c. Sapta hânta. Instead of भूरिदानां the Sâukhâyana Sûtra 7, 17, read भूरिजानां. which is less correct and appears to be mistake.

(1, 32). This is the hymn liked by Indra, belonging to the Nishkvalya Shastra, and (seen) by Hiranyastûpa. By means of this hymn Hiranyastûpa, the son of Angiras, obtained the favour of Indra (and) gained the highest world. He who has such a knowledge obtains the favour of Indra (and) gains the highest world. The hymn is the house as a firm footing. Thence it is to be repeated with the greatest slowness. (For a firm footing as a resting place is required for every one.) If, for instance, one happens to have cattle grazing in a distant quarter, he wishes to bring them (in the evening) under shelter. The stables are the firm footing (the place where to put up) for cattle. That is the reason that this hymn, which represents a firm footing, or shelter for cattle, which was represented by the Pragâtha, is to be repeated very slowly, so as to represent a firm footing.

THIRD CHAPTER.

(The abstraction of Soma. Origin of the three libations. Evening libation. The Vaisvadeva and Agnimâruta Shastras.)

25.

(Story of the metres which were despatched by the Gods to fetch the Soma from heaven. Jagatî and Trishubh unsuccessful. Origin of Dikshû, Tupas, and Dakshivâ).

The king Soma lived (once) in the other world (in heaven). The Gods and Rishis deliberated : how might the king Soma (be induced) to come to us ? They said, " Ye metres must bring back to us this king Soma." They consented. They transformed themselves into birds. That they transformed themselves into birds (suparna), and flew up, is called by the knowers of stories sauparṇam (i. e. this story is called so). The metres went to fetch king Soma. They consisted (at that time) of syllables only; for (at that time) there were such metres as consisted of four syllables. Jagatî with her four syllables, flew first up, flying up she became tired, after having completed only half the way. She lost three syllables, being reduced to one syllable, she took (the heaven) with her (only) the Dikshâ and Tapas,<sup>1</sup> flew back (to the earth). He who has cattle possessed of Dikshâ and possessed of Tapas. His cattle belong to Jagatî. Jagatî took them.

Then the Trishtubh flew up. After having completed more than half the way, she became fatigued and throwing off one syllable, became reduced to three syllables, and taking (with her) the Dakṣiṇâ (sacrificial rewards) are carried away (by the priest at the midday libation (which is) the place of Trishtubh; for Trishtubh alone had taken them<sup>2</sup> (the Dakṣiṇâ gifts).

26.

(Gâyatri successful; wounded when robbing the Soma
When became of her nail cut off, &c.)

The gods said to the Gâyatri, "fetch thou the king Soma." She consented, but said, "during the whole of my journey (up to the celestial world) you must repeat the formula for wishing a safe passage to me." The gods consented. She flew up. The gods ated throughout her passage the formula for making a safe passage, viz. pra chá chá, go, and come, and come back. For the words pra chá chá<sup>3</sup> imply, that the whole journey will be made in safety. who has a friend (who sets out on a journey) it to repeat this formula; he then makes his passage in safety, and returns in safety.

The Gâyatrî, when flying up, frightened the guardians of Soma, and seized him with her feet and bill, (along with him) she also seized the syllables of the two other metres (Jagatî and Trishubh) lost. Kris'ānu, (one of) the guardians<sup>4</sup> of the Soma, discharged an arrow after her, which cut off the nail of her left leg. This became a porcupine.

The porcupine having thus sprung from the nail which was cut off the Vas'ā (a kind of goat), sprang from the marrow (vas'a) which dripped from the nail off). Thence this goat is a (suitable) offering. The shaft of the arrow with the point (discharged from Kris'ānu) became a serpent which does not bite (śubha by name). From the vehemence with which the arrow was discharged, the snake śoja was named; from the feathers, the shaking branches which hang down (the airy roots of the Asvattha); the sinews (with which the feathers were bound on the shaft) the worms called gandūpada, the fulmination (of the steel) the serpent andhâhi. Such objects was the arrow (of Kris'ānu) transformed.

This formula is used for wishing to a friend who is setting out on a journey a safe passage and return in safety.

Yana here quotes an Adhvaryu mantra containing the names of the guardians of the Soma, among whom one is Kris'ānu:

गङ्गाधारे बभारे हस्त सुहस्त कृशाने एते वः सोमक्रयणा- रक्षध्वम् मा वो ह्यनः See Vâjasaneyi Samhitâ, 4, 27, with Bharata's commentary on it (p. 117 in Weber's edition).

27.

(Origin of the three libations. They all are of equal strength.)

What Gâyatrî had seized with her right foot, that became the morning libation ; she made it her own place. Thence they think the morning libation to be the most auspicious (of all). He who has such a knowledge becomes the first and most prominent (among his people) and attains to the leadership.

What she had seized with her left foot, became the midday libation. This (portion) slipped down, and after having slipped down, did not attain to the same (strength) as the first libation (made with the right foot). The gods got aware of it, and wished (that this portion should not be lost). They put (therefore) in it, of the metres, the Trishţubh, and of the deities, Indra. Therefore it (the midday libation) became endowed with the same strength as the first libation. He who has such a knowledge prospers through both the libations which are of equal strength, and of the same quality.

What Gâyatrî had seized with her bill, became the evening libation. When flying down, she sucked in the juice of this (portion of Soma, held in her bill), and after its juice had gone, it did not equal (in strength) the two first libations. The gods got aware of that and wished (that the juice of this portion should be kept). They discovered it (the remedy) in cattle. That is the reason that the priests pour sour milk (in the Soma at the evening libation), and bring oblations of melted butter and of flesh (things coming from the cattle). In this way the evening libation obtained equal strength with the two first libations.

He who has such a knowledge prospers through all the libations which are of equal strength and of the same quality.

(How Trishṭubh and Gâyatrî obtained their proper number of syllables.)

The two other metres said to the Gâyatrî, "That which thou hast obtained of us, viz. our syllables, should be restored to us." The Gâyatrî answered, "No." They said "As far as the right of possession is concerned, they (those syllables) are ours." They went to ask the gods. The gods said, "as far as the right of possession is concerned, they are yours." Hence it comes, that even here (in affairs of daily life), people say when they quarrel, "as far as the right of possession is concerned, this is ours."<sup>5</sup>

Hence the Gâyatrî became possessed of eight syllables (for she did not return the four which she had taken from the others), the Trishṭubh had three, and the Jagatî only one syllable.

The Gâyatrî lifted the morning libation up (to the gods); but the Trishṭubh was unable to lift up the midday libation. The Gâyatrî said to her, "I will go up (with the midday libation); let me have a share in it. The Trishṭubh consented, and said, "put upon me (who consists of three syllables), these eight syllables." The Gâyatrî consented and put upon her (eight syllables). That is the reason that at the midday libation the two last verses of the triplet at the beginning of the Manuvatiya Shashtra (the first verse being in the Anushṭubh metre), and its sequel (the anuchara triplet) belong to the Gâyatrî. After having obtained thus eleven syllables, she lifted the midday libation up (to heaven).

The Jagatî which had only one syllable, was unable to lift the third libation (up). The Gâyatrî said to her, "I will also go up (with thee) ; let me have a share in this (libation)." The Jagatî consented (and said), "put upon me those eleven syllables (of the Gâyatrî and Trishṭubh joined). She consented and put (those eleven syllables) upon the Jagatî. That is the reason, that, at the evening libation, the two latter verses of the triplet with which the Vaisvadeva Shâstra commences (pratipad), and its sequel (anuchara) belong to the Gâyatrî. Jagatî, after having obtained twelve syllables, was able to lift the evening libation up (to heaven). Thence it comes that the Gâyatrî obtained eight, the Trishṭubh eleven, and the Jagatî twelve syllables.

He who has such a knowledge, prospers through all metres which are of equal strength and of the same quality. What was one, that became three-fold <sup>6</sup> Thence they say, only he who has this knowledge, that what was one, became three-fold, should receive presents.

29.

(Why the Adityas and Savitar have a share in the evening libation. On Vâyu's and Dyâvâgrîtha's share in it.)

The gods said to the Adityas, "let us lift up the (the evening) libation through you." They consented. Thence the evening libation commences with the Adityas. <sup>7</sup> At the commencement of it there is the libation from) the Aditya graha. Its Yājyā mantra is, adityāso aditir madayantām (7, 51, 2), which contains the term mad "to be drunk" which is complete in form (equal to the occasion). For the characteristic feature of the evening libation is, "to be drunk." He does not repeat the Anuvashatkāra,<sup>9</sup> nor does he taste the Souri (as is usual, after the libation has been poured into the fire); for the Anuvashatkāra is the completion, and the tasting (of the offering by the priests) is also the completion (of the ceremony). The Adityas are the vital airs. (When the Hotar, therefore, does not repeat the Anuvashatkāra, nor taste the Aditya libation, he thinks), I will certainly put no end to the life (of the sacrificer).

<sup>6</sup> This remark refers to the fact that the Gâyatrî, which consists originally only of eight syllables, consists of three times eight, or twenty-four.

<sup>7</sup> The very commencement of the evening libation is the pouring of Soma juice from the so-called Aditya graha (a wooden jar). This is followed by the chanting of the Arbhavam ; then the offering of a libation to the animal, and that of Purodâśa to the manes, after which a libation is poured from the Savitri graha, and the Vaisvadeva Shâstra is repeated. (Asv. S'r. 8. 5, 17.)

The Adityas said to Savitar, "let us lift up this (the evening) libation through thee." He consented. Thence the beginning (pratipad of the Vaisvadeva Shastra at the evening libation) is made with a triplet of verses addressed to Savitar.<sup>10</sup> To the Vaisvadeva Shastra belongs the Savitri graha. Before<sup>11</sup> the commencement (of this Shastra) he repeats the Yājyā (in the libation (from the Savitri graha), damānā derāh sevita varenyam (As'v. S'r. S. 5, 18). This verse<sup>12</sup>

The negation is here expressed by net, i. e. na it, the same which is almost exclusively used in the Zend-Avesta, in the form na for expressing the simple negative.

<sup>12</sup> It is also, with some deviations, found in the Atharvaveda Samhitā. (7, 14, 4) According to the As'v. Sūtras it runs as follows :

दशता देवः सविता वरेण्यो दधद्रता दक्षपिबभ्या आयुनि ।
पिबाक्षोमं ममदन्नेनमिष्टयः परिज्मा चिद्रमते अस्य धर्मणि ॥
The deviations of the text in the Atharvaveda consist in the following :
instead of रताः रत्नः; for दक्षपि०: दक्षपी०; for ममदन्नेनमिष्टयः contains the term mad "to be drunk" which is complete in form. The term mad "to be drunk" is a characteristic of the evening libation. He does not repeat the Anuvashaṭkāra, nor does he taste (from the Soma juice in the Śavitrigrāha). For the Anuvashaṭkāra is conjunction, the tasting (of the Soma by the priest) is completion. Savitar is the life. (He should do neither, thinking) I will certainly put an end to the life (of the sacrificer). Savitar drinks largely from both the morning and evening libations. For there is the term piba "drink," at the commencement<sup>13</sup> of the Nivid addressed to Savitar at the

it has समद्देनसिष्टे; instead of रमते it has क्रमते. It is evident, that the readings of the Atharvaveda are corrupt; for it will be impossible to make out the sense of the mantra from its text presented in the Atharvaveda: but it may be done from that given in the Asvalayana Sūtras. I translate as follows: "The divine house-father Savitar, who is chosen (as tutelary deity by men), has provided people (āya) with precious gifts to make offerings to Dakṣha (one of the Adityas) and the manes. May he drink the Soma! May the (Soma) offerings inebriate him, when, on his wanderings, he pleases to delight in his (the Soma's) quality!"

<sup>13</sup> In the words, śavitā devaḥ somasya pibatu. The hymn, in which the Nivid for Savitar is inserted, is, abhiād devaḥ savitā (4. 54). The whole Nivid is as follows:

सविता देवः सोमस्य पिबतु । हिरण्यपाणिः सुजिह्वः । सुवाङ्मः
स्वंगुरिः । विरहन्त्यस्य सवनः । यः प्रासुवद्वसुधितो । उभे जेष्टौ
सवीमनि । श्रेष्ठं सावित्रमासुवं । दोगर्ध्रौ धेनुं । वोळहारमनडवाहं ।
आशुं सन्नि । पुरंधि योषां । जिष्णुं रथेष्टां । समेयं युतानं । परामीवां
साविपत्यरायशंसं । सविता देव इह अवदिह सोमस्य मत्सत् । प्रेमां
देवो० (The conclusion is just as in the other Nivid). Savitā
Hāntra. In the Śaṅkhāy. Śr. Sūtras (8, 18), there are better परामी० the word-. सविता देवः I translate it as follows: May the god Savitar drink of the Soma juice, he with his golden hands and his good tongue, with his fine arms and fine fingers, he who produces thrice a day the real objects (i. e. the external world is visible in the morning, at noon, and in the evening), he who produced the two treasures of wealth, the two loving sisters (night and dawn), the best things that are created, the milking cow, the ox drawing carts, the swift septad (of horses for drawing the car-evening libation), and at the end<sup>14</sup> the term mad "to be drunk." Thus he makes Savitar share in both the morning and evening libations.

At the morning and evening libations verses addressed to Vāyu are repeated, many at the morning, one only<sup>15</sup> at the evening libation. That is done because the vital airs (represented by Vāyu, the wind) in the upper parts (represented by the morning libation) of the human body are more numerous than those in the lower parts (represented by the evening libation).

He repeats a hymn addressed to Heaven and Earth.<sup>16</sup> For Heaven and Earth are stand-points.

naga of the sun-god), the female (called) purandhi, i. e. meditation, the victorious warrior, the youth in the assemblage (of men), &c.

<sup>15</sup> This remark refers to the last words which are appended to the Nivid hymn for Savitar, viz., niḡudbhur vāyavika. The whole appendage, which is to be found in the Aśv. Śr. S. 5, 18, and in Saṁta Hānta is:

एकयाच दशभिय स्वभूते । द्वाभ्यामिष्टये विंशत्याचोऽ
तिष्टभिय वहसे त्रिंशताच । निष्टुद्रि वायविह ता सुचोऽ ॥ i. e.
Vayu, come hither with (thy) steeds, unloosen them, (come) with seven for thy own sake, with twenty-two for (making) the sacrifice on with thirty-three for carrying (the sacrifice).

<sup>16</sup> This is pradyāvā yajñāh (1, 159). The Nivid to be inserted before the last verse of the Dyāvapṛthivī hymn is:

यावापृथिवी सोमस्य मत्सतां । पिताच माताच पुत्रश्च प्रजननं च ।
धेनुश्च ऋषभश्च । धन्याच धिषणाच । सुरेताश्च सुदुघाच । ग्रंभश्च म-

रह भुतामिह सोमस्य मत्सतां । प्रेमां देवी देवहृतिमवतां देव्या
धिषा । प्रेदं ब्रह्म प्रेदं क्षत्रं । प्रेदं सुन्वन्तं यजमानमवतां । चित्रे चि- वामिहृतिभिः । भुतां ब्रह्मण्यावसागतां ॥ May Heaven and Earth enjoy the Soma which are the father and mother, the son and generation, the cow and the bull, the grain and the wood, the well-provided with seed, and the well-provided with milk, the happy and the beneficial, the juicy and milky, the giver of seed, and (holder) of seed. May both Heaven and Earth here hear (me)! May they here enjoy the Soma, &c.

Earth is the stand-point here, and Heaven is the stand-point there (in the other world). By thus repeating a hymn addressed to Heaven and Earth, the Hotar establishes the sacrificer in both places (in earth and heaven).

(Story of the Ribhus. On their share in the evening libation.)

He repeats the Ribhu hymn (takshan ratham, 1, 111).<sup>17</sup> The (beings called) Ribhus among the gods, had, by means of austerities, obtained the right to a share in the Soma beverage. They (the gods) wished to make room for them in the recitations at the morning libation; but Agni with the Vasus, (to whom this libation belongs), turned them out of the morning libation. They (the gods) then wished to make room for them in the recitations at the midday libation; but Indra with the Rudras, (to whom this libation belongs), turned them out of this libation. They then wished to make room for them in the citations at the evening libation; but the Vis've devâh (to whom it belongs) tried to turn them out of it, saying, "they shall not drink here, they shall drink elsewhere." Prajâpati then said to Savitar, "these are thy cups; thou alone (among the Vis've Devâh), therefore, shalt drink with them." He consented, and said to Prajâpati, "drink thou also, standing on both sides of the Ribhus." Prajâpati drank standing on both sides of them. (That is the reason that) these two Dhâyyâs (required for the Vais'vadeva Shastra) which do not contain the name of any particular deity, and belong to Prajâpati, are repeated, one before the other, after the Ribhu hymn. (They are) sarâpakritnum utaye (1, 4, 1) and ayam venas' chodayat (10, 123, 1).<sup>18</sup> Prajâpati thus drinks on both sides. Thus it comes that a chief (s'reshthî) mixes with a draught from his goblet whom he likes.

The gods, however, abhorred them (the Ribhus) on account of their human<sup>19</sup> smell. (Therefore) they added two (other) Dhâyyâs between the Ribhus and themselves. (These are) yebhyo mâtâ madhumat (10, 3, 9), and evâ pitre vis'va devâya (4, 50, 6).<sup>20</sup>

<sup>18</sup> This whole story is invented for explaining the position assigned to these verses and hymns in the Vais'vadeva Shastra. After the hymn addressed to Savitar, abhûd devaḥ savitâ (4, 54), there follows the verse sarâpakritnum, which is called a Dhâyyâ; then the hymn addressed to the Ribhus, takshan ratham, and then the verse ayam venas', which is also a Dhâyyâ. See As'v. S'r. 5, 8.

<sup>19</sup> They are said to have been men, and raised themselves to an equal rank with the gods by means of sacrifices and austerities.

<sup>20</sup> These two verses immediately follow: ayam venas' chodayat. S'r. 8, 5, 10.

The text as given in the Sāukhāy. Sr. S. 8, 21, differs in some passages. Instead of तकात्र० it has पकात्र० which is, no doubt, more correct. The words तावन्त उदरणे तावन्तो निवेशने are transposed; they follow after तावन्तीर्ग्राः after which तावन्तो

मिष० and ताव० रा० are put. Instead of अपिशस० there is अपिशसामाविशसा पुरा वक्षि. The translation of some terms in this Nirid, which is doubtless very old, is extremely difficult. And then the reading does not appear to be correct. It is, however, highly interesting, as perhaps one of the most ancient accounts we have of the number of Hindu deities. They are here stated at 311; then at 33, then at 303, then at 3003. It appears from the statement, that only the number 3 remained unchanged, whilst the number 30 was multiplied by 10 or 100. Similarly the number of gods is stated at 3239 in a hymn ascribed to the Rishi Vis'vāmitra Rigveda. 9, 9. This statement appears to rely on the Vais'vadeva Nirid. If we add 33+303+3003 together, we obtain exactly the number 3339. This coincidence can hardly be fortuitous, and we have strong reasons to believe, that Vis'vāmitra perfectly knew the Vis've Devāḥ Nirid. That it contains one of the most authoritative of a kingdom), so do also the hymns (represent the interior, the kernel, of the Shastra). The Dhâyyâs, then, are like what is in the desert (beasts, &c.) That is the reason that the Hotar must repeat before and after every Dhâyyâ the call s'ômśâvom (for every Dhâyyâ is considered as a separate recitation distinct from the body of the Shastra). (Some one might object) how can verses, like the Dhâyyâs, which are like the kernel, be compared to a desert? Regarding this he (the great Rishi) has told, that the deserts (aranyâni) are properly speaking no deserts on account of the trees and birds to be found there.

The Vaisvadeva Shastra is to be likened to man. Its hymns are like his internal parts; its Dhâyyâs are like the links (of his body). That is the reason that the Hotar calls s'ômśâvom before and after every Dhâyyâ (to represent motion and flexibility). For the links of the human body are loose; these are, however, fastened and held together by the Brahma. The Dhâyyâ<sup>22</sup> and Yâjyâ verses are the root of the sages for fixing the number of Hindu deities follows from quotations in other Vedic books. So we read in the Brihad Aranyaka (published (page 642-49, edited by Roer, Calcutta 1849) a discussion by Yagnavalkya on the number of gods, where he appeals to the aid of the Vaisvadeva hymn as the most authoritative passage settling this question. Perhaps the oldest authority we have for fixing the number of the Hindu deities, on the first instance, at thirty-three, is Rigveda, 8, 28, 1. The hymn to which this verse belongs said to have descended from Manu, the progenitor of the human race. Its style shows traces of high antiquity, and there can be only any doubt, that it is one of the earliest Vedic hymns we have. The division of these thirty-three deities into three sets, each of ten, equally distributed among the three worlds, heaven, air, and earth, (see 1, 139, 11) appears to be the result of later speculations. According to the Nivid in question, the gods are not distributed among the three worlds, but they are in heaven, and earth, water, sky, in the Brahma and Kshatra, in the Barhis, and on the earth, in the sacrifice, and in the air.

sacrifice. When they use Dhâyyâs and Yâjyâs different from those which are prescribed, then they uproot the sacrifice. Therefore they (the Dhâyyâs and Yâjyâs) should be only of the same nature (they should not use other ones than those mentioned).

The Vais'vadeva Shastra belongs to five classes of beings. It belongs to all five classes of beings, viz. Gods and Men, Gandharvas (and) Apsaras,<sup>23</sup> Serpents and Manes. To all these five classes of beings belongs the Vais'vadeva Shastra. All beings of these five classes know him (the Hotar who repeats the Vais'vadeva Shastra). To that Hotar who has such a knowledge come those individuals of these five classes of beings who understand the art of recitation (to assist him). The Hotar who repeats the Vais'vadeva Shastra belongs to all deities. When he is about to repeat his Shastra, he ought to think of all directions (draw them before his mind), by which means he provides all these directions with liquid (rasa). But he ought not to think of that direction in which his enemy lives. By doing so he consequently deprives him of his strength.

He concludes (the Vais'vadeva Shastra) with the verse aditir dyâur aditir antariksham (1, 89, 10). i. e. Aditi is heaven, Aditi is the air, Aditi is mother, father and son; Aditi is all gods; Aditi is the two classes of creatures; Aditi is what is born; Aditi is what is to be born." She (Aditi) is mother, she is father, she is son. In her are the Vais'vadevas, in her the five classes of creatures. She is what is born, she is what is to be born.

(When reciting this concluding verse which is to be repeated thrice), he recites it twice (for the second and third times) so as to stop at each (of the four) padas. (He does so) for obtaining cattle, which are four-footed. Once (the first time) he repeats the concluding verse, stopping at the end of each half of the verse only. (That is done) for establishing a firm footing. Man has two feet but animals have four. (By repeating the concluding verse twice in the said manner) the Hotar places the two-legged sacrificer among the four-legged animals.

He ought always to conclude (the Vais'adeva hastat) with a verse addressed to the five classes of beings (as is the case in aditir dyâur); and, when concluding, touch the earth. Thus he finally establishes the sacrifice in the same place in which he begins the means of his performance.

After having repeated the Vais'adeva Shashtra, he recites the Yâgyâ verse addressed to the Vis'vedevâs: visve devâh s'rñuta imam havam me (6, 52, 1). Thus he pleases the deities according to their tastes (in the libation).

32.

The offerings of Ghee to Agni and Vishnu, and the offering of a Charu to Soma.)

The first Yâgyâ verse for the offering of hot butter addressed to Agni, that for the offering of Charu addressed to Soma, and another for the offering of hot butter is addressed to Vishnu.<sup>21</sup>

<sup>21</sup> After the Soma juice has been offered to the Vis'vedevâs, an offering of hot butter (ghee) is given to Agni; then follows the oblation of Charu or boiled rice, to Soma, and then another oblation of butter to Vishnu. The chief oblation is that of Charu to Soma, which is put in the midst of the two offerings of hot butter. The Yâgyâ verses addressed at this occasion to Agni and Vishnu are not to be found in the Samhitâ of the Rigveda; but they are given by val. in the S'râuta Sûtras. (5, 19). The following is addressed

Agn. घृताहवने घृतष्टे अग्निं घृतेयितो घृतस्वस्थाम । घृत-पक्वां हरितो वहन्तु घृतं पिबन् यजसि देव देवान् ॥ i. e. Agni is it to receives oblations of hot butter, who has (as it were) a back laden

The Yājñá verse for the offering of Charu to Soma is trāñ soma pitribhiḥ (8, 48, 13); it contains the word "pitaras," i. e. manes. (This Charu is an oblation to the dead Soma). The priests kill the Soma, when they extract its juice. This (oblation of Charu) is therefore the cow which they use to kill (when the body of a sacrificer is laid on the funeral pile.<sup>25</sup>) For this Charu oblation has, for the Soma, the same significance as the cow sacrificed at the funeral pile for the manes. This is the reason that the Hotar repeats (at this occasion) a Yājñá verse, containing the term "pitaras," i. e. manes. Those who have extracted the Soma juice, have killed the Soma. (By making this oblation) they produce him anew.

They make him fat<sup>26</sup> in the form of a siege (by putting him between Agni and Vishnu); for (the order with hot butter, by whom hot butter abides, whose very house is hot butter. May thy butter drops, sputtering horses, carry thee! Thou, O God! offerest up the sacrifice to the gods, by drinking the hot butter.

The Yājñá verse addressed to Vishnu is: उर विष्णो विव्रमदोहं क्षयाय नः कृधि । घृतं घृतयोने पिव प्र यज्ञपतिं तिर i. e. take, O Vishnu! thy wide strides; make us room for living in thee. Drink the hot butter, O thou, who art the womb of hot butter, prolong (the life of) the master of the sacrifice (the sacrificer).

<sup>25</sup> The term is anustarani (gaub) i. e. a cow put down after, i. e. accompanying the dead to the other world. See As'v. Gṛhya Sūtra 4, 3.

<sup>26</sup> The term is āpyayanti. This is generally done by sprinkling water over him before the juice is squeezed, for the purpose of making the Soma (mystically) grow. When he is already squeezed and even sacrificed, water itself cannot be sprinkled over him. But this is mystically done, by addressing the verses just mentioned to the deities Agni, Soma, and Vishnu, so as to put Soma in the midst of them just as a town invested on all sides. When they perform the ceremony of āpyayanam, the Soma plant is on all sides to be sprinkled with water. This is done here symbolically by offering first ghee, and giving ghee again after the Charu for Soma is sacrificed. So he is surrounded everywhere by ghee, and the two gods, Agni and Vishnu.

of) the deities Agni, Soma, and Vishṇu, has the form of a siege.

After having received (from the Adhvaryu) the Charu for Soma for being eaten by him, the Hotar should first look at himself and then (offer it) to the Sâma singers. Some Hotri-priests offer first this Charu (after the oblation to the gods is over) to the Sâma singers. But he ought not to do that, for he (the Hotar) who pronounces the (powerful) call vaushat eats all the remains of the food (offered to the gods). So it has been said by him (the Aitareya Rishi). Therefore the Hotar who pronounces the (powerful) formula vaushat should, when acting upon that injunction (to offer first the Charu remains to the Sâma singers), certainly first look upon himself. Afterwards the Hotars offer it to the Sâma singers.<sup>27</sup>

33.

(Prajâpati's illegal intercourse with his daughter, and the consequences of it. The origin of Bhûtavân.)

Prajâpati thought of cohabiting with his own daughter, whom some call "Heaven," others "Dawn," (Ushâs). He transformed himself into a buck of a kind of deer (ris'ya), whilst his daughter assumed the shape of a female deer (rohit).<sup>28</sup> He approached her.

The remark about the âpyayanam is made in the Brâhmanam for the sole purpose of accounting for the fact, that the first Yâgyâ is addressed to Agni, the second to Soma, and the third to Vishṇu; that this was a sacrificial rule, see As'v. S'r. S. 5, 19.

<sup>27</sup> The mantras which the Hotar has to repeat at this occasion, are given in full by As'valâyana S'r. S. 5, 19. After having repeated them, he besmears his eyes with melted butter, and gives the Charu over which butter is dripped, to the Sâma singers, who are called here and in As'valâyana Chândogas.

<sup>28</sup> Sâyana gives another explanation. He takes rohitam, not as the name of a female deer, but as an adjective, meaning red. But then we had to expect rohitâm. The crude form is rohit, not rohita. He explains the supposed rohita as ritumati.

The gods saw it (crying) "Prajâpati commits an <sup>29</sup> never done (before)." (In order to avert the evil consequences of this incestuous act) the gods inquired for some one who might destroy the evil consequences (of it). Among themselves they did not find any one who might do that (atone for Prajâpati's crime). They then put the most fearful bodies (for the gods have many bodies) of theirs in one. This aggregate of the most fearful bodies of the gods became a god Bhûtavân<sup>29</sup> by name. For he who knows this name only, is born.<sup>30</sup> The gods said to him, "Prajâpati has committed an act which he ought not to have committed. Pierce this<sup>31</sup> (the incarnation of his evil deed)." So he did. He then said, "I will choose a boon from you." They said, "Choose." He then chose as his boon sovereignty over cattle.<sup>32</sup> That is the reason that his name is paśumân, i. e. having cattle. He who knows on this earth only this name (paśumân), becomes rich in cattle.

He (Bhûtavân) attacked him (the incarnation of Prajâpati's evil deed) and pierced him (with an arrow). After having pierced him he sprang up (and became a constellation). They call him mrîga, i. e. deer (stars in the Orion), and him who killed that being<sup>33</sup> (which

<sup>32</sup> This appears to confirm Sâyana's opinion that Rudra or Siva is here alluded to. For he is called paśupati, master of cattle.

<sup>33</sup> Sây. refers the demonstrative pronouns tam imam, by which alone the incarnation of Prajâpati's evil deed is here indicated to Prajâpati himself, who had assumed the shape of a buck. But the idea that Prajâpati was killed (even in the shape of a buck) is utterly inconsistent with the Vedic notions about him; for in the spring from Prajâpati's misdeeds), mṛiga vyâdha, i. e. hunter of the deer (name of star). The female deer Rohit (into which Prajâpati's daughter had been transformed) became (the constellation) Rohinî. The arrow (by which the phantom of Prajâpati's sin was pierced) which had three parts (shaft, steel, and point) became such an arrow (in the sky). The sperm which had been poured forth from Prajâpati, flew down on the earth and became a lake. The gods said, "May this sperm of Prajâpati not be spoilt (mâdushat)." This became the madusham. This name madusha is the same as mânusha, i. e. man. For the word mânusha, i. e. man, means "one who should not be spoiled" (mâdushan). This (madusha) is a (commonly) unknown word. For the gods like to express themselves in such terms unknown (to men.)

34.

(How different creatures originated from Prajâpati's sperm. On the verse addressed to Rudra. Proptiation of Rudra.)

The gods surrounded this sperm with Agni (in order to make it flow); the Marutas agitated it; but Agni did not make it (the pool formed of Prajâpati's sperm) move. They (then) surrounded it with Agni Vaisvânara; the Marutas agitated it; Agni Vaisvânara (then) made it move. That spark which first blazed up from Prajâpati's sperm became that Aditya (the in the parts of the Vedas he appears as the Supreme Being, to whom the name is to be supplied was pâpman. But the author of the Brâhmanam abhorred the idea of a pâpman or incarnation of sin of Prajâpati, the Lord of the Universe, the Creator. Hence he was only hinted at by this demonstrative pronoun. The meaning of the word pâpman in connection with Prajâpati, was, I thought, regarded by the author, as very inauspicious. Even the heinous act committed by Prajâpati, he does not call pâpa sin, a doshâ fault, but only akritam, "what ought not to be done," which is the very mildest term by which a crime can be mentioned.

sun); the second which blazed up became Bhriṅg, Varuṇa him adopted as his son. Thence Bhriṅg is called Varuṇa, i. e. descendant of Varuṇa. The third which blazed up (adidedirata)<sup>34</sup> became the Adityas (a class of gods). Those parts (of Prajâpati's seed after it was heated) which were coals (aṅgâra) became the Aṅgiras. Those coals whose fire was not extinguished, and which blazed up again, became Bṛihaspati. Those parts which remained as coal dust (pariśhâtûâni) became black animals, and the earth burnt red (by the fire) became red animals. The ashes which remained became a being full of links, which went in all directions (and sent forth) a stag, buffalo, antelope, camel, ass, and wild beasts.

This god (the Bhûtavân), addressed them (these animals), "This is mine; mine is what was left on the place." They made him resign his share by the verse, which is addressed to Rudra: â te pitâ maruta (2, 33, 1), i. e. "may it please thee, father of the Marutas, not to cut us off from beholding the sun (i. e. from living); may'st thou, powerful hero (Rudra) spare our cattle and children, that we, O master of the Rudras! might be propagated by our progeny."

The Hotar ought to repeat (in the third pada of the verse) tvam no vîro and not abhi no vîro (as is the reading of another Sâkhâ). For if he do not repeat the words abhi na, i. e. towards us, then this god (Rudra) does not entertain any designs against (abhi) our children and cattle (i. e. he does not kill them). In the fourth half verse he ought to use the word rudriya instead of rudra, for diminishing the terror (and danger) arising from (the pronunciation of) the real name Rudra.<sup>35</sup>

<sup>35</sup> In the Rigveda Sâmhita which is extant at present, the mantra has in the third pada the word abhi no, and not tvam no, and in the

(But should this verse appear to be too dangerous) the Hotar may omit it and repeat (instead of it) only s'am nah karati, (1, 43, 6), i. e. "may he be propitiated (and) let our horses, rams and ewes, our males and females, and cows go on well." (By repeating this verse) he commences with the word s'am, i. e. propitiated, which serves for general propitiation. Narah (in the verse mentioned) means males, and naryah females.

(That the latter verse and not the first one should be repeated, may be shown from another reason.) The deity is not mentioned with its name, though it is addressed to Rudra, and contains the propitiatory term s'am. (This verse helps) to obtain the full term of life (100 years). He who has such a knowledge obtains the full term of his life. This verse (s'am nah kar ti) is in the Gâyatrî metre. Gâyatrî is Brahma. By repeating that verse the Hotar worships him (Rudra) by means of Brahma (and averts consequently all evil consequences which arise from using a verse referring to Rudra).

35.

(The Vais'vânara and Mâruta Nivid hymns, and the Stotriya and Anurûpa of the Agnimâruta Shastra.)

fourth pada, rudra, and not rudriya. The readings of the verse as they are in our copies of the Saṁhitâ, seem to have been current already at the time of the author of the Atareya Brâhmaṇam. But he objects to using the verse so, as it was handed down, for sacrificial purposes, on account of the danger which might arise from the use of such terms as abhi, i. e. (turned) towards, and rudra, the proper name of the fearful god of destruction. He proposes two things, either to change these dangerous terms, or to leave out the verse altogether, and use another one instead of it.

Vais'vânara is the seed which was poured forth. Thence the Hotar commences the Agni-mâruta Shastra with a hymn addressed to Vais'vânara. The first verse is to be repeated without stopping. He who repeats the Agni-mâruta Shastra extinguishes the fearful flames of the fires. By (suppressing) his breath (when repeating the first verse) he crosses the fires. Lest he might (possibly) forego some sound (of the mantra) when repeating it, it is desirable that he should appoint some one to correct such a mistake (which might arise). By thus making him (the other man) the bridge, he crosses (the fires, even if he should commit some mistake in repeating). Because of no mistake in repeating being allowed in this, there ought to be some one appointed to correct the mistakes, when the Hotar repeats it.

The Marutas are the sperm which was poured forth. By shaking it they made it flow. Thence he repeats a hymn addressed to the Marutas.<sup>37</sup>

अग्निर्वैश्वानरः सोमस्य मत्सन् । विश्वेषां देवानां समित् । अजं

"May Agni Vais'vânara enjoy the Soma, he who is the fuel for all gods (for he as the vital spirit keeps them up), he who is the unperishable divine light, who lighted to the quarters of men, who (as) shining in former skies (days), who is never decaying in the course of the auroras (during all days to come), who illuminates the sky, the earth, and the wide airy region. May he, through his light, give (us) shelter ! May Agni Vais'vânara here hear (us), &c."

दयसः । सूर्या अनाघृष्टरथीः । त्वेषासः पृथ्निमातरः । शुधाति

In the midst (of the Shastra, after having repeated the two hymns mentioned) he repeats the Stotriya<sup>38</sup> and Anurûpa Pragâthas, yajñâ yajñâ vo agnaye (1, 168, 1-2), and devo vo dravinodâ (7, 16, 11-12). The reason that he repeats the "womb" (the Stotriya) in the midst (of the Shastra), is because women have their wombs in the middle (of their bodies). By repeating it, after having already recited two hymns (the Vais vâvara and Agni-mâruta), he puts the organ of generation between the two legs in their upper part or producing offspring. He who has such a knowledge will be blessed with offspring and cattle.

May the divine Marutas (in my invocation). May they enjoy the Soma, &c."

<sup>38</sup> The Stotriya is here mentioned by the term of yoni womb. It is called so on account of its containing the very words of the Sâman whose praise the whole Shastra is recited, and forming thus the core of the whole recitation. walked having their faces turned aside, and did not turn (their backs). He (Prajâpati) then encircled them with fire, whereupon they turned to Agni. After they had turned to Agni, Prajâpati said, "The creatures which are born (jâta), I obtained (avidam) through this one (Agni)." From these words came forth the Jâtavedâs hymn. That is the reason that Agni is called Jâtavedâs.<sup>40</sup>

The creatures being encircled by fire were hemmed in walking. They stood in flames and blazing. Prajâpati sprinkled them with water. That is the reason that the Hotar, after having recited the Jâtavedâs hymn, repeats a hymn addressed to the waters: yo ha śhîtha mayobhuvah (10, 9). Thence it is to be recited by him as if he were extinguishing fire (i. e. slowly).

Prajâpati after having sprinkled the creatures with water, thought, that they (the creatures) were his own. He provided them with an invisible lustre through Ahir budhnya. This Ahir budhnya (lit. the serpent of the depth) is the Agni Gârhapatya (the household fire). By repeating therefore a verse addressed to Ahir budhnya,<sup>41</sup> the Hotar puts the invisible lustre in the "May Agni Jâtavedâs enjoy the Soma! he who has a beautiful appearance, whose splendour is apparent to all, he, the house-father who does not flicker (when burning, i. e. whose fire is great and strong), he who is visible amidst the darkness, he who receives the offerings of melted butter, who is to be praised, who performs the sacrifice without being disturbed by many hindrances, who is unconquered and conquers his enemies in the battle. O Agni Jâtavedâs, extend (thy) splendour and strength round us, with force and pluck (prâk and aptus'ah are adverbs); protect him who lights (thee), and praises (thee) from distress! May Agni Jâtavedâs here hear (thee), may he enjoy the Soma."

<sup>40</sup> The etymology of the word as here given is fanciful. The proper meaning of the word is, "having possession of all that is below, i. e. pervading it. With the idea of the fire being an all-pervading power, the Rishis are quite familiar. By Jâtavedâs the "animal fire" is particularly to be understood.

who brings oblations is more shining than one who does not bring them."<sup>42</sup>

37.

(The offerings to the wives of the gods and to Yama and the Kâryas, a class of manes.)

After having addressed (in the Ahir budhnya verse) Agni, the house-father, he recites the verses addressed to the wives of the gods.<sup>43</sup> For the wife of the sacrificer sits behind the Gârhapatya fire.

They say: he should first address Râkâ<sup>44</sup> with a verse, for the honour of drinking first from the Soma belongs (among the divine women) to the sister (of the gods). But this precept should not be cared for. He should first address the wives of the gods. By doing so, Agni, the house-father, provides the wives with seed. By means of the Gârhapatya, Agni the lotar, thus actually provides the wives with seed for procreation. He who has such a knowledge will be blessed with offspring (and) cattle. (That the wives have precedence to a sister is apparent in worldly things.) For a sister who has come from the same womb is provided with food, &c. after the wife who has come from another womb has been cared for.

He repeats the Râkâ verse.<sup>45</sup> She sews that seam (in the womb) which is on the penis, so as to form man. He who has such a knowledge obtains male children.

He repeats the Pâvîrâvî verse.<sup>46</sup> Speech is Sarasvatî pâvîrâvî. By repeating this verse he provides the sacrificer with speech.

They ask, Should he first repeat the verse addressed to Yama, or that one which is devoted to the Manes? <sup>47</sup> He should first repeat the verse addressed to Yama: imam yama prastava (10, 14, 4). For a king (Yama being a ruler) has the honour of drinking first.

Immediately after it he repeats the verse for the Kâvyas: mâtali kavîr yamo (10, 14, 3). The Kavyas are beings inferior to the gods, and superior to the manes. Thence he repeats the verses for the manes, udiratâm avara utparâsah (10, 15, 1-3), after that one addressed to the Kâvyas. By the words (of the first verse) "May the Soma-loving manes who are of low as well as those who are of a middling and superior character, rise," he pleases them all, the lowest as well the middling and highest ones, without foregoing any one. In the second verse, the term barhishado, "sitting on the sacred grass," implies, that they have a beloved house. By repeating it, he makes them prosper through their beloved house. He who has such a knowledge prospers through his beloved house. The verse (out of three) which contains the term "adoration," "this adoration be to the manes," he repeats at the end (though it be second in order). That is the reason, that at the end (of funeral ceremonies), the manes are adored (by the words "adoration to you, O manes!")

They ask, Should he, when repeating the verses to the manes, use at each verse the call s'omsâcam, or ould he repeat them without that call? He should repeat it. What ceremony is not finished in the Pitri yajna (offering to the manes), that is to be completed. The Hotar who repeats the call somsátram at each rite, completes the incomplete sacrifice. Thence the call somsátram ought to be repeated.

38.

in Indra's share in the evening libation. On the verses addressed to Vishnu and Varuna, to Vishnu alone, and to Prajapati. The concluding verse and the Yajya of the Agnimârutâ Shastra.)

The Hotar repeats the anu-pāñīya verses addressed to Indra and his drinking of the Soma juice after (the other deities have been satisfied), svādush kilāyam adhaman (6, 47, 1-4). By their means Indra drank the Soma after the third libation (anupibat). Hence the verses are called anu-pāñīyâ "referring to drinking after." The deities are drunk, as it were, thus (third libation) when the Hotar repeats those verses. Thence has the Adhvaryu, when they are repeated, to respond to the Hotar (when calling somsátram) with a word derived from the root mud "to be drunk."<sup>49</sup>

He repeats a verse referring to Vishnu and Varuna, yor opasâ.<sup>50</sup> Vishnu protects the defects in the <sup>49</sup> This refers to the two phrases, madāmo deva, "we are drunk, O God!" and madāmo darom, "we rejoice, O divine! Om!" which are the responses of the Adhvaryu to the Hotar's call somsátram. The first of the four Anu-pāñīya verses above mentioned. See A'sv. S. 5, 20. The usual response of the Adhvaryu to the Hotar's call somsátram is somsāmo darom, see A'sv. S. 5, 9.

<sup>50</sup> It is not found in the Saṁhitâ of the Rîgveda, but in the A'sv. S. 5, 20, and in the Atharvaveda S. 7, 25, 1. Both texts differ slightly. Asvalâyana reads:

द्वारो जसा स्तुभिता रजांसि वीर्येभिर्वीरितसा मविष्ठया पत्येते नेता सद्येभिर्विष्णु अगन्वचना पूर्वङ्गते. i. e. "The two sacrifices (from producing any evil consequences), and Varuṇa protects the fruits arising from its successful performance. (This verse is repeated) to propitiate both of them.

He repeats a verse addressed to Viṣṇu : viṣṇu nu hañ vīryāṇi (1, 154, 1). Viṣṇu is in the sacrifice the same as deliberation in (worldly things). Ja- (as an agriculturist) is going to make good the mistake in ploughing, (and a king) in making good a bad judgment by devising a good one, so the Hotar is going to make well recited what was badly recited, and well chanted what was badly chanted, by repeating this verse addressed to Viṣṇu.

He repeats a verse addressed to Prajāpati, tanu tanvan rajaso (10, 53, 6). Tāntu, i. e. thread means offspring. By repeating this verse the Hotar spreads (santanoti) for him (the sacrificer) offspring. By the words of this verse, jyotiṣmataḥ path raksha dhī.ā kṛitām, i. e. "protect the paths which are provided with lights, and made by absorption and meditation" wherein the term "the paths provide with lights" means the roads of the gods (to heaven) the Hotar paves these roads (for the sacrificer to go on them on his way to heaven).

By the words anulbanam rayata, i. e. "weave" the work of the chanters and repeaters<sup>51</sup> so as to r through whose power the atmosphere was framed, the two are the strongest in power and most vigorous, who rule uncomparable through their strength; may these two, Viṣṇu and Varuṇa come on being called first." There is a grammatical difficulty in this translation : agan, which can be only explained as a 3rd person plural of the aorist in the conjunctive, is here joined to nouns in the dual. The Atharvaveda shows the same form. Here is an evident incorrectness which perhaps was the reason for its being excluded from the Sāmhitā.

कर्मसु गच्छन्ति प्रवर्त्तन्त इति अनुष्ठानशीला जागृ शब्देनैव

it from all defects; become a Manu, produce a divine race," the Hotar propagates him through human offspring. (That is done) for production. He who has such a knowledge will be blessed with offspring and cattle.

He concludes with the verse evâ na indro maghavâ śhapti (4, 17, 20). This earth is Indra maghavâ śhapti, i. e. Indra, the strong, of manifold crafts. She is (also) satyâ the true, charshañdhrî, i. e. holding men, anarrâ safe. She is (also) the râjâ. In the words, śtaro mâhinam yaj jaritre, mâhinam means the earth, śtaro the sacrifice, and jaritâ the sacrificer. By repeating them he asks for a blessing for the sacrificer. When he thus concludes, he ought to touch the earth on which he employs the sacrificial agency. On this earth he finally establishes the sacrifice.

After having repeated the Agni-Mâruta Shastra, he recites the Yâgyâ: agne marudbhih (5, 60, 8). Thus he satisfies (all) the deities, giving to each its due.

In his commentary on the Rîgvêda Sañhitâ (10, 53, 6, page 8 of my manuscript copy of the commentary on the 8th Ashtaka), he explains it simply by स्तोत्रणम्. But I think the first definition too comprehensive, the latter too restricted. For strictly speaking a term stotar is only applicable to the chanters of the Sâmans. At the recital of the Rik mantras by the Hotars, and the formulas of the Yajurveda by the Adhvaryu and his assistants is about as important for the success of the sacrifice. All that is in excess (ultra), above what is required, is a hindrance in the sacrifice. Hence all mistakes by whatever priest they might have been committed, are to be propitiated. The word jogu being a derivative of the root gu "to sound" cannot mean "a sacrificial performer" in general, as Nây. supposes in his commentary on the Ait. Br., but such performers only as require principally the aid of their voice.

FOURTH CHAPTER.

(On the origin, meaning, and universal nature of the Agnishtoma as the model of other sacrifices. On the Chatushtoma and Jyotishtoma.)

39.

(On the origin of the name "Agnishtoma," and its meaning.)

The Devas went to war with the Asuras, in order to defeat them. Agni was not willing to follow them. The Devas then said to him, "Go thou also, for thou art one of us." He said, "I shall not go unless a ceremony of praise is performed for me. Do ye that now." So they did. They all rose up (from their places), turned towards Agni, and performed the ceremony of praising him. After having been praised, he followed them. He having assumed the shape of three rows, attacked in three battle lines the Asuras in order to defeat them. The three rows were made only of the metres (Gâyatri, Trishtubh, Jagati). The three battle lines are only the three libations. He defeated them beyond expectation. Thence the Devas put down the Asuras. The enemy, the incarnate sin (Jâpman), the adversary of him who has such a knowledge, perishes by himself.

The Agnishtoma is just as the Gâyatri. The latter has twenty-four syllables (if all its three padas are counted) and the Agnishtoma has twenty-four Stotras and Shastras.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> That is to say, twelve Stotras or performances of the Sâma singers, and twelve Shastras or recitations of the Hotri-priests. To each Stotra a Shastra corresponds. The twelve Shastras are as follows :—(A) At the morning libation, 1) the Ajya and 2) Prâṇa to be repeated by the Hotar, 3) the Shastra of the Mantrâvaruṇa,

It is just as they say: a horse if well managed (suhîā) puts the rider into ease (sudhā). This does also the Gāyatrî. She does not stop on the earth, but takes the sacrificer up to heaven. This does also the Agnishtoma; it does not stop on earth, but takes the sacrificer up to heaven. The Agnishtoma is the year. The year has twenty-four half months, and the Agnishtoma twenty-four Stotras and Shastras. Just as waters flow into the sea, so go all sacrificial performances into the Agnishtoma (i. e. are contained in it).

40.

All sacrificial rites are contained in the Agnishtoma.)

When the Dîkshaniya Ishti is once performed in all its parts (lit. is spread), then all other Ishtis, whatever they may be, are comprised in the Agnishtoma.<sup>2</sup>

When he calls Iîâ,<sup>3</sup> then all Pākayajnas,<sup>4</sup> whatever they may be, are comprised in the Agnishtoma.

1) of the Brâhmanâchhansî, and 5) of the Achhâvâka. (B) At the midday libation—6) the Marutvatiya and 7) Nishkevalya Shastras to be recited by the Hotar, 8) the Shastras of the Maitrâvaruṇa, 9) of the Brâhmanâchhansî, and 10) that of the Achhâvâka. (C) At the evening libation—11) the Vaisvadeva, and 12) Agnimâruta Shastras to be repeated by the Hotar alone.

<sup>2</sup> The meaning is, the Dikshaniya Ishti is the model Ishti or prâriti, of all the other Ishtis required at the Agnishtoma, such as the vanva, &c. and is besides exactly of the same nature as other dependent Ishtis, such as the Dars'apûrnima Ishti.

<sup>3</sup> This is always done at every occasion of the Agnishtoma sacrifice, often as the priests and the sacrificer eat of the sacrificial food, he having first given an oblation to the gods, by the words: ilopa-va saba devâ bhîha âdityena, &c. (As'v. S'r. S. 1, 7).

<sup>4</sup> This is the general name of the oblations offered in the so-called gṛha agni or domestic fire of every Brahman, which are always distinguished from the sacrifices performed with the Vaitânika fire (obapatya, Dakshina, and Ahavaniya). They are said to be seven in number. According to oral information founded on Nârâyana Bhatt's practical manual for the performance of all the domestic

One brings the Agnihotram<sup>5</sup> in the morning and evening. They (the sacrificers when being initiated performing in the morning and evening the religious vow (of drinking milk only), and do that with the formula svāhā. With the same formula one offers the Agnihotram. Thus the Agnihotram is comprised in the Agnishtoma.

At the Prâyanîya Îshti<sup>6</sup> the Hotar repeats fifteen rites, they are for the Rigveda as follows: 1) S'ravanâkarma (an oblation principally given to Agni in the full moon of the month of S'ravana), 2) Sarpabali (an oblation of rice to the serpent), 3) A'scayaji (an oblation to Rudra the master of cattle), 4) Indrayana (an oblation to Indrâgni and the Vis'vedevas), 5) Pitrayana (an oblation to the Manes), 6) Pindapitriyajna (an oblation to the manes), 7) Anvashitaka (another oblation to the manes). See Aśva Gṛihya Sūtras, 2, 1-4. The meaning of the word pāka in the word pākayajna is doubtful. In all likelihood pāka here means "cooked dressed food," which is always required at these oblations. Some Hindu Scholars whom Max Muller follows (History of Ancient Sanscrit Literature, p. 203), explain it as "good." It is true the word is already used in the sense of "ripe, mature, excellent" in the Sāmhitā of the Rigveda (see 7, 104, 8-9). In the sense of "ripening" we find it 1, 31, 14. But it is very doubtful to me whether by pāka, a man particularly fit for performing sacrifices can be understood. The difference between the S'rânta and Smārta oblations is, that at the former no food, cooked in any other than the sacred fires, can be offered to the gods, whilst at the latter an oblation is first cooked on the common hearth, and then offered to the sacred Smārta agni.

<sup>5</sup> The sacrificer who is being initiated (who is made a Dikshu) has to observe fast for several days (three at the Agnishtoma) but he is allowed to take any substantial food. He drinks in the morning and evening only milk, which is taken from the cow after sunrise and after sunset. He is allowed but a very small quantity, as much as remains from the milk of one nipple only after the calf has sucked. This fast is called a vrata, and as long as he is observing it he is vrataprada, i.e. fulfilling a vow. See Hiranyakesi Sūtras, 1, 4. When doing this he repeats the mantra ye devā manujā (Tait. S. 1, 2, 3, 1), which concludes with tebhyo namas tebhyo srudhva (worship be to them, Svāhā be to them). The Agnihotram is offered in the morning and evening always with the formula svāhā. The author of the Brāhmanam believes that by these incidents to Agnihotram might be said to be contained in the Agnishtoma.

verses for the wooden sticks thrown into the fire (samidhenis). The same number is required at the New and Full Moon offerings. Thus the New and Full Moon offerings are comprised in the Prāyaṇīya Ishti.

They buy the king Soma (the ceremony of Somakraya<sup>7</sup> is meant). The king Soma belongs to the herbs. They cure (a sick person) by means of medicaments taken from the vegetable kingdom. All vegetable medicaments following the king Soma when being bought, they are thus comprised in the Agnishtoma.

At the Atithya Ishti<sup>8</sup> they produce fire by friction, and at the Chāturmāsya Ishtis (they do the same). The Chāturmāsya Ishtis thus following the Atithya Ishti, are comprised in the Agnishtoma.

At the Pravargya ceremony they use fresh milk, the same is the case at the Dākshāyana yajna.<sup>9</sup> Thus beginal number at most Ishtis. This number is therefore to be called as the prakṛti, i. e. standard, model, whilst any other number is a vikṛiti, i. e. modification.

On the producing of fire by friction at the Atithya Ishti, see 16-17. The same is done at the Chāturmāsya Ishtis, see Kātiya. 1. 8. 5, 2, 1.

<sup>9</sup> The Dākshāyana yajna belongs to that peculiar class of acts which are called ishtyayanaṁ, i. e. oblations to be brought regularly during a certain period. They are, as to their nature, only oblations of the Dars'apūrnāmāsa Ishti. It can be performed either every Full and New Moon during the life-time of the sacrificer, during a period of fifteen years, or the whole course of oblations to be completed in one year. The rule is, that the number of oblations given must amount to at least 720. This number is obtained either by performing it every day twice during a whole year, or by doing at every Full Moon day two oblations, and two others on every New Moon day during a space of fifteen years. The deities are, in Soma at the New Moon, and Indra-Agni and Mitra-Varuṇa at the Full Moon oblations. The offerings consist of Puroḍāśa, or milk (dadhī), and fresh milk (payas). On every day on which sacrifice is performed, it must be performed twice. See Kātiya. 1. 8. 4, 1-30 and Aśv. S'r. 8. 2, 14.

the Dākshāyana sacrifice is comprised in the Agnishtoma.

The animal sacrifice takes place the day previous to the Soma feast. All animal sacrifices<sup>10</sup> which follow it are thus comprised in the Agnishtoma.

Ilādadha<sup>11</sup> by name is a sacrificial rite. They perform it with thick milk (dadhi), and they also take thick milk at the time of making the Dadhi-gharma<sup>12</sup> rite (in the Agnishtoma). Thus the Ilādadha is, on account of its following the Dadhi-gharma rite, comprised in the Agnishtoma.

41.

(The other parts of Jyotishtoma, such as Ukthya, Atirātra, comprised in the Agnishtoma.)

Now the first part (of the Agnishtoma) has been explained. After that has been performed, the fifteen Stotras and Shastras of the Ukthya ceremony

<sup>12</sup> On the Dadhi-gharma, the draught of sour milk, see Asv. 13, and Hiranyakesi S'r. Satr. 9, 2. It is prepared and drunk by the priests after an oblation of it has been thrown into the fire, at the midday libation of the Soma feast just before the recital of the Marutvatīya Shashtra. The ceremony is chiefly performed by the Pratiprasthāthar, who after having taken sour milk with a root of Udumbara wood, makes it hot under the recital of the mantra vākeha tvā manaseha śrutīm, &c in which Speech and Mind, the two vital airs (prāṇa and apāna), eye and ear, Wisdom and Strength, Power and Quickness in action, are invoked to cook it. After having repeated this mantra and made hot the offering, he says to the Hotar, "The offering is cooked, repeat the Yājñā for the Dadhi-gharma." The latter repeats, "The offering is cooked, I think it cooked in the udder (of the cow) and cooked in the fire. Vaushat! Agni, eat the Dadhi-gharma, Vaushat!" Then the Hotar repeats another mantra, mayi tyad indriyam bṛhad (Asv. Sr. 13), whereupon the priests eat it.

follow. If they (the fifteen Stotras and fifteen Shastras) be taken together they represent the year as divided into months (each consisting of thirty days). Agni Vaisvânara is the year; Agnishtoma is Agni. The Ukthya by following (also) the order of the year is thus comprised in the Agnishtoma.

After the Ukthya has entered the Agnishtoma, the Vajapeya<sup>13</sup> follows it; for it exceeds (the number of the Stotras of) the Ukthya (by two only).

The twelve turns of the Soma cups<sup>14</sup> at night (at the Atirâtra Soma feast) are on the whole joined to the fifteen verses by means of which the Stotras are performed. Two<sup>15</sup> of those turns belonging always together, the number of the Stotra verses to which they (the turns) belong, is brought to thirty (by multiplying the number fifteen with these two). But the number thirty is to be obtained in another way also for the Atirâtra). The Shojasî Sâman is twenty-one-fold, and the Sandhi (a Sâman at the end of Atirâtra) is trirpit, i. e. nine-fold, which amounts all to thirty. There are thirty nights in every month all the year round. Agni Vaisvânara is the year, and Agni is the Agnishtoma. The Atirâtra is, thus following (the order of) the year, comprised

<sup>14</sup> This refers to the arrangement for the great Soma banquets held at night when celebrating the Atirâtra. In the evening, after the libation has been given to the fire from the Shojasî Grahya, the Soma cups are passed in a certain order. There are four such cups called ganās. At the first the cup of the Hotar takes the lead, the second that of the Maitrâvaruṇa, at the third that of the Brâhman, and at the fourth that of the Achhâvâka. This is thrice repeated, which makes twelve turns in all.—Sây.

in the Agnishtoma, and the Aptoryâma sacrifice follows the track of the Atirâtra when entering the Agnishtoma. For it becomes also an Atirâtra. The all sacrificial rites which precede the Agnishtoma, as well as those which come after it, are comprised in

All the Stotra verses of the Agnishtoma amount, counted, to one hundred and ninety. For ninety are the ten trivritas (three times three = nine). (The number hundred is obtained thus) ninety are ten (trivritas) but of the number ten one Stotriyâ verse is in excess; the rest is the Trivrit (nine), which is taken twenty-one-fold<sup>16</sup> (this makes 189) and represented by this number that one (the sun) which is put over (the others), and burns. This is the Vishuvân (equator), which has ten Trivrit Stomas before it and ten after it, and being placed in the midst of both turns above them, and burns (like the sun). The one Stotriyâ verse which is in excess, is put over that (Vishuvan which is the twenty-first) and placed over it (like a cover). This is the sacrificer. The (the twenty-one-fold Trivrit Stoma) is the divine Kshatram (sovereign power), which has the power of defying any attack.

He who has such a knowledge obtains the divine Kshatram, which has the power for defying all attack, and becomes assimilated to it, assumes its shape, and takes the same place with it.

42.

(Why four Stomas are required at the Agnishtoma.)

The Devas after having (once upon a time) been defeated by the Asuras, started for the celestial world

him touching the sky (from his place on earth), entered the upper region (with his flames), and closed the gate of the celestial world; for Agni is its master. The Vasus first approached him and said: "Mayest thou allow us to pass over (thy flames) to enter heaven; give us an opportunity (âkâś'a.)" Agni said, "Being not praised (by you), I shall not allow you to pass (through the gate). Praise me now." So they did. They praised him with nine verses (the Trivṛt Stoma).<sup>18</sup> After they had done, he allowed

1- The Trivṛt Stoma consists of the nine verses of the Bahish-gromana Stotra (see Sāmaveda Smṛh. 2, 1-9), which are sung in no turns, each accompanied by the Hinūkāra. In this Stoma the nine verses are not sung repeatedly as is the case with all other brāhmas. There are three kinds (vishtuti) of this Stoma mentioned in the Tandya Brāhmanam 2, 1-2, called the udgātī trayito vishtuti, paravarttini, and kulāyini. The difference of these three kinds lies in the order which is assigned to each of the three verses which form the turn (paryāya), and in the application of the Hinūkāra (the hūm pronounced very loudly) which always belongs to one verse. The arrangement of all the verses which form part of the stoma (the whole musical piece), in three turns, each with a particular order for its several verses, and their repetition, is called in the Sāma language of the Sāma singers a vishtuti. Each Stoma has three variations. The first variations of the Trivṛt Stoma is the udgātī, i.e. the rising. This kind is very simple. The Hinūkāra is pronounced in the first paryāya at the first verse (tisribhyo-ahkaroti sa prathamayā), in the second at the middle verse of the triplet (tisribhyo hinūkaroti sa madhyamayā), and in the third, at the last verse (tisribhyo hinūkaroti sa uttamayā). The paravarttini consists in singing the several verses of the triplet in all three turns in the inverted order, that is to say, the first always made the last, and the last the first (tisribhyo hinūkaroti sa parāchibh.). The kulāyini vishtuti is more complicated than the two others. In the first turn the order of the verses is the same (tisribhyo hinūkaroti sa parāchibh.), in the second turn the first verse is made the first, the last becomes the middle verse, and the middle becomes the last (tisribhyo hinūkaroti yā madhyamā prathamā, yā uttamā sa madhyamā, yā prathamā sa uttamā); in the third turn, the last becomes the first, the first the second, and the second the last. The Sāma singers mark the several turns and order of each verse in it as well as the number of repetitions by sticks cut from the wood of the Udumbara tree, the trunk of which must always be placed behind the seat of the Udgātāra. They are called kaśās. Each of the three divisions of each set in which

The Rudras approached him and said to him "Mayest thou allow us to pass on; give us opportunity (by moderating thy flames)." He answered, "If I be not praised, I shall not allow you to pass. Praise me now." They consented. They praised him with fifteen verses.<sup>19</sup> After th

Their making is minutely described in the Lātyāyana Sūtras, 2, 6. प्रस्तोता कुशाः कारयेद्यज्ञिष्ठस्य। खदिरस्य दीर्घसत्त्वेके। प्रादेशमाचीः कुशष्टास्त्रैः समञ्जतो गुह्यपर्वशुमाचीः प्रज्ञातायाः कारयित्वा गंधैः प्रसिर्षया सत्त्वेके वैद्युतेन वसनेन प्ररिवेष्ट्य क्षौमशणकापां केमचिदुपर्यैर्दुर्वर्था वासयेत्।

i. e. the Prastotar ought to get made the kusās (small piece of wood) from a wood which is used at sacrifices. Some are of opinion that at sacrificial sessions (sattras) which last long, they ought to be made of Khadira wood only. After having got them made of a length of a span (the space between the thumb and forefinger, stretched), so that the part which is covered with bark resembles the back of the kusa grass, the fibre part of the stick being quite even, as big as the link of the thumb, the ends being prominent (easily to be recognized), he should besmear them with odorous substances, but at the Sattras, as some say, with liquid butter, & the cloth used for the Vishtutis, which is made of linen, or flax, cotton, round them, and place them above the Udumbara branch (always required when singing).

<sup>19</sup> This is the so-called Pañchadas'a Stoma. The arrangement is the same as with the Trivrit Stoma. The same triplet of verses is here required for each of the three turns. Each turn is to consist of five verses. In the first turn, the first verse is chanted thrice, the second once, the third once (pañchabyo hīṃkaroti sa tota'sa ekayā sa ekayā); in the second turn the first verse is chanted once, the second thrice, the third once; in the third turn the first and second verses are chanted each once, but the third thrice. This Stoma is required for those Sāmāns of the morning libation, who follow the Bahush-pavamānas. The saptadas'a and ekavimsa's follow the same order as the pañchadas'a. The several verses of the triplet are in three turns chanted so many times as respectively the number 17 and 21. The former is appropriate to the midday libation, the latter to the evening libation.

The Adityas approached and said to him, "Mayest thou allow us to pass on; give us an opportunity."

He answered, "If I be not praised, I shall not allow you to pass. Praise me now!" They consented.

They praised him with seventeen verses. After they had done so, he allowed them to pass, that they might enter the (celestial) world.

The Vis'vê Devâs approached and said to him, "Mayest thou allow us to pass on; give us an opportunity." He answered: "If I be not praised, I shall not allow you to pass. Praise me now!"

They consented. They praised him with twenty-five verses. After they had done so, he allowed them to pass, that they might enter the (celestial) world.

The gods having praised Agni each with another oma (combination of verses), he allowed them to pass.

The sacrificer who praises Agni with all (four) omas, as well as he (the priest) who knows it (the gushṭoma) will pass on beyond him (Agni, who touches with his flames the entrance to heaven).<sup>20</sup>

To him who has such a knowledge he (Agni) allows to pass and enter the celestial world.

43.

(On the names "Agnishtoma, Chatuṣṭoma, Jyotiṣṭoma." The Agnishtoma is endless.)

The Agnishtoma is Agni. It is called so, because they (the gods) praised him with this Stoma. They called it so to hide the proper meaning of the word; for the gods like to hide the proper meaning of words.

On account of four classes of gods having prā Agni with four Stomas, the whole was called Chat stoma (containing four Stomas). They called so to hide the proper meaning of the word; for gods like to hide the proper meaning of words.

It (the Agnishtoma) is called Jyotishtoma, for the praised Agni when he had risen up (to the sky) the shape of a light (jyotis). They called it so to hide the proper meaning of the word; for the gods like to hide the proper meaning of words.

This (Agnishtoma) is a sacrificial performance which has no beginning and no end. The Agnishtoma is like the endless wheel of a carriage. Its beginning (prāyaṇīya) and the conclusion (udayaṇīya) of it are alike (just as the two wheels of a carriage).

About this there is a sacrificial stanza sung "what is its (of the Agnishtoma) beginning, that is its end and what is its end, that is its beginning; just as the Sākala serpent it moves in a circle, that we cannot distinguish its first part from its last part." Its opening (the prāyaṇīya) was (also) its conclusion.<sup>21</sup>

But to this some raise objections, saying, "they do not make the beginning (of the Stotras of the Soma) to begin with the Trivrit Stoma, and conclude with the twenty-one fold Stoma (at the evening libation) how are they (the beginning and conclusion) to be alike?" To this one should answer, "they are alike as far as the twenty-one-fold Stoma is also a Trivrit Stoma, for both contain triplets of verses, and have their nature."<sup>22</sup>

How the Shastras should be repeated at each of the three libations. The sun never rises nor sets. How the phenomena of sunrise and sunset are to be explained.)

The Agnishtoma is that one who burns (the sun). The sun shines during the day, and the Agnishtoma<sup>23</sup> should be completed along with the day. It being a sâhna, i. e. going with the day, they should not perform it hurriedly (in order to finish before the day is over), neither at the morning, or midday, nor evening libations. (Should they do so) the sacrificer would suddenly die.

When they do not perform hurriedly (only) the rites of the morning and midday libations, but hurry over the rites of the evening libation, then this, viz. the villages lying in the eastern direction become largely populated, whilst all that is in the western direction becomes a long tract of deserts, and the sacrificer dies suddenly. Thence they ought to perform without any hurry the rites of the morning and midday, as well as those of the evening libation. (If they do so) the sacrificer will not suddenly die.

In repeating the Shastras, the Hotar ought to be guided by the (daily) course (of the sun). In the which consists of three triplets (trichas). For performing the twenty-one-fold Soma at the evening libation, the Yajñayajñiya âman is used, which consists only of two verses, but by repeating two parts of them twice the number of three verses is obtained. The same triplet being chanted in three turns (paryâya) the twenty-one-fold Soma appears to be like the Trîvrit.

<sup>23</sup> Agnishtoma is here taken in the strictest sense, as meaning only Soma festival, lasting for one day, and completed by means of the four Somas mentioned. Therefore Agnishtoma is often called the prahita (of the Aikâhika Soma sacrifices, or such ones which last for one day only. But in a more comprehensive sense all the rites which precede it, such as the Dikshaniya and other Ishtis, and animal sacrifice, are regarded as part of the Agnishtoma. For about these rites nobody is allowed to perform any Soma sacrifice.

morning time, at sunrise, it burns but slowly. Then the Hotar should repeat the Shastras at the morning libation with a feeble voice.

When the sun is rising higher up (on the horizon) it burns with greater force. Thence the Hotar should repeat the Shastras at the midday libation with strong voice.

When the sun faces men most (after having passed the meridian), it burns with the greatest force. Thence the Hotar should repeat the Shastras at the third (evening) libation with an extremely strong voice. He should (only) then (commence to) repeat it so (with the greatest force of his voice), when he should be complete master of his full voice. For the Shastra is Speech. Should he continue to repeat (the Shastras of the third libation) with the same strength of voice with which he commenced the repetition, up to the end, then his recitation will be admirably well accomplished.

The sun does never set nor rise. When people think the sun is setting (it is not so). For after having arrived at the end of the day it makes itself produce two opposite effects, making night to what is below and day to what is on the other side.

When they believe it rises in the morning (the supposed rising is thus to be accounted for). Having reached the end of the night, it makes itself produce two opposite effects, making day to what is below and night to what is on the other side.<sup>21</sup> In fact the sun never sets. Nor does it set for him who has such a knowledge. Such a one becomes united with the sun, assumes its form, and enters its place.

<sup>21</sup> This passage is of considerable interest, containing the denial of the existence of sunrise and sunset. The author ascribes a daily course to the sun, but supposes it to remain always in its high position on the sky, making sunrise and sunset by means of its own contrarieties.

FIFTH CHAPTER.

(On the gradual recovery of the sacrifice. What men are unfit to officiate as sacrificial priests. The offerings to the Devīs and Devikās. The Ukthya sacrifice.)

45.

(How the gods recovered the sacrifice which had gone from them. How they performed different rites. Under what conditions the sacrifice is effectual.)

The sacrifice once left the gods and went to nourishing substances. The gods said, "the sacrifice has gone from us to nourishing substances, let us seek both the sacrifice and the nourishment by means of a Brâhmaṇa and the metres." So they did. They initiated a Brâhmaṇa by means of the metres. They performed all the rites of the Dikshaṇīya Ishti up to the end, including even the Patni-saṁyâjas.<sup>1</sup> On account of the gods having at that occasion performed all the rites at the Dikshaṇīya Ishti up to the end, including even the Patni-saṁyâjas,<sup>2</sup> men followed afterwards the same practice. The gods (in their search for the sacrifice) came very near it by means of the Prâyaṇīya Ishti. They performed the ceremonies with great haste and finished the Ishti already with the S'amyuvâka.<sup>3</sup> This is the reason that the Prâyaṇīya Ishti ends with S'amyuvâka; for men followed (afterwards) this practice.

<sup>3</sup> This is a formula containing the words s'amyoh which is repeated before the Patni-saṁyâjas. As'v. S'r. S 1, 10. The mantra which is frequently used at other occasions also, runs as follows:

तच्छोराष्टमीमवे गार्तु यज्ञाय गार्तु यज्ञपतये देवीः स्वस्तिरस्तु ।
सस्तिमानुषेभ्यः । ऊर्ध्वं जिगातु भेषजं शम्भो अस्तु द्विपदे शं चतु- पदे ।

The gods performed the rites of the Atithya Ishṭi and came by means of it very near the sacrifice. They concluded hastily the ceremonies with the Ilâ (the eating of the sacrificial food). This is the reason that the Atithya Ishṭi is finished with the Ilâ; for men followed (afterwards) this practice.

The gods performed the rites of the Upasads and came by means of them very near the sacrifice. They performed hastily the ceremonies, repeating only three Sâmidhenî verses, and the Yâjyâs for three deities. This is the reason that at the Upasad Ishṭi only three Sâmidhenîs are repeated, and Yâjyâ verse to three deities; for men followed (afterwards) this practice.

The gods performed the rites of the 'upavasatha' (the eve of the Soma festival). On the upavasatha day they reached the sacrifice. After having reached the sacrifice (Yajna), they performed all its rites severally, even including the Patnî-saṁyâjas. This is the reason that they perform at the day previous to the Soma festival all rites to the end, even including the Patnî-saṁyâjas.

This is the reason that the Hotar should repeat the mantras at all ceremonies preceding the Upavasatha day (at which the animal sacrifice is offered) with a very slow voice. For the gods came at it (the sacrifice) by performing the several rites in such a manner as if they were searching (after something, i. e. slowly).

This is the reason that the Hotar may repeat on the Upavasatha day (after having reached the sacrifice) the mantras in whatever tone he might like recite them. For at that occasion the sacrifice already reached (and the "searching" tone of repeating not required).

The gods, after having reached the sacrifice, said to him, "Stand still to be our food." He answered, "No. How should I stand still for you (to be your food)?" He then only looked at them. They said to him, "Because of thy having become united with a Brâhmaṇa and the metres, thou shall stand still." He consented.

That is the reason that the sacrifice (only) when joined to a Brâhmaṇa and metres carries the oblations to the gods. <sup>7</sup>

46.

(On three mistakes which might be made in the appointment of priests. How they are to be remedied.)

Three things occur at the sacrifice: offals, devoured food, and vomited food. Offals (jagdha) occur when one appoints to the office of a sacrificial priest who offers his services, thinking he (the sacrificer) should give me something, or he should choose me for the performance of his sacrifice.<sup>8</sup> This (to appoint such a man to the office of a priest) is as perverse as (to eat) the offals of a meal (which is generally not touched by others). For the acts of such a one do not benefit the sacrificer.

The drift of this paragraph is to show, that, for the successful performance of the sacrifice, Brahmins, as well as the verses composed in different metres and preserved by Brahmins only, are indispensable. Kshatriyas and other castes were to be deluded into the belief that they could not perform any sacrifice with the slightest chance of success, if they did not appoint Brahmins and employ the verses of the Rigveda, which were chiefly preserved by the Brahmins only. The sacrificer must always himself choose his priests by addressing them in due form. No one should offer his services; but he must be chosen by the man who wishes to perform a sacrifice.

Devoured (gīṇam) is that when a sacrificer points some one to the office of a priest out of thinking, "he might kill me (at some future occasion), or disturb my sacrifice (if I do not choose him for the office of a priest)." This is as pernicious as if food is devoured (not eaten in the proper way). For the acts of such a one do not benefit the sacrificer (as little as the devouring of food with greed benefits the body).

Vomited (vānta) is that, when a sacrificer appoints to the office of a priest a man who is ill spoken of, as men take disgust at anything that is vomited, so the gods take also disgust at such a man. To appoint such a man is as disgusting as something vomited. For the acts of such a man do not benefit the sacrificer.

The sacrificer ought not to cherish the thought of appointing any one belonging to these three classes (just described). Should he, however, involuntarily (by mistake) appoint one of these three, then the penance (for this fault) is, the chanting of the Vāmadevyam Sâman. For this Vāmadevyam is the whole universe, the world of the sacrificer (the earthly world of the mortals, and the celestial world of the immortals). This Sâman (which is in the Gâyatri metre) is short of three syllables.<sup>9</sup> When going to perform this chant, he should divide the word purusha, designating his own self, into three syllables, and insert one of them at the end of each pada (of the verse abhi shu na). Thus he puts himself in these worlds, <sup>9</sup> The Vāmadevyam consists of the three verses, havyaṁ nāsti has tvā satya, and abhi shu naḥ (See Sāmaveda Samh. 2, 32-34). The first two are in the Gâyatri metre. But the last abhi shu has instead of twenty-four only twenty-one syllables, wanting in every pada one syllable. To make it to consist of twenty-four also, the repeater at this occasion, to add to the first pada pu, to the second ra, to the third sha.

the world of the sacrificer, that of the immortals, and the celestial world. (By chanting this Sâman) the sacrificer overcomes all obstacles arising from mistakes in the performance of the sacrifice (and obtains nevertheless what he was sacrificing for).

He (the Rishi of the Aitareyins) moreover has said, that the sacrificer should mutter (as japa) the Āmadevyam in the way described (above) even if the performing priests were all of unexceptionable character.

47.

The offerings to Dhâtār and the Devikās: Anumati, Râkâ, Simvâli, Kuhû.

The metres (chhandânsi) having carried the offerings to the gods became (once) tired, and stood still on the latter part of the sacrifice's tail, just as a horse or a mule after having carried a load (to a distant place) stands still.

(In order to refresh the fatigued deities of the metres) the priest ought, after the Purodâśa belonging to the animal slaughtered for Mitra-Varuṇa<sup>10</sup> has been offered, portion out the rice for the devikâ bhṛmishu (offerings for the inferior deities).

For Dhâtār he should make a rice ball (the Purodâśa) to be put on twelve potsherds. Dhâtār is the Vashaṭkāra.

To Anumati (he should offer) a portion of boiled rice (charu); for Anumati is Gâyatrî.

To Râkâ (he should offer) a portion of boiled rice; for she is Trishṭubh.

The same (he should offer) to Simvâli and Kuhû; for Simvâli is Jagatî, and Kuhû Anushṭubh. These are all the metres. For all other metres (used at the sacrifice) follow the Gâyatrî, Trishṭubh, Jagatî, and

Anushtubh, as their models. If, therefore, one sacrifices for these metres only, it has the same effect, as if he had sacrificed for all of them.

The (common) saying "the horse if well managed (suhita) puts him (the rider) into ease," is applicable to the metres; for they put (if well treated) the sacrificer into ease (sulhâ, comfort or happiness of any kind). He who has such a knowledge obtains such a world (of bliss) as he did not expect.

Regarding these (derihâ) oblations some are of opinion that before each oblation to all (the several) goddesses, the priest ought to make an oblation of melted butter to Dhâtâr; for thus he would make all the goddesses (to whom oblations are given along with the Dhâtâr) cohabit with the Dhâtâr.

About this they say: it is laziness <sup>11</sup> (at a sacrifice) to repeat the same two verses (the Puronuvākya and Yâjyâ for the Dhatar) on the same day (several times). <sup>12</sup> (It is sufficient to repeat those two verses once only.) For even many wives cohabit with one and the same husband only. When the Hotar, therefore, repeats, before addressing the (four) goddesses, the Yâjyâ verse for the Dhâtâr, he thus

<sup>12</sup> Both the Anuvākya and Yâjyâ for the Dhâtâr are not in the Smhitâ, but in the Asval. Sr. S. 6, 14. The Anuvākya is:

धाता ददातु दाशुषे प्राचीं जीवातुमक्षितम्।

वयं देवस्य धीमहि सुमतिं वाजिनोवतः ॥ (Atharvaveda S. 7, 17, 2).

The Yâjyâ is :

धाता प्रजानामुत्तराय ईशे धामेदं विश्वं भुवनं जजान।

धाता हृष्टीरनिषाभिषष्टे धात्र इदम्यं हतवज्जुहोता ॥

The oblations to the Dhâtâr who is the same as Tvashtar, and the four goddesses mentioned, form part of the Udayaniya or concluding Ishti. The ceremony is called Maitrâvaruṇî âmikshâ, (i. e. the âmikshâ dish for Mitra-Varuṇa). Mitra-Varuṇa are first invoked, then follow Dhâtâr and the goddesses.

habits with all goddesses. So much about the oblations to the minor goddesses (devikâ).

48.

The offerings for Sûrya and the Devis, Dyâus, Ushâs, Gâus, Prithivî, who are represented by the metres. When oblations should be given to both the Devikâs and Devis. Story of Vriddhadyumna.)

Now about the offerings to the goddesses (devî).<sup>13</sup> The Adhvaryu ought to portion out for Sûrya (the sun) rice for a ball to be put on one potsherd (kakapâla). Sûrya is Dhâtar (creator), and this is the Vashaṭkâra.

To Dyâus (Heaven) he ought to offer boiled rice. or Dyâus is Anumati, and she is Gâyatrî.

To Ushâs (Dawn) he ought to offer boiled rice. or Ushâs is Râkâ, and she is Trishṭubh.

To Gâus (Cow) he ought to offer boiled rice. or Gâus is Simivâlî, and she is Jagatî.

To Prithivî (Earth) he ought to offer boiled rice. or Prithivî is Kuhû, and she is Anushṭubh.

All other metres which are used at the sacrifice, how the Gâyatrî, Trishṭubh, Jagatî and Anushṭubh their models (which are most frequently used).

The sacrifice of him who, having such a knowledge, gives oblations to these metres,<sup>14</sup> includes (in) oblations to all metres.

The (common) saying "the horse if well managed, is him (the rider) into ease," is applicable to the metres; for they put the sacrificer (if well treated)

Instead of the devikâ offerings those for the devis might be given. The effect is the same. The place of the Dhâtar is occupied by brahman, who himself is regarded as a Dhâtar, i. e. Creator.

The instrumental etâḥ chhandobhiḥ must here be taken in the sense of a dative. For the whole refers to oblations given to the gods, not to those offered through them to the gods.

into ease (sudhâ). He who has such a knowledge obtains such a world (of bliss) as he did not expect.

Regarding these (oblations to the Devîs), some are of opinion, that before each oblation to all (the several) goddesses, one ought to offer melted butter to Sûrya; for thus one would make all goddesses cohabit with Sûrya.

About this they say, it is laziness at a sacrifice to repeat (several times) the same two verses (the Puroṇuvâkyâ and Yâjyâ for Sûrya) on the same day. (It is sufficient to repeat those verses once only.) For even many wives cohabit with one (and the same) husband only. When the Hotar, therefore, repeats before addressing the (four) goddesses, the Yâjyâ verse for Sûrya, he thus cohabits with all goddesses.

These (Sûrya with Dyâus, &c.) deities are the same as those others (Dhâtâr with Anumati, &c.). One obtains, therefore, through one of these (classes of deities), the gratification of any desire which is in the gift of both.

The priest ought to portion out a rice cake ball for both these classes (of deities) for him who desires the faculty of producing offspring, (to make him obtain) the blessings contained in both. But he ought not to do so for him who sacrifices for acquiring great wealth only. If he were to portion out a rice cake ball for both these classes (of deities) for him who sacrifices for acquiring wealth only, he has it in his power to make the gods displeased (jealous with the wealth of the sacrificer (and deprive him of it); for such one might think (after having obtained the great wealth he is sacrificing for), I have enough (and do not require anything else from the gods).

Suchirriksha Gaupâlâtîyana had once portioned out the rice ball for both classes (of deities) at the sacrifice.

fice of Vriuddhadyumna Pratârîna. As he (afterwards) saw a prince swim (in water), he said, "this is owing to the circumstance that I made the god-des-es of the higher and lower ranks (devîs and devikûs) quite pleased at the sacrifice of that king; therefore the royal prince swims (in the water). (Moreover he saw not only him) but sixty-four (other) heroes always steel-clad, who were his sons and grandsons.<sup>15</sup>

49.

(Origin of the Ukthya. The Sâkhamas'vam Sâmans. The Pramâñhishthiya Sânan.)<sup>16</sup>

The Devas took shelter in the Agnishtoma, and he Asuras in the Ukthyas. Both being (thus) of

<sup>16</sup> The Ukthya is a slight modification of the Agnishtoma sacrifice. The noun to be supplied to it is kratu. It is a Soma sacrifice and one of the seven Sañsthas or component parts of the Jyotishtoma. Its name indicates its nature. For Ukthya means "what refers to the Uktha," which is an older name for Shastra, i. e. a recitation of one of the Hotri priests at the time of the Soma libations. Whilst the Agnishtoma has twelve recitations, the Ukthya has fifteen. The first twelve recitations of the Ukthya are the same with those of the Agnishtoma; to these, three are added, which are wanting in the Agnishtoma. For at the evening libation of the latter sacrifice, there are only two Shastras, the Vaisvadeva and Agni-Mârta, both to be repeated by the Hotar. The three Shastras of the so-called Hotrakas, i. e. minor Hotri-priests, who are (according to As'val. Sr. S. 5, 10), the Prasâstar (another name of the Matrâvaruṇa), the Brâhmarâkhsasi, and Achhâvâka, are left out. But just these three Shastras which are briefly described in Asvalâyana (Sr. S. 6, 1) form a necessary part of the Ukthya. Thus this sacrifice is only a kind of supplement to the Agnishtoma.

There is some more difference in the Sâmans than in the Rik verses required at the Ukthya. Of the three triplets which constitute the Bahishpavamâna Stotra (see page 120) at the morning libation of the Agnishtoma, only the two last are employed: for the first another one is chosen, pavarva vâcho agriyâh (Sâm. Sañh. 2, 123-4). The four remaining Stotras of the morning libation, the so-called Ajya-istotrâpi, are different. They are all together in the equal strength, the gods could not turn them on. One of the Rishis, Bharadvāja, saw them (and said "these Asuras have entered the Ukthas (Shastras) but none (else) sees them." He called out Agni with the mantra: ehy ū shu bravāni (6, 16, 16). The itn girah, i. e. other voices (mentioned in this verse) are those of the Asuras. Agni rose thereupon<sup>17</sup> and said "what is it then that the lean, long, pale has to tell me?" For Bharadvāja was lean, of high stature and pale. He answered, "These Asuras have entered the Ukthas (Shastras); but nobody is aware of them."

Agni then turned a horse, ran against them and overtook them. This act of Agni became the Sāhan as'ram<sup>18</sup> Sāman. Thence it is called so (from as'ra a horse).

Sāmaveda Sañh. (2, 140-152). At the midday libation there is the Brihat-Sāma (tvām iddhi havāmahe, Sām. S. 2, 159-160) instead of the Rathantaram; the S'gaitam (abhi pra vah savānām, Sām. S. 2, 161-62) instead of the Vāmadevyam. At the evening libation there are three Stotras required in addition to those of the Agnishtoma. (See note 18 to this chapter).

In the Hiranyakesi Sūtras (9, 18) the following description of the Ukthya is given:—

उक्थ्येन पशुकामो यजेत । तस्याग्निष्टोमे कल्पो व्याख्यातः । एतं दश ऋदिसदः क्रतुकरणं ऊला एतेन मन्त्रेण मध्यमे परिधाव्यं लेपं निमार्त्यैन्द्रायमुक्थ्ये द्वितीयं सवनोद्यमान्भवति । ततोयस्य धाराग्रहकाल आग्रयणं गृह्णीत्वोक्थ्यं गृह्णात्यग्निष्टोमचमसानुग्राहिभ्यश्चमसगणेश्यो राजानमतिरेचयति सर्वं राजानमुद्रय मार्तरिचो दशभिः कलशैः सृष्ट्वा न्युज्जेति च लुप्यत एतदग्निष्टोमचसानां संप्रैषस्य यो य उक्तमः संस्थानचमसगणश्चमुद्रयन्नेतत्संप्रैष्य अग्निष्टोमचमसैः प्रचर्यत्रिभिर्ऋक्विद्यहैः प्रचरतो यथा पुरक्षादिद्राय वरुणाभ्यां त्वेति प्रथमे ग्रहणसादनौ संनमन्तीः द्रावृक्षस्य त्वेति द्वितीय इन्द्राविष्णुभ्यां त्वेति तृतीये.

<sup>18</sup> This Sāman consists of the three verses, ehy ū shu bravāni yatra kvacha te and na hi te pūrtam (Sāmaveda Sañh. 2, 55-57).

About this they say, the priest ought to lead the Ukthas by means of the Sākamas'vam. For if the Ukthas (Shastras) have another head save the Sākamas'vam, they are not led at all.

They say, the priest should lead (the Ukthas) with the Pramāṇhishṭhīya Sāman (Sām. Saṁh. 2, 28, 229=2, 2, 2, 17, 1, 2); for by means of this Sāman the Devas had turned the Asuras from the Ukthas.

(Which of both these opinions is preferable, cannot be settled.) He is at liberty<sup>19</sup> to lead (the Ukthas) by means of the Pramāṇhishṭhīya or the Sākamas'vam.<sup>20</sup>

50.

(The Shastras of the three minor Hotṛi-priests at the evening libation of the Ukthya sacrifice.)

The Asuras entered the Uktha (Shastra) of the Maitrāvaruṇa. Indra said, "Who will join me, that we both might turn these Asuras out from here (the Shastra of the Maitrāvaruṇa)?" "I," said Varuṇa. Thence the Maitrāvaruṇa repeats a hymn for Indra-Varuṇa<sup>21</sup> at the evening libation. Indra and Varuṇa then turned them out from it (the Shastra of the Maitrāvaruṇa).

This Sāman is regarded as the leader of the whole Ukthya ceremony, that is to say, as the principal Sāman. Thence the two other Sāmans, which follow it at this ceremony, the Sāubhuram (vāyam trīṇa, Sām. Saṁh. 2, 58-59), and the Nārmedhasam (adhā hira gavyana, 2, 60-62) are called in the Sāma prayogas the second and third Sākamas'vam.

The Asuras having been turned out from this place entered the Shastra of the Brâhmanâchhañsî. Indra said, "Who will join me, that we both might turn the Asuras out from this place?" Brihaspa answered, "I (will join you)." Thence the Brâhmanâchhañsî repeats at the evening libation an Aindra-Bârhaspatya hymn. Indra and Brihaspati turn the Asuras out from it.

The Asuras after having been turned out from here entered the Shastra of the Achhâvâka. Indra said, "Who will join me, that we both might turn out the Asuras from here?" Vishṇu answered, "I (will join you)." Thence the Achhâvâka repeats at the evening libation an Aindrâ-Vaiṣṇava hymn. Indra and Vishṇu turned the Asuras out from this place.

The deities who are (successively) praised along with Indra, form (each) a pair with (him). A pair is a couple consisting of a male and female. From this pair such a couple is produced for production. He who has such a knowledge is blessed with children and cattle.

The Rituyâjas of both the Potar and Neshtar amount to four.<sup>22</sup> The (Yâjyâs to be recited by the priests along with the other Hotars) are six verses. The first is a Virât which contains the number ten. Then they complete the sacrifice with a Virât, which contains the number ten (three times ten).

<sup>24</sup> The Potar has to repeat the second and eighth, the Neshtar the third and ninth Rituyâja, see page 135-36. At each of the three Shastras of the Ukthya each of these two priests has also to recite a Yâjyâ. This makes six. If they are added to the four Rituyâjas then the number ten is obtained, which represents the Virât.

FOURTH BOOK.

FIRST CHAPTER.

(On the Shoḷas'î and Atirâtra Sacrifices.)

1.

(On the nature of the Shoḷas'î, and the origin of its name. On the Anushtubh nature of the Shoḷas'î Shashtra.)

The gods prepared for Indra by means (of the soma ceremony) of the first day <sup>1</sup> the thunderbolt; by means (of the Soma ceremony) of the second day, they cooled it (after having forged it, to increase its upness); by means (of the Soma ceremony) of the third day, they presented it (to him); by means (of the Soma ceremony) of the fourth day, he struck it (his enemies).

Thence the Hotar repeats on the fourth day the Shoḷas'î Shashtra. The Shoḷas'î is the thunderbolt.

The first, second day, &c. refer to the so-called Shal-aha or six day sacrifice, about which see the 3rd chapter of this Pañchikâ.

The Shoḷas'î sacrifice is almost identical with the Ukthya. The names and Shastras at all three libations are the same. The only distinctive features are the use of the Shoḷas'î graha, the chanting of the Gaurivitam or Nânadam Sâman, and the recital of the Shoḷas'î Shashtra, after the Ukthâni (the Sâmans of the evening libation) have been chanted, and their respective Shastras recited. The Shoḷas'î Shashtra is of a peculiar composition. It is here minutely described, and also in the Asv. S'r. S. 6, 2. The number sixteen prevails in the arrangement of this Shashtra, which is itself the sixteenth on the day on which it is repeated. Thence the name. "The substantive to be supplied is, kratu. The whole term means, the ritual performance which contains the number sixteen." The

By reciting the Shoḷas'ī on the fourth day he strikes a blow at the enemy (and) adversary (of the sacrificer, in order to put down any one who is to be put down by him (the sacrificer).

The Shoḷas'ī is the thunderbolt; the Shastra (Ukthas) are cattle. He repeats it as a cover over the Shastras (of the evening libation). By doing so he surrounds cattle with a weapon (in the form of) the Shoḷas'ī (and tames them). Therefore cattle return to men if threatened round about with the weapon (in the form) of the Shoḷas'ī.

Thence a horse, or a man, or a cow, or an elephant after having been (once) tamed, return by themselves (to their owner), if they are only commanded (by the owner) with the voice (to return).

He who sees the weapon (in the form of) the Shoḷas'ī (Shastra), is subdued by means of the weapon only. For voice is a weapon, and the Shoḷas'ī is voice (being recited by means of the voice).

About this they ask, Whence comes the name "Shoḷas'ī" (sixteen)? (The answer is) There are sixteen Stōtras, and sixteen Shastras. The Hotar stops after (having repeated the first) sixteen syllables (of the Anuṣṭubh verse required for the Shoḷas'ī Shastra and pronounces the word om after (having repeated the latter) sixteen syllables (of the Anuṣṭubh). He puts in it (the hymn required at the Shoḷas'ī Shastra) a Nivid of sixteen padas (small sentences). This is the reason that it is called Shoḷas'ī. But two syllables are in excess (for in the second half there are eighteen, instead of sixteen) in the Anuṣṭubh

Anuṣṭubh metre consisting of twice sixteen syllables, the whole Shastra has the Anuṣṭubh character. It commences with six verses in the Anuṣṭubh metre, called by As'v. though improperly, Stōtriya and Anurūpa (for the Stōtriya verse of the Shastra is always chanted by the Sāma singers, but this is not the case with the verse in question). These are: aśvī soma indra te (1, 84, 1-6).

which forms a component part of the Shoḷas'ī Shastra. For Speech (represented by the Anuṣṭubh) has (as a female deity) two breasts; these are truth and untruth. Truth protects him who has such a knowledge, and untruth does no harm to such one.

2. •

(On the way of repeating the Shoḷas'ī Shastra. On the application of the Gaurivṛti or Nânada Sâman.)

He who desires beauty and the acquirement of sacred knowledge ought to use the Gaurivṛtam<sup>3</sup> as the proper Sâman at the Shoḷas'ī (ceremony). For the Gaurivṛtam is beauty and acquirement of sacred knowledge. He who having such a knowledge uses the Gaurivṛtam as (the proper Sâman at the Shoḷas'ī ceremony) becomes beautiful and acquires sacred knowledge.

They say, the Nânadam<sup>4</sup> ought to be used as (the proper) Sâman at the Shoḷas'ī (ceremony). Indra fitted his thunderbolt to strike Vṛitra; he struck him with it, and hitting him with it, killed him. He after having been struck down, made a fearful noise (vṛjanadat). Thence the Nânada Sâman took its origin, and therefore it is called so (from nad = scream). This Sâman is free from enemies; for it kills enemies. He who having such a knowledge uses the Nânada Sâman at the Shoḷas'ī ceremony gets rid of his enemies, (and) kills them.

If they use the Nânadam (Sâman), the several padas or verses in two metres at the Shoḷas'ī Shastra are not to be taken out of their natural connection to join one pada of the one metre to one of the other (avihṛita). For the Sâma singers do the same, using verses which are not joined in the vihṛita way for singing the Nânada Sâman.

These verses are not to be found in the Rigveda Saṁhitâ, but in As'v. S. 6, 2.

If they use the Gaurivîtam, several padas of verse in two metres used at the Shoḷasî are to be taken out of their natural connection, to join one pada of the one metre to one of the other (vihṛita). For the Sâma singers do the same with the verses which they use for singing.<sup>6</sup>

3.

(The way in which the padas of two different metres are mixed in the Shoḷasî Shastra is shown.)

Then (when they use the Gaurivîti Sâman) the Hotar changes the natural position of the several padas of two different metres, and mixes them (vyatishajati). He mixes thus Gâyatrîs and Pañktîs, â tvâ vahantu (1,16,1-3), and upa shu s'rinu (1,82,1-3-4).<sup>7</sup> Man has the nature of the Gâyatrî <sup>6</sup> All the words from "the several padas" to "other" are only translation of the term avihṛita in order to make it better understood.

<sup>7</sup> The reason of this is, that the recitations of the Hotri-pitṛ must correspond with the performances of the Sâma singers.

The Gâyatrî has three, the Pañkti five feet (padas), each consisting of eight syllables. The two padas which the Pañkti has in excess over the Gâyatrî, follow at the end without any corresponding Gâyatrî pada. After the second pada of the Pañkti there is the pranava made (i. e. the syllable om is pronounced), and likewise after the fifth. The two verses, just mentioned, are mixed as follows: imâ dhânâ ghritasnuvoh susamdrisam vāyam hari ihopa vakshato maghavan vandishimahom indram sukhutame rathe pra nūnañ pūrnāvandhuroḥ stuto yâhi viśân anu yojânvindra te harom.

and cattle that of the Pañktî. (By thus mixing together Gâyatrî and Pañktî verses) the Hotar mixes man among cattle, and gives him a firm footing among them (in order to become possessed of them).

As regards the Gâyatrî and Pañktî, they both form two Anushtubhs (for they contain as many padas, viz. eight, as both Gâyatrî and Pañktî taken together). By this means the sacrificer becomes neither separated from the nature of Speech which exists in the form of the Anushtubh, nor from the nature of a weapon (Speech being regarded as such a one).

He mixes verses in the Ushnih and Brihatî metres, yad indra pritanâjye (8, 12, 25-27) and ayam te astu haryatu (3, 44, 1-3). Man has the nature of Ushnih, and cattle that of Brihatî. (By thus mixing together Ushnih and Brihatî verses) he mixes man among cattle, and gives him a firm footing among them.

As regards the Ushnih and Brihatî, they both form two Anushtubhs. By this means the sacrificer becomes neither separated, &c.

He mixes a Dvipâd (verse of two padas only) and a Trishtubh, â dhûrshv asmâi (7, 34, 4), and brahman vira (7, 29, 2). Man is dvipâd, i.e. has two feet, and strength is Trishtubh. (By thus mixing a Dvipâd and Trishtubh), he mixes man with Strength (provides him with it) and makes him a footing in it. That is the reason that man, as having prepared for him a footing in Strength, is the strongest of all animals. The Dvipâd verse consisting of twenty syllables, and the Trishtubh (of forty-four), make two Anushtubhs (sixty-four syllables). By this means the sacrificer becomes neither separated, &c.

He mixes Dvipadas and Jagatis, viz. esha brahmâ ya ritvyam (As'v. S'r. S. 6, 2)<sup>8</sup> and pra te mahe

<sup>8</sup> These verses are not to be found in the Rîgveda Sañhîtâ. I therefore write them out from my copies of the As'val. Sûtras:—

(10, 96, 1-3). Man is Dvipâd, and animals have the nature of the Jagatî. (By thus mixing Dvipâd and Jagatî verses) he mixes man among cattle, and makes him a footing among them. That is the reason, that man having obtained a footing among cattle eats (them) <sup>9</sup> and rules over them, for they are at his disposal.

As regards the Dvipâd verse consisting of sixteen syllables and the Jagatî (consisting of forty-eight), they both (taken together) contain two Anushtubhs. By this means the sacrificer, &c.

He repeats verses in metres exceeding the number of padas of the principal metres, <sup>10</sup> viz. trihadrakeshu mahisho (2, 22, 1-3), and proshvasmû puro ratham (10, 133, 1-3). The juice which was flowing from the metres, took its course to the atichhandus, (i. e. beyond the metre, what has gone beyond, is in excess).

This Sholâsî Shastra being formed out of all metres he repeats verses in the Atichhandas metre.

Thus the Hotar makes (the spiritual body of) the sacrificer consist of all metres.

He who has such a knowledge prospers by means of the Sholâsî consisting of all metres.

Dvipadas (1) एष ब्रह्मा य ऋत्विज । इन्द्रो नाम श्रुतो मृणे ।

(2) विस्तृतयो यथा पथ । इन्द्र त्वद्यन्ति रातयः ।

(3) त्वानिहवसस्यते । यन्ति निरोग संयत ।

<sup>9</sup> That atti "he eats," put here without any object, refers to "pasu-vah" animals, follows with certainty from the context. Sâ. sup. plies kshira, milk, &c., for he abhorred the idea that animal food should be thus explicitly allowed in a sacred text.

<sup>10</sup> Thus I have translated the term atichhandasah, i. e. having excess in the metre. The verses mentioned contain seven padas of feet, which exceeds the number of feet of all other metres.

4.

(The Upasargas taken from the Mahânâmnîs. The proper Anushṭubhs. Consequences of repeating the Shoḷas'ī Śhastra in the vihrīta and avihrīta way. The Yājyâ of the Shoḷas'ī Śhastra.)

He makes the additions <sup>11</sup> (upasarga) taking (certain parts) from the Mahânâmnî verses.

The first Mahânâmnî (verse) is this world (the earth), the second the air, and the third that world (heaven). In this way the Shoḷas'ī is made to consist of all worlds.

By adding parts from the Mahânâmnîs (to the Shoḷas'ī), the Hotar makes the sacrificer participate in all worlds. He who has such a knowledge, prospers by means of the Shoḷas'ī being made to consist of all the worlds.

He repeats (now) Anushṭubhs of the proper form,<sup>12</sup> viz. pra pra vas trisṭubham (8, 58, 1), archata mārchatā (8, 58, 8-10), and yo vyatīñr aphāṇayāt 8, 58, 13-15).

<sup>11</sup> These additions are called upasargas. They are five in number, and mentioned by As'v. 6, 2. They are all taken from different verses of the so-called Mahânâmnîs, commencing with विदा मघवन्विद तु which make up the fourth Aranyaka of the Aitareya Brâhman. These five upasargas make together one Anushṭubh. They are . (1) चेतन (2) प्रचेतय (3) आयाचि पिब मरख. (4) कतुष्करद ऋते दत् (5) सुक्ताधेहि नो वसे. Their application is different according to the avihrīta or vihrīta way of repeating the Shoḷas'ī śastra. If the Śhastra is to be repeated in the former way, they are simply repeated in the form of one verse, after the recital of the ichhandas verses. But if it be repeated in the vihrīta way, the several upasargas are distributed among the five latter of the six ichhandas verses, in order to bring the number of syllables of each verse to sixty-four, to obtain the two Anushṭubhs for each.

<sup>12</sup> As yet the Anushṭubhs were only artificially obtained by the combination of the padas of different other metres.

That the Hotar repeats Anushṭubhs of the proper form (after having obtained them only in an artificial way) is just as if a man, after having gone here and there astray, is led back to the (right) path.

He who thinks that he is possessed (of fortune) and is, as it were, sitting in fortune's lap (gatas'rir), should make his Hotar repeat the Sholas'î in the avihrita way, lest he fall into distress for the injury done to the metres (by repeating them in the vihrita way).

But if one wishes to do away with the consequences of guilt (to get out of distress and poverty), one should make the Hotar repeat the Sholas'î in the vihrita way.

For (in such cases) man is, as it were, intermixed with the consequences of guilt (with the pâpman). By thus repeating the Sholas'î in the vihrita way, the Hotar takes from the sacrificer all sin and guilt. He who has such a knowledge becomes free from (the consequences of) guilt.

With the verse ud yad bradhñasya viśṭapam (8. 58, 7) he concludes. For the celestial world is the "bradhñasya viśṭapam." Thus he makes the sacrificer go to the celestial world.

As Yâjyâ verse he repeats apâh purveshâm harirai (10. 96, 13).<sup>13</sup> By repeating this verse as Yâjyâ (o the Sholas'î Shashtra) he makes the Sholas'î to consist of all libations (savanâni). The term apâh, thou hast drunk (used in this verse) signifies the Morning Libation. Thus he makes the Sholas'î to consist o i. e. "Thou hast drunk, O master of the two yellow horses (Indra) of the Soma drops formerly prepared for thee. This libation here is entirely thy own (thou hast not to share it with any other god). Enjoy, O Indra! the honey-like Soma. O bull! increase thy strength by (receiving) all this (quantity of Soma) in (thy) belly."

समहि सोमं मधुमन्तमिन्द्र सखा हृषन् कठर आहृषस् ॥

none yielded to the other. Indra said, "Who beside me will enter Night to turn the Asuras out of it? But he did not find any one among the Devas ready to accept (his offer), (for) they were afraid of Night on account of its darkness being (like that of) Death. This is the reason that even now one is afraid of going at night even to a spot which is quite close. For Night is, as it were, Darkness, and is Death, as it were. The metres (alone) followed him. This is the reason that Indra and the metres are the leading deities of the Night (of the nightly festival of Atirâtra). No Nivid is repeated, nor a Puroruk, nor Dhâyyâ; nor is there any other deity save Indra and the metres who are the leading (deities). They turned them out by going round (paryâyam) with the Paryâyas (the different turns of passing the Soma cups). This is the reason that they are called paryâya (from i to go, and pari around).

By means of the first Paryâya they turned them out of the first part of the night; by means of the middle Paryâya out of midnight, and by means of the third Paryâya out of the latter part of the night. The metres said to Indra, "even we (alone) are following (thee, to turn the Asuras) out of the Dark or (s'arvarâ, night). He (the sage Aitareya) therefore called them (the metres) apis'arvarâni, for they have followed Indra who was afraid of the darkness of night (as of death, safely carried beyond it. That is the reason that they are called apis'arvarâni.

(The Shastras of Atirâtra at the three Paryâyas. Sandhi Stotra.)

The Hotar commences (the recitations at Atirâtra) with an Anushtubh verse containing the term andhas i. e. darkness, viz. pântâm â vo andhasah (8, 81.1) or night belongs to Anushṭubh; it has the nature of light.

As appropriate Yâjyâ verse (at the end of each turn of the three Paryâyas)<sup>16</sup> Trisṭubhs containing the terms andhas darkness, pâ to drink, and mad to be drunk, are used. What is appropriate at the sacrifice, that is successful.

The Sâma singers repeat when chanting at the first Paryâya twice the first padas only of the verses which they chant). By doing so they take from them (the Asuras) all their horses and cows.

At the middle Paryâya they repeat twice the middle padas. By doing so they take from them (the Asuras) their carts and carriages.

At the last Paryâya they repeat twice when chanting the last padas (of the verses which they chant). By doing so they take from them (the Asuras) all things they wear on their own body, such as dresses, gold and jewels.

He who has such a knowledge deprives his enemy of his property, (and) turns him out of all these worlds (depriving him of every firm footing).

<sup>16</sup> There are four turns of the Soma cups passing the round in each Paryâya, or part of the night. At the end of each, a Yâjyâ is repeated, and the juice then sacrificed. There is at each turn (there are on the whole twelve) a Shâstra repeated, to which a Yâjyâ belongs. The latter contains always the terms indicated. See for instance the four Yâjyâs used at the first Paryâya (Aśv. S'r. S. 4), adharyava bhavatu indrâya, 2, 14, 1. (repeated by the Hotar). In the second pada there are the words madhyam andhak the mediating darkness" (symbolic name of the Soma juice). The Yâjyâ of the Maitrâvaruṇa is, asya made puruṣa pânasi (4, 14), it contains the term made "to get drunk," and pâ "to drink," in the last pada. The Yâjyâ of the Brâhmanâchlanâsi is su dhâtasya harivah piba (10, 104, 2). This verse contains the terms pâ "to drink" (in piba of the first pada), and mad to be drunk" (in the last pada). The Yâjyâ of the Achhâvâka is indra piba tubhyam (6, 40, 1). It contains both the terms pâ and mad. The Yâjyâ of the Hotar in the second Paryâya is, apâyya-andhaso madîya (2, 19, 1); it contains all three terms, "darkness, drink, and to be drunk."

They ask, How are the Pavamâna Stotras<sup>17</sup> provided for the night, whereas such Stotras refer only to the day, but not to the night? In what way are they both made to consist of the same parts (to have the same number of Stotras and Shastras)?

The answer is, (They are provided for) by the following verses, which form parts of the Stotras as well of the Shastras (at the Atirâtra): indrâya madhvan sutam (8, 81, 19. Sâmaveda Sañh. 2, 72), idam vas sutam anidhan (8, 2, 1, Sâm. S. 2, 84), idam hyanvojas sutam (3, 51, 10. Sâm. S. 2, 87). In this way the night becomes also provided with Paramânas (for the verses mentioned contain the term suta, i. e. squeezed referring to the squeezing of the Soma juice, which term is proper to the Pavamâna Stotra); in this way both (day and night) are provided with Pavamâna and made to consist of the same (number of) parts.

They ask, As there are fifteen Stotras for the day only, but not for the night, how are there fifteen Stotras for both (for day as well as for night)? In what way are they made to consist of the same (number of) parts?

The answer is, The Apis'arvaras<sup>18</sup> form twelve Stotras. (Besides) they chant according to the Rikthantara one the Sandhi<sup>19</sup> Stotra which contains <sup>17</sup> This question refers to the Stotras to be chanted for the purification of the Soma juice, which are, at the morning libation, the Bahish-pavamâna, at midday, the Pavamâna, and in the evening the Arbhava-pavamâna. At night there being no squeezing of the Soma juice, there are properly speaking no Pavamâna Stotras required. But to make the performance of day and night alike, the Pavamâna Stotras for day and night are to be indicated in one way or other in the Stotras chanted at night. This is here shown.

<sup>18</sup> See 4, 5. They are the metres used for Shastras and Stotras during the night of Atirâtra.

<sup>19</sup> This Stotra which is chanted after the latter part of the night is over, when the dawn is commencing (thence it is called sandhi, i. e. the joining of night and day), consists of six verses in three sets of) verses addressed to three deities. In this way night comprises (also) fifteen Stotras. Thus both (day and night) comprise each fifteen Stotras. Thus both are made to consist of the same (number of) parts.

The number of verses for making the Stotras is limited, but the number of recitations which follow the Stotras is unlimited. The past is, as it were, limited, defined; the future is, as it were, unlimited not defined). In order to secure the future (wealth, &c.) the Hotar repeats more verses (than the Sâma singers chant). What goes beyond the Stotra is offspring, what goes beyond one's self (represented by the Stotra), is cattle. By repeating, when making his recitation, more verses (than the Sâma singers chant) the Hotar acquires all that he (the sacrificer) has beyond his own self on this earth, (i. e. all his cattle, children, fortune, &c.)

Bṛhati metre with the exception of the two last which are kakubha (a variety of the Bṛhati). They are put together in the Sâmay. Sâdh. 2, 99-104. The two first of them, enā vo agnim (2, 99-100) are addressed to Agni, the third and fourth, praty adars'y āyatyā (101-102) to Ushas, and the fifth and sixth, imā u vām divishṭaya (103-104) to the Asvins. The Stoma required for singing it, is the trivṛt parivartini (see page 237). Two verses are made three by means of the repetition of the latter padas. This Sâman is chanted just like the verses of the Rathantaram, which are in the same metre. It follows throughout the musical arrangement of the Rathantaram. The musical accents, the crescendos, and decrescendos, the stobhas, i. e. musical flourishes, and the finales (nidhana) are the same. Both are for the purpose of chanting equally divided into five parts, viz. Prastāva, Udgitha, Pratihāra, Upadrava, and Nidhana (see page 198). For instance, the Prastāva or prelude commences in both in the low tone, and rises only at the last syllable (at no in the noṇumo of the Rathantaram, and at the so in the namaso of the first Sâdhli Stotra); at the end of the Prastāva of both there is the Stobha, i. e. flourish va. At the end of the Upadrava both have the Stobhas vā hū vā. The finale is in both throughout, as, in the rising tone.—(Sâma prayoga and Oral information.)

SECOND CHAPTER.

(The As'vina Shastra. The beginning day of the Gavām ayanam. The use of the Rathantara on Brihat Sāmans and their kindreds. The Mahāvratā day of the Sattra.)<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The As'vin Shastra is one of the longest recitations by the Hotar. It is only a modification of the Prātaranuvāka. Its principal parts are the same as those of the Prātaranuvāka, the Agneya hota, Ushasya kratu, and As'vina kratu (see page 111), i. e. three sets of hymns and verses in seven kinds of metre, addressed to Agni, Ushās, and the As'vins, which deities rule at the end of the night and at the very commencement of the day. In addition to the three kratus of the Prātaranuvāka, in the As'vina Shastra, there are verses addressed to other deities, chiefly the sun, repeated. Before commencing to repeat it the Hotar (not the Adhvaryu) must sacrifice thrice a little melted butter, and eat the rest of it. These three oblations are given to Agni, Ushās, and the two As'vins. Each is accompanied with a Yajus-like mantra. That one addressed to Agni is

अग्निरज्जी गायत्रेण वृन्दसा तमश्यां तमन्वारभे तस्यै मामवतु त स्वाहा । “Agni is driving with the Gâyatri metre (this metre being 1 carriage), might I reach him; I hold him; may this (melted butter) help me to him; Svîhâ to him.” The mantras repeated for the Agya offerings to Ushās and the As'vins differ very little. उ
अज्विनो वैश्वमेन वृन्दसा तमश्यां तमन्वारभे तस्यै मामवतु त
स्वाहा । अश्विनावज्विनौ आगतेन वृन्दसा तावश्यां तावन्वार ताभ्यां मामवतु ताभ्यां स्वाहा. (As'v. S'r. S. G, 5.) After having eaten the rest of the melted butter, he touches water only, but does not rinse his mouth in the usual way (by achamana). He then sits down behind his Dhishnya (fire-place) in a peculiar posture representing an eagle who is just about flying up. He draws up his two legs, puts both his knees close to each other, and touches the earth with his toes. I saw a priest, who had once repeated the As'vin Shastra (there are scarcely more than half a dozen Brahmins living all over India who actually have repeated it), make the posture with great facility, but I found it difficult to imitate it well.

The whole As'vina Shastra comprises a thousand Brihati verses. The actual number of verses is, however, larger. All verses in whatever metre they are, are reduced to Brihatis by counting the aggregate number of syllables and dividing them by 36 (of so many syllables consists the Brihati). The full account is cast up in the Kaushitaki Brâhmanam, 18, 3.

7.

(The marriage of Prajâpati's daughter Sûrya. The Asvina Shastra was the bridal gift. In what way the Hotar has to repeat it. Its beginning verse.)

Prajâpati gave his daughter Sûrya Sâvitri<sup>2</sup> in

The first verse of the Shastra is mentioned in the text. It is to be repeated thrice, and to be joined, without stopping, to the first verse of the Gayatri part of the Agnya kratu (एतयाग्नेयं गायचमुप-मंतनुयात्. Asv. Sr. S. 6, 5). After the opening verse which stands by itself altogether, just as the opening verse in the Prâtaranuvâka, the three kratus or liturgies of the Prâtaranuvâka (âgneya, ushasya, and asvina) are repeated. These form the body of the Asvina Shastra. Each kratu is preceded by the Stotriya Pragatha, i. e. that couple of verses of the Sandhi Stotra (see page 266) which refers to that duty, to which the respective kratu is devoted. So the âgneya kratu, i. e. the series of hymns and verses, addressed to Agni, in seven different kinds of metre, is preceded by the first couple of verses of the Sandhi Stotra, which are, enâ ro agnim namasâ (Sâm. Samh. 2, 99-100); the ushasya kratu is preceded by praty u adâs'y âyati (Sâm. Samh. 2, 101, 102), the deity being Ushâs, and the asvina-kratu by uma u vâm divishîlaya (Sâm. Samh. 2, 103-104) being addressed to the two Asvins. Each couple of these verses is to be read a triplet, by repeating the last pada several times, just as the soma singers do. (बार्हतास्त्रयस्तृचाः। सोत्रियाः प्रगाथा व। गन्पुरसादनुदैवतं स्वस्य कन्दसे यथा सुतं शंसन्. Asv. 6, 5).

The Hotar must repeat less than a thousand verses before sunrise नह्शिवमभोदेतोः) After sunrise he repeats the verses addressed to Sûrya, which all are mentioned in the Aitareya Brâhmanam, as well as all other remaining verses of the Asvina Shastra. The whole order of the several parts of this Shastra is more clearly stated in the Kaushîtaki Brâhm. (18, 2), than in the Aitareya. The verses addressed to Indra follow after the Sûrya verses (4, 10). At the end of the Shastra there are two Purohuvâkyâs and two Yajyâs, as there are two Asvins.

The Asvina Shastra is, as one may see from its constituent parts, Prâtaranuvâka, or early morning prayer, including the worship of the rising sun, and a Shastra accompanying a Soma libation. It follows the Sandhi Stotra at the end of the Atirâtra, and is repeated as the Shastra belonging to this Stotra. To the fact of its containing far more verses than the Sandhi Stotra, the term atirâtrâsti, i. e. "he repeats more verses" (used in 4, 6) refers.

marriage to the king Soma. All the gods came to the marriage. Prajâpati formed according to the model of a vahatu, i. e. things (such as turmeric powder, &c. to be carried before the paranymphe), this thousand (of verses), which is called the As'vin (Shastra). What falls short of (arcâk) one thousand verses, is no more the As'vin's. This is the reason that the Hotar ought to repeat only a thousand verse or he might repeat more. He ought to eat ghee before he commences repeating. Just as in this world a cart or a carriage goes well if smeared (with oil) thus his repeating proceeds well if he be smeared (with ghee, by eating it). Having taken the posture of an eagle when starting up the Hotar should recite (when commencing) the call s'omsâvom (i. e. I should commence repeating the As'vin Shastra).

The gods could not agree as to whom this (thousand verses) should belong, each saying, "Let it mine." Not being able to agree (to whom it should belong), they said, "Let us run a race for it. He of who will be the winner shall have it." They made the sun which is above Agni, the house-father (above the Gârhapatya fire<sup>3</sup>), the goal. That is the reason that the As'vin Shastra commences with a verse addressed to Agni, viz. agnir hotû grihapatih (6,15,1).

According to the opinion of some (theologians) the Hotar should (instead of this verse) commence the recitation of the As'vin Shastra with agnim manye pitaram (10, 7, 3); for they say, he recited the goal by means of the first verse through the word contained in its fourth pada: divi s'ukram yijât sûryasya, i. e. the splendour of the sun in heaven which deserves worship. But this opinion is not be attended to. (If one should observe a Hotar commencing the As'vina Shastra with the verse agnim manaye) one should say to him, "if (a Shastra) has been commenced with repeatedly mentioning agni<sup>4</sup> fire, the Hotar will (ultimately) fall into the fire (be burnt by it)." Thus it always happens. Thence the Hotar ought to commence with the verse: agnir hotâ grihapatih. This verse contains in the terms grihapati house-father, and janima generations, the propitiation (of the word agni fire, with which it commences, and is therefore not dangerous) for attaining to the full age. He who has such a knowledge attains to his full age (of one hundred years).

<sup>3</sup> That is to say, they started when running the race from Gârhapatya fire, and ran up as far as the sun, which was the (kâshthâ).

The race run by the gods for obtaining the As'vina Shastra as a prize.)

Among (all) these deities who were running the race, Agni was with his mouth (the flames) in advance (all others) after they had started. The As'vins (closely) followed him, and said to him, "Let us both be winners of this race." Agni consented, under the condition that he should also have a share in it (the As'vina Shastra). They consented, and made room also for him in this (As'vina Shastra). This is the reason that there is in the As'vina Shastra a series of verses addressed to Agni.

The As'vins (closely) followed Ushâs. They said to her, "Go aside, that we both may be winners of the race." She consented, under the condition that they should give her also a share in it (the As'vina Shastra). They consented, and made room also for her in it. This is the reason that in the As'vina Shastra a series of verses is addressed to Ushâs.

The As'vins (closely) followed Indra. They said to him, "Maghavan, we both wish to be winners of this race." They did not dare to say to him, "go aside." He consented, under the condition that he should also obtain a share in it (the As'vina Shastra). They consented, and made room also for him. This is the reason that in the As'vina Shastra there is a series of verses addressed to Indra.

Thus the As'vins were winners of the race, and obtained (the prize). This is the reason that it (the prize) is called As'vinam (i. e. the As'vina Shastra). He who has such a knowledge obtains what he may wish for.

They ask, Why is this (Shastra) called As'vinam notwithstanding there being in it verses addressed to Agni, Ushâs, and Indra? (The answer is) that As'vins were the winners of this race, they obtained it (the prize). This is the reason that it is called the As'vina Shastra. He who has such a knowledge obtains what he may wish for.

9.

(What animals were yoked to the carriages of the gods when they were running the race for the As'vina Shastra. The verses addressed to Sûrya in the Shastra.)

Agni ran the race with a carriage drawn by mules. When driving them he burnt their wombs; then they do not conceive.

Ushâs ran the race with cows of a reddish color thence it comes that after the arrival of Ushâs (Dawn) there is a reddish colour shining as it were (spread over the eastern direction) which is the characteristic of Ushâs.

Indra ran the race with a carriage drawn by horses. Hence a very noisy spectacle (represented by the noise made by horses which draw a carriage) is the characteristic of the royal caste, which is Indra's.

The As'vins were the winners of the race with a carriage drawn by donkeys ; they obtained (the prize). Hence (on account of the excessive efforts to arrive at the goal) the donkey lost its (original) velocity, came devoid of milk, and the slowest among all animals used for drawing carriages. The As'vins, however, did not deprive the sperm of the ass of its (inherited) vigour. This is the reason that the male (râji) has two kinds of sperm (to produce mules from a mare, and asses from a female ass). ●

Regarding this (the different parts which make up the As'vina Shastra) they say, "The Hotar ought to repeat, just as he does for Agni, Ushâs, and the As'vins also, verses in all seven metres for Sûrya. There are seven worlds of the gods. (By doing so) he prospers in all (seven) worlds."

This opinion ought not to be attended to. He ought to repeat (for Sûrya) verses in three metres only. For there are three worlds which are threefold. (If the Hotar repeats for Sûrya verses in three metres only, this is done) for obtaining possession of these worlds.

Regarding this (the order in which the verses addressed to Sûrya are to be repeated) they say, "The Hotar ought to commence (his recitation of the Sûrya verses) with ud u tyam jâtavedesam (1, 50, in the Gâyatri metre). But this opinion is not to be attended to. (To commence with this verse) is just as to miss the goal when running. He ought to commence with sûryo no divas jâtu (10, 158, 1, in the Gâyatri metre). (If he do so) he is just as one who reaches the goal when running. He repeats : ud u tyam as the second hymn.

The Trishtubh hymn is, chitram devânâm ud âga (1, 115). For that one (the sun) rises as the chitra devânâm, i. e. as the manifestation of the god. Thence he repeats it.

The hymn is, namo mitrasya varuṇasya (10, 3). In this (hymn) there is a pada (the fourth of the fifth verse, sūryāya s'āṁsata) which contains a blessing (ās'ih). By means of it the Hotar imparts a blessing to himself, as well as to the sacrificer.

10

(The verses which follow those addressed to Sūrya the As'vina Shashtra must bear some relation to Sūrya and the Bṛihati metre. The Pragâthas to Indra. The text of the Rathantara Sâman. The Pragâtha to Mitrâvaruṇa. The two verses to Heaven and Earth. The Dvipadâ for Nirriti.)

Regarding this (the recitations for Sūrya) they say, Sūrya is not to be passed over in the recitation; nor is the Bṛihati metre (of the As'vina Shashtra) to be passed over. Should the Hotar pass over Sūrya, he would fall beyond (the sphere of) Brahma splendour (and consequently lose it). Should he pass over the Bṛihati, he would fall beyond (the sphere of the) vital airs (and consequently die).

He repeats the Pragâtha, addressed to Indra, indra kratum na (7, 32, 26) i. e. "Carry, O Indra, our (sacrificial) performance through, just as a father does to his sons (by assisting them). Teach, O thou who art invoked by many, that we may at this turn (of the night) reach alive the (sphere of) light." The word "light" (jyotis) in this verse

<sup>5</sup> This verse evidently refers to the Atirâtra feast, for which occasion it was in all likelihood composed by Vasishṭha. Sây. commentary on this passage in the Ait. Br. takes the same view of it. It forms part of the As'vina Shashtra which is repeated at that one (the sun). In this way he does not pass over the sun.

By repeating a Bârhata Pragâtha he does not pass over the Bṛihatî. By repeating the principal text of the Rathantara Sâman (which is in the Bṛihat metre, viz. abhi trâ s'ûra, 7, 32, 22-23), according to whose tune the Sâma singers chant the Sandhi Stotra for the As'vina Shastra, he does not overpraise the Bṛihatî. This is done in order to have provided (for the Sandhi Stotra) its principal text (lit. its romô). In the words of the Rathantara Sâman, sînam asya jagatah svardṛis'am, i. e. the ruler of his world who sees the sky, there is an allusion made to Sûrya by "svardṛis'am," i. e. who sees the sky. By repeating it he does not pass the sun. Nor does he by its (the Rathantaram) being a Bârhata Pragâtha pass over the Bṛihatî.

He repeats a Maitrâvaruṇa Pragâtha, viz. bahavaḥ ūrachakshase (7, 66, 10). For Mitra is the day, and Varuṇa the night. He who performs the Atirâtra commences (his sacrifice) with both day and night. By repeating a Maitrâvaruṇa Pragâtha the Hotar places the sacrificer in day and night. By the words irachakshase he does not overpraise Sûrya. The verse being a Bṛihatî Pragâtha, he does not pass over the Bṛihatî.

He repeats two verses addressed to Heaven and Earth, viz. mahî dyâuḥ prithivî (1, 22, 13), and te hi prithivî vis'vas'ambhuva (1, 160, 1). Heaven and Earth are two places for a firm footing; Earth being the firm footing here, and Heaven there (in the other world). By thus repeating two verses ad-

ed of the night. Kratu means the Atirâtra feast; for Atirâtra is actually called a kratu; yâman is the last watch of the night. That Atirâtra was well known to the great Rishis, we may learn from the well known "praise of the frogs" (7, 103), which is by no means one of the latest hymns, as some scholars have supposed.

dressed to Heaven and Earth, he puts the sacrifice in two places on a firm footing. By the words: deva dharmanā sūryaḥ sūchiḥ (in the last pada of 160, 1) i. e. "the divine brilliant Sūrya passes regularly between the two goddesses (i. e. Heaven and Earth)," he does not pass over Sūrya. One of the verses being in the Gāyatrī, the other in the Jagatī metre, which make two Brihatīs,<sup>6</sup> he does not pass over the Brihatī.

He repeats the Dvipadā verse: vis'vasya dṛmrichayasya (not to be found in the Saṁhitā, but in the Brāhmaṇam) i. e. may she who is the ruler of all that is born and moves (dṛmrichaya) not be angry (with us) nor visit us (with destruction). They (the theologians) have called the As'vina Shāstra a funeral pile of words (chitaidha). For when the Hotar is about to conclude (this Shāstra), Nirriti (the goddess of destruction) lurking with her cords, thinking to cast them round (the Hotar). (To prevent this) Brihaspati saw the Dvipadā verse. By its words "may she not be angry (with us), nor visit us (with destruction)" wrested from Nirriti's hands her cords and put them down. Thus the Hotar wrests also from the hands of Nirriti her cords, and puts them down when repeating this Dvipadā verse, by which means he comes off in safety. (He does so) for attaining to his full age. He who has such a knowledge attains to full age. By the words dṛmrichayasya janmanah, i. e. "what is born and moves," he does not pass over the sun in his recitation, for that one (the sun) moves (marchayati) as it were.

As regards the Dvipadā verse, it is the metre corresponding to man (on account of his two padas, i.

<sup>6</sup> The Brihatī contains thirty-six syllables, the Gāyatrī twenty-four, and the Jagatī forty-eight. Two Brihatīs make seventy-two, and one Gāyatrī and Jagatī make together seventy-two syllables.

feet). Thus it comprises all metres (for the two-legged man is using them all). In this way the Hotar does not (by repeating the Dvipadâ) pass over the Bṛhatī.

11.

(The concluding verses of the As'vin Shashtra. The two Yājyâs of it. In what metre they ought to be.)

The Hotar concludes with a verse addressed to Brahmaṇaspati. For Brahma is Bṛhaspati. By repeating such a verse he puts the sacrificer in the Brahma: He who wishes for children and cattle should conclude with, evâ pitre viś'vâderâya (4,50,6). For on account of its containing the words "O Bṛhaspati, might we be blessed with children and strong men, might we become owners of riches," that man becomes blessed with children, cattle and riches, and strong men, at whose sacrifice there is a Hotar, knowing that he must conclude with this verse (in order to obtain this object wished for).

He who wishes for beauty and acquirement of sacred knowledge ought to conclude with, bṛhaspate atiyad (2, 23, 15). Here the word ati, i. e. beyond, means that he acquires more of sacred knowledge than other men do. The term dyumat (in the second pada) means "acquirement of sacred knowledge," and vibhâti means, that the sacred knowledge shines everywhere, as it were. The term didayat (in the third pada) means, that the sacred knowledge has been shining forth (in the Brahmans). The term chitra (in the fourth pada) means, that the sacred knowledge is, as it were, apparent (chitram).

He at whose sacrifice there is a Hotar knowing that he must conclude with this verse, becomes endowed with sacred knowledge and famous for sanctity. Thence a Hotar who has such a knowledge ought to conclude with this Brahmaṇaspati verse.

By repeating it he does not pass over the sun. The Trishṭubh<sup>7</sup> when repeated thrice, comprises 4 metres. In this way he does not pass over the Brihatî (by repeating this Trishṭubh).

He ought to pronounce the formula Vaushat along with a verse in the Gâyatrî, and one in the Trishṭubh metre. Gâyatrî is the Brahma, and Trishṭubh is strength. By doing so he joins strength to the Brahma.

He at whose sacrifice there is a Hotar knows that he (in order to obtain the objects mentioned) must pronounce the formula Vaushat<sup>8</sup> with a verse in the Gâyatrî, and one in the Trishṭubh metre, becoming endowed with sacred knowledge and strength, and famous for sanctity. (The Trishṭubh verse is) asvî râyunû yuvam (3, 58, 7); (the Gâyatrî is) ub pibatam (1, 46, 15).

(There is another way of pronouncing the formula Vaushat.)

- He ought to pronounce the formula Vaushat along with a verse in the Gâyatrî, and one in the Trishṭubh metre. For Gâyatrî is Brahma, and Virât is food. By doing so he joins food to the Brahma.

He at whose sacrifice there is a Hotar knows that he must pronounce the formula Vaushat along with a verse in the Gâyatrî, and one in the Trishṭubh metre, becoming endowed with sacred knowledge, and famous for sanctity and eats Brahma food (i. e. pib food). Therefore one who has such a knowledge ought to pronounce the formula Vaushat along with a verse in the Gâyatrî, and one in the Trishṭubh metre. They are, pra vâm andhâñsi (7, 68, 2, Virât) and, ub pibatam (1, 46, 15, Gâyatrî).

<sup>7</sup> The verse brihaspate ati is in the Trishṭubh metre. On account of its being the last verse of the Shâstra, it is to be repeated thrice.

<sup>8</sup> That is to say, he should then make the Yajyâs; for only at that occasion the formula vaushat is pronounced.

12.

(The Chaturviṃśa<sup>9</sup> day of the sacrificial session, called Gavām. Ayanam.)

On this day<sup>10</sup> (which follows the Atirâtra ceremony) they celebrate the Chaturviṃśa (Stoma). It is the beginning day (of the year during which the sacrificial session is to last). For by this day they begin the year, and also the Stomas and metres, and (the worship of) the deities. If they do not commence (the Sattrâ) on this day, the metres have no (proper) beginning and the (worship of the) deities is not commenced. Thence this day is called ârambhāyā, i. e. the beginning day. On account of the Chaturviṃśa (twenty-four-fold) Stoma being used on it, it is (also) called Chaturviṃśa. There are twenty-four half months. (By beginning the Sattrâ with the Chaturviṃśa Stoma, i. e. the chant, consisting <sup>9</sup> This is the name of a day, and a Stoma, required at the Sattrâ or sacrificial session, called the gavām ayanam (see more about it, 4, 17). It lasts for a whole year of 360 days, and consists of the following parts. 1) The Atirâtra at the beginning. 2) The Chaturviṃśa or beginning day; it is called in the Aitareya Br. ârambhāyā, in the Tândya Br. (4, 2,) prâyanīya. 3) The periods of six days' performance (Shalaha) continued during five months so that always the four first Shalahas are Abhiplavas, and the fifth a Prishthya (see on these terms 4, 15-17). 4) In the sixth month there are three Abhiplava Shalahas, and one Prishthya Shalaha. 5) The Abhiplava day. 6) The three Svarasâman days. 7) The Vishuvan or central day which stands quite apart. 8) The three Svarasâman days again. 9) The Viśvajit day. 10) A Prishthya Shalaha, and three Abhiplava Shalahas. 11) One Prishthya Shalaha at the beginning, and four Abhiplavas during four months continuously. 12) In the last month (the twelfth of the Sattrâ) there are three Abhiplavas, one Gostoma, one Ayushtoma, and one Dasârâtra (the ten days of the Dvâdasâha). 13) The Mahâvrata day, which properly concludes the performance; it corresponds to the Chaturviṃśa at the beginning. 14) The concluding Atirâtra. See Asv. S'r. S. 11, 7.

<sup>10</sup> Ahaḥ has according to Sây. the technical meaning of the Soma ceremony, which is performed on every particular day of a sacrificial session.

of twenty-four verses), they commence the year divided into half months.

The Ukthya (performance of the Jyotishṭoma) takes place (on that day). For the ukthas (recitations) on cattle. (This is done) for obtaining cattle.

This (Ukthya sacrifice) has fifteen Stotras and fifteen Shastras.<sup>11</sup> (These make, if taken together, one month of thirty days.) By (performing) this (sacrifice) they commence the year as divided in months. This (Ukthya sacrifice) has 360 Stotra verses<sup>12</sup> as many as the year has days. By (performing) this (sacrifice) they commence the year divided into days.

They say, "the performance of this (first) ought to be an Agnishtōma. Agnishtōma is the year. For no other sacrifice save the Agnishtōma has kept (has been able to keep) this day (the performance of this day), nor developed its several parts (i. e. has given the power of performing all its several rites).

Should they perform (on the beginning day) the Agnishtōma, then the three Pavamāna Stotras<sup>13</sup> in the morning, midday, and evening libations are to be put in the Ashtâchatvâriṃśa Stoma (i. e. each of the Stotriya triplets is made to consist of forty-eight verses by means of repetition), and the other (nine) Stotras in the Chaturviṃśa Stoma. This makes (on the whole) 360 Stotriyas, as many as there are days (in the year). (By performing the Agnishtōma in this way) they commence the year as divided into days.

<sup>12</sup> Each of the fifteen Stotra triplets is made to consist of twenty-four verses by repetition according to the theory of the Chaturvîṃśa Stoma. 24 times 15 makes 360.

The Ukthya sacrifice should, however, be performed (on the beginning day of the Sattrā, not the Agnishtoma). (For) the sacrifice is wealth in cattle, the Sattrā is (also) wealth in cattle (and cattle is represented by the Ukthya). If all Stotras are put in the Chaturvīṃśā Stoma (as is the case when the Ukthya is performed), then this day becomes actually throughout a Chaturvīṃśā (twenty-four-fold). Thence the Ukthya sacrifice ought to be performed (on the beginning day of the Sattrā).

13.

(On the importance of the two Sāmāns, Rathantaram and Brihat. They are not to be used at the same time. The succession of the sacrificial days in the second half of the year is inverted.)

The two (principal) Sāmāns at the Sattrā are the Brihat and Rathantaram. These are the two boats of the sacrifice, landing it on the other shore in the celestial world). By means of them the sacrificers cross the year (just as one crosses a river). Brihat and Rathantara are the two feet (of the sacrifice); the performance of the day is the head. By means of the two feet, men gain their fortune (consisting in gold, jewels, &c.) which is to be put (as ornament) on their heads.

Brihat and Rathantaram are two wings; the performance of the day is the head. By means of these two wings they direct their heads to fortune, and dive into it.

Both these Sāmāns are not to be let off together. Those performers of the sacrificial session who would let off, so, would be floating from one shore to the other without being able to land anywhere), just as a boat whose cords are cut off, is floating from shore to shore. Should they let off the Rathantaram, then by means of the Brihat both are kept. Should he let off the Brihat, then by means of the Rathantaram both are kept.<sup>14</sup> (The same is the case with the other Sâma Prishthas.) Vairûpam<sup>15</sup> is the same as Brihat Vairâja<sup>16</sup> is the same as Brihat, Sâkvaram<sup>17</sup> is the same as Rathantaram, and Raivatam<sup>18</sup> is the same as Brihat.

Those who having such a knowledge begin a Sattrâ (sacrificial session) on this day, hold the (sacrificial) year in performing austerities, emptying the Soma draught, and preparing the Soma juice after having reached the year as divided into 12 months, months, and days.

<sup>14</sup> This refers to the so-called Sâma prishthas, i. e. combination of two different Sâmans, in such a way, that one forms the prishthâ (garbha), the other the embryo (garbha). This relationship of Sâmans is represented by repeating that set of verses which form the womb in the first and third turns (pariyâyas) of the Stomas (237-33), and that one which is the embryo, in the second turn. In this way the embryo is symbolically placed in the womb which surrounds it on both sides. The two Sâmans which generally form the prishthâ are the Brihat and Rathantaram. Both are not to be used at the same time; but only one of them. Both being the prishthâ which land the sacrificer on the other shore (bring him through the year in this world), they cannot be sent off at the same time; for the sacrificer would thus deprive himself of his conveyance. One of them is tied to this, the other to the other shore. If he landed on the other shore, he requires another boat to go back. Before the end of the year he cannot establish himself on the other shore, nor, as long as he is alive, on the shore of the celestial world. By going from one shore to the other, and returning to that which he started, he obtains a fair knowledge of the way, and provides himself with all that is required for being received and admitted on the other shore after the year is over, or the life has terminated.

When they (those who hold the Sattrā) begin the performance of the other part<sup>10</sup> (of the sacrifice), they lay down their heavy burden, for the heavy burden (if they are not released) breaks them down. Therefore, he who after having reached this (the central day of the yearly sacrificial session) by means of performing the ceremonies one after the other, begins (the second part of the sacrificial session) by inverting the order of the ceremonies, arrives safely at the end of the year.

14.

This Chaturviṃśā day is (the same as) the Mahāvratā<sup>20</sup> (the Nishkevalya Śhastra being the same as in the Mahāvratā sacrifice). By means of the Brihad-deva yam<sup>21</sup> the Hotar pours forth the seed. Thus he makes the seed (which is poured forth) by means of the Mahāvratā day produce offspring. For seed if sown every year is productive (every year). This is the reason, that (in both parts of the Sattrā) the <sup>10</sup> This sense is implied in the words ata ūrdhvam, "beyond this," i. e. beyond the ceremonies commencing on the ārambhamya day of the Sattrā. The first six months of the sacrificial session lasting in the year, are the first, the second six months the other turn; in the midst of both is the Vishuvan day (see 4, 18.), i. e. the equinox. After that day the same ceremonies begin anew, but in an inverted order, that is to say, what was performed immediately before the Vishuvan day, that is performed the day after it, &c.

<sup>20</sup> This sacrifice is described in the Aranyaka of the Rīgveda. It is devoted to generation, and includes, therefore, some very obscene rites. Its principal Śhastra is the Mahadukṭham, i. e. the great Śhastra, also called the Bṛhuti Śhastra. The Mahāvratā forms part of a Sattrā, celebrated on the day previous to the concluding Atnātrā, and is in the same position and importance as the Chaturviṃśā day after the beginning Atnātrā. The Brihad-deva hymn is required at the Atnātrā, vāya Śhastra of both. But instead of the Chaturviṃśā Stoma, a Panchaviṃśā (twenty-five-fold) Stoma is used at the Mahāvratā sacrifice. (See Aitar. Aranyaka 1, 2.)

He who having such a knowledge performs, after having reached the central day by performing the ceremonies one after the other, the ceremonies of the second part in an inverted order, using the Brihad-deva hymn also, reaches safely the end of the year.

He who knows this shore and that shore (of the stream of) the year, arrives safely on the other shore. The Atirâtra at the beginning (of the Sattra) is the shore (of the year), and the Atirâtra at the end (of the Sattra) is the other shore.

He who has such a knowledge, arrives safely at the end of the year. He who knows how to appropriate the year (according to half months, months and days), and how to disentangle himself from it (after having passed through it) arrives safely at the end of the year. The Atirâtra at the beginning is the appropriation, and that at the end is the disentanglement.

He who has such a knowledge, safely reaches the end of the year. He who knows the prâna (air inhaled) of the year and its apâna (air exhaled) safely reaches the end of the year. The Atirâtra at the beginning is its prâna, and the Atirâtra at the end is its apâna (udâna). He who has such a knowledge safely reaches the end of the year.

THIRD CHAPTER.

(The Shalâha and Vishuvan day of the Sattras and the performance of the days preceding and following the Vishuvan.)

15.

(The Tryaha and Shalâha, i. e. periods of three and six days at the Sattra. The Abhiplava.)

They (those who hold the sacrificial session) p form (now) the Jyotish-Go and Ayush-Stomas. This world is the Jyotis (light), the airy region the Go Stoma, that world âyus (life). The same Stomas (in the first three days out of the six) are observed in the latter three days. (In the first) three days the order of the Stomas is), Jyotish-Go and Ayush Stomas. (In the latter) three days (the order is) Go-Ayush-Jyotish-Stomas. (According to the position of the Jyotish Stoma in both parts) the Jyotish Stomas on both sides facing (one another) in the world.

They perform the Shalaha (six days' Soma sacrifice), so that in both its parts (each consisting of three days) there is the Jyotish Stoma (in the first at the beginning, in the latter at the end). By doing so they gain a firm footing in both worlds, in this one and that one, and walk in both.

Abhiplava Shalaha<sup>1</sup> is the revolving wheel of the gods. Two Agnishtomas form the circumference of this wheel; the four Ukthyas in the midst are in the nave. By means of this revolving (wheel of the gods) one can go to any place one may choose. Thus he who has such a knowledge safely reaches the end of the year. He who has a (proper) knowledge of the first Shalaha safely reaches the end of the year, and so does he who has a (proper) knowledge of the second, third, fourth, and fifth shalahas, i. e. all the five Shalahas of the month.

In the meaning of the celebration of five Shalahas during the course of a month.)

They celebrate the first Shalaha. There are six seasons. This makes six days. Thus they secure <sup>1</sup>The Sattra is divided into periods of six days, of which period a month has five. Such a period is called a Shalaha, i. e. six the year (for themselves) as divided into seasons, gain a firm footing in the several seasons of the year.

They celebrate the second Shalaha. This man (in addition to the previous six days) twelve days. There are twelve months. Thus they secure the year as divided into months, and gain a firm footing in the several months of the year.

They celebrate the third Shalaha. This man (in addition to the previous twelve days) eight days. This makes twice nine. There are nine vital airs, and nine celestial worlds. Thus they obtain the nine vital airs, and reach the nine celestial worlds, and gaining a firm footing in the vital airs and the celestial worlds, they walk there.

They celebrate the fourth Shalaha. This man twenty-four days. There are twenty-four half months. Thus they secure the year as divided into months, and, gaining a firm footing in its several months, they walk in them.

They celebrate the fifth Shalaha. This man thirty days. The Virât metre has thirty syllables. The Virât is food. Thus they procure virât (food) in every month.

Those who wished for food, were (once) hold a sacrificial session. By obtaining in every month the Virât (the number thirty), they become possessed of food for both worlds, this one and that one.

17.

(Story of the sacrificial session, held by the (different kinds of the great, Sattras, such as Garâm ayanam, Adityânâm ayanam, and An sām ayanam.)

They hold the Garâm ayanam, i. e. the sacrificial session, called "cow's walk." The cows are days' sacrificial work. The five times repetition within a month abhiplava.

Adityas (gods of the months). By holding the session called the "cow's walk," they also hold the walk of the Adityas.

The cows being desirous of obtaining hoofs and horns, held (once) a sacrificial session. In the eighth month (of their sacrifice) they obtained hoofs and horns. They said, "we have obtained fulfilment of that wish for which we underwent the initiation into the sacrificial rites. Let us rise (the sacrifice being finished)." When they arose they had horns. They, however, thought, "let us finish the year," and recommenced the session. On account of their distrust, their horns went off, and they consequently became hornless (tûpara). They (continuing their sacrificial session) produced vigour (îrj). Thenceforth (having been sacrificing for twelve months and) having secured all the seasons, they rose (again) at the end. For they had produced the vigour (to reproduce horns, hoofs, &c. when decaying). Thus the cows made themselves beloved by all (the whole world), and are beautified (decorated) by all. <sup>2</sup>

He who has such a knowledge makes himself loved by every one, and is decorated by every one.

The Adityas and Angiras were jealous of one another to who should (first) enter the celestial world, each saying, "we shall first enter." The Adityas entered first the celestial world, then the Angiras, for (they had been waiting for) sixty years.

The performance of the sacrificial session called gavânam ayanam agrees in several respects with Gavâm ayanam. There is an Atirâtra at the beginning, and on the Chaturviñśa day the Ukthya is performed; all the (five) Abhiplava Shalahas<sup>3</sup> comprised in it; the order of the days is different (that is to say, the performance of the first, second days, &c. of the Abhiplava are different from those of the Gavâm ayanam). This is the Adityânâm ayanam.

It is an Indian custom preserved up to this day to decorate cows, &c. on the birth-day of Krishṇa (Gokul ashtami).

The Atirâtra at the beginning, the Ukthya on Chaturvîṃśa day, all (five) Abhiplava performed with the Prishthas, the performance of the ceremonies of the several days (of the Abhiplava) being different (from the Gavâm ayanam, &c.): this is Angirasâm ayanam.

The Abhiplava Shalaha is like the royal road, smooth way to heaven. The Prishthya Shalaha is a great pathway which is to be trodden everywhere in heaven. When they avail themselves of both roads they will not suffer any injury, and obtain the fulfilment of all desires which are attainable by both, Abhiplava Shalaha and the Prishthya Shalaha.<sup>4</sup>

18.

(The Ekaviṃś'a or Vishuvan day.)

They perform the ceremonies of the Ekaviṃś'a day which is the equator, dividing the year (into equal parts). By means of the performance of this day the gods had raised the sun up to the heaven. This Ekaviṃś'a day on which the Divâkīrtya is performed.

<sup>3</sup> In the Gavâm ayanam there are only four Abhiplava Shalahas but in the Adityânâm ayanam there are all five Abhiplava Shalahas required within a month. The last (fifth) Shalaha of the Gavâm ayanam is a Prishthya, that is one containing the Prishthas. The difference between an Abhiplava Shalaha, and a Prishthya Shalaha, is, that during the latter the Sâma Prishthas required, that is to say, that on every day at the midday libation the Stomas are performed with a combination of two different Sâmans in the way described above (page 282), whilst this is wanting in the Abhiplava.

<sup>4</sup> In the Gavâm ayanam both the Abhiplava Shalaha and the Prishthya Shalaha are required. Thence the sacrificers who perform the Gavâm ayanam, avail themselves of both the roads leading to heaven.

(was produced) is preceded by ten days,<sup>5</sup> and followed by ten such days, and is in the midst (of both periods). On both sides it is thus put in a Virât (the number ten). Being thus put in a Virât (in the number ten) on both sides, this (Ekaviṃśa, i. e. the 25th) becomes not disturbed in his course through these worlds.

The gods being afraid of the sun falling from the sky, supported him by placing beneath three celestial worlds to serve as a prop. The (three) Stomas<sup>6</sup> (used at the three Svarasâman days which precede the Vishuvan day) are the three celestial worlds. They were afraid, lest he (the sun) should fall beyond them. They then placed over him three worlds (also) in order to give him a prop from above. The (three) Stomas (used at the three Svarasâman days which follow the Vishuvan day) are the three worlds. Thus there are before (the Vishuvan day) three seventeen-fold Stomas (one on each of the preceding Svarasâman days), and after it (also) three seventeen-fold Stomas. In the midst of them there is the Ekaviṃśa day (representing the sun) held on both sides by the Svarasâman days. On account of his being held by the three Svarasâmans (representing the three worlds below and the three above the sun) the sun is not disturbed in his course through these worlds.

The gods being afraid of the sun falling down from the sky, supported him by placing beneath the highest worlds. The Stomas are the highest worlds. The gods being afraid of his falling beyond them being turned upside down, supported him by placing above him the highest worlds (also). Stomas are the highest worlds.

<sup>5</sup> The ten days which precede the Ekaviṃśa are, the three Svarasâmanah, Abhijit, and a Shalaha (a period of six days). The same days follow, but so, that Svarasâmanah, which were the last three days before the Ekaviṃśa, are the first three days after that day, &c.

Now there are (as already mentioned) three seven-fold Stomas before, and three after (the Vishu day). If two of them are taken together, thirty-four-fold Stomas are obtained. Among Stomas the thirty-four-fold is the last.<sup>7</sup>

The sun being placed among these (highest worlds) as their ruler, burns with (his rays). Owing to position he is superior to everything in creation has been and will be, and shines beyond all that in creation. (In the same way this Vishuvan day is superior (to all days which precede or follow).

It is on account of his being prominent as ornament, that the man who has such a knowledge becomes superior (to all other men).

19.

(The Svarasâmans. Abhijit. Vis'vajat. Vishuva

They perform the ceremonies of the Svarasâ days. These (three) worlds are the Svarasâ days. On account of the sacrificers pleasing the worlds by means of the Svarasâmans, they are called Svarasâman (from asprîṇvan,<sup>8</sup> they are pleased).

By means of the performance of the Svarasâ days they make him (the sun) participate in the worlds.

<sup>9</sup> This etymology is certainly fanciful; Svara cannot be to the root sprîṇ, a modification of prî, to love. The name likely means, "The Sâmans of the tones." This appears to refer to peculiarities in their intonations. These Sâmans being required for the great Sattras, which have been out of use for at least a thousand years, it is difficult now to ascertain the exact nature of the recital of these Sâmans.

The gods were afraid lest these seventeen-fold Stomas (employed at the Svarasâman days) might, on account of their being all the same, and not protected by being covered (with other Stomas), break down. Wishing that they should not slip down, they surrounded them, below with all the Stomas, and above with all the Prishthas. That is the reason that on the Abhijit day which precedes (the Svarasâman days) all Stomas are employed, and on the Visvajit day which follows (the Svarasâman days after the Vishuvan day is over) all Prishthas are used. These (Stomas and Prishthas) surround the seventeen-fold Stomas (of the Svarasâman days) in order to keep them (in their proper place) and to prevent them from breaking down.

The gods were (again) afraid of the sun falling from the sky. They pulled him up and tied him with five ropes. <sup>11</sup> The ropes are the Divâkîrtya sâmans, <sup>12</sup> among which there is the Mahâdivâ-irtya Prishtha; <sup>13</sup> the others are, the Vikarna, the brahma, the Bhâsa, <sup>14</sup> and the Agnishtoma <sup>15</sup> Sâma;

<sup>12</sup> Sây. explains the words by: दिवैव षडनीयानि पंच सामानि e. the five Sâmans which are to be repeated only at day. This explanation may appear at first somewhat strange, but it is quite correct. For the employment of the different tunes is regulated by different parts of the day. Up to this time certain tunes (râga, word sâman being only the older denomination for the same) are allowed to be chanted only at day, such as the Sâranga, urâsâranga, &c., others are confined to the early morning, others to the night.

<sup>15</sup> The Agnishtoma Sâma is not especially mentioned by Sây. He only says in the same manner in which the Pandits up to this day the Brihat and Rathantara Sâmans are required the two Pavamâna Stotras (the Pavamâna a midday, and the Arbhava-pavamâna at the evening libations).

Thus they pulled up the sun tying him with cords<sup>16</sup> in order to keep him and to prevent him falling.

(On this day, the Vishuvan) he ought to recite the Prâtaranuvâka after the sun has risen; for thus all prayers and recitations belonging to that particular day become repeated during the day (the day thus becomes divâkirtyam).

As the sacrificial animal belonging to the evening libation (of that day) and being dedicated to the sun, they ought to kill such one as might be found to be quite white (without any speck of another colour). For this day is (a festival) for the sun.

He ought to repeat twenty-one Sâmidhenî verses (instead of fifteen or seventeen, as is the case on other occasions); for this day is actually the twenty-first (being provided with the twenty-one Stoma).

After having repeated fifty-one or fifty-two verses of the Shastra (of this day), he puts the Nivid to explain such things: येन साम्नाग्निहोमसंस्था समाप्यते त होमसाम्नाम् Now the Sâman with which the Agnishtoma becomes completed, i.e. the last of the twelve Stotras, is the so-called Yajñâ Yajñâ Sâman: yajñâ yajñâ vo agnaye (Sâm. Sam. 2 53-54). This is expressly called (in the Sâma prayogas) the Agnishtoma, being the characteristic Sâman of the Agnishtoma.

<sup>16</sup> The five tunes or Sâmans representing the five cords are Mahâdivâkirtyam, the Vikarna, Brahna, and Bhâsa tunes, regarded only as one on account of their containing the same as the Agnishtoma Sâma, and the Brihat, and Rathantaram.

<sup>17</sup> The number fifty-one or fifty-two depends on the circumstance of the Nivid hymn, âtrasya nu viryâni, either eight or nine, might be recited before the insertion of the Nivid. The rule is addressed to Indra) in the midst (of the hymn indrasya nu nyāni, 1, 32). After this (the repetition of the Nivid) he recites as many verses (as he had recited before putting the Nivid, i. e. fifty-one or fifty-two).

(In this way the total number of verses is brought above a hundred.) The full life of man is a hundred years; he has (also) a hundred powers and a hundred senses. (By thus repeating above a hundred verses) the Hotar thus puts the sacrificer in the possession of his full life, strength, and senses.

20.

The Haṁsavati verse or the Tārکشya triplet to be repeated in the Dūrohaṇam way. Explanation of both the Haṁsavati and Tārکشya.)

He repeats the Dūrohaṇam as if he were ascending (height). For the heaven-world is difficult to ascend (Dūrohaṇam). He who has such a knowledge ascends the celestial world.

As regards the word dūrohaṇam, that one who burns (the sun) has a difficult passage up (to place) as well as any one who goes there (i. e. the sacrificer who aspires after heaven).

By repeating the Dūrohaṇam, he thus ascends to the sun.

He ascends with a verse addressed to the haṁsa (with a haṁsavati).<sup>18</sup> (The several terms of the haṁ- the midday libation the Nivid should be inserted after the first of the hymn has been exceeded by about one verse. The song question has fifteen verses. The insertion can, therefore, not take place before the eighth and not after the ninth.

This verse forms the Dūrohaṇam mantra. Its repetition is described by Aśval. Śr. S. 8, 2, in the following way:

मातृय दूरोहणं रोहसः श्रुचिषदिति पञ्चोऽर्धर्चश्चलिपद्या- यमनवानमुक्त्वा प्रणुत्यावस्येत्पुनलिपद्यार्धर्चशः पञ्च एव सप्तम-दूरोहणं. i. e. after having called somsāvom, he should repeat savati are now explained). This (Aditya, the sun) is "the swan sitting in light." He is the "V" (shining being) sitting in the air." He is the "He sitting on the Vēdi." He is the "guest sitting in the house." He is "sitting among men." He "in the most excellent place" (varasat), for that place in which sitting he burns, is the most excellent seats. He is "sitting in truth" (ritasat). He "sitting in the sky" (vyomasat), for the sky is among the places that one where sitting he burns. He "born from the waters" (abjât), for in the morning comes out of the waters, and in the evening he enters the waters. He is "born from cows" (gô). He is "born from truth." He is "born from mountain" (he appears on a mountain, as it were when rising). He is "truth" (ritam).

He (the sun) is all these (forms). Among metres (sacred verses) this (haṁsavati verse) is it were, his most expressive and clearest to the ear. Thence the Hotar should, wherever he makes Dûrohanam, make it with the Haṁsavati verse.

He who desires heaven, should, however, begin it with the Târکشya verse (10, 178, 1). For Târکشya showed the way to the Gâyatri when she the form of an eagle, abstracted the Soma (from heaven). When he thus uses the Târکشya

• the verse haṁsavati s'uchishat (4, 40, 5) in the Dûrohana way by padas, then by half verses, then taking three padas together, finally the whole verse without stopping, and conclude (this repetition) with the syllable om. Then he ought to repeat again commencing with three padas taken together, then half verses (and ultimately) by padas, which makes the seventh repetition (of the same verse). This is the Dûrohanam. See Ait. Br. 4. The Maitrâvaruṇa has it to repeat always on the sixth day of Abhiplava Śaḥabhas. On the Vishuvani day it is repeated by Hotar. The haṁsavati forms part of a hymn addressed to Dadîravan, which is a name of the sun; haṁsa, i. e. swan, is another metaphorical expression for "sun."

making the Dûrohaṇam), he does just the same as if he were to appoint one who knows the fields as his guide (when travelling anywhere). The Târkshya<sup>19</sup> is that one who blows (i. e. the wind), thus carrying one up to the celestial world.

The Târkshya hymn is as follows :) (1) "Let us call hither to (our) safety the Târkshya, that horse instigated by the gods, (the horse) which is enduring, makes pass the carriages (without any impediment), which keeps unbroken the spokes of the carriage wheel, which is fierce in battle and swift."

He (the Târkshya) is the horse (vañji) instigated by the gods. He is enduring, makes pass the carriage (without any impediment); for he crosses the way through these worlds in an instant. He keeps the spokes of the carriage wheel unbroken, conquers in battle (pritanāja being explained by pritañjī). By the words "to (our) safety" the Itar asks for safety. By the words "let us call hither the Târkshya," he thus calls him.

(2) "Offering repeatedly gifts (to the Târkshya) as if they were for Indra, let us for (our) safety embark in the ship (represented by the Dûrohaṇa) as it were. (May) the earth (be) wide (to allow us free passage). May we not be hurt when going (our way) through you two (heaven and earth) who are great and deep (like an ocean)."

By the words "for safety" he asks for safety. By the words "let us embark in the ship" he thus presents him (the Târkshya) in order to reach the heavenly world, to enjoy it and to join (the celestial inhabitants). By the words “ (may) the earth (be) wide, may we not be hurt,” &c. the Hotar prays for a (safe) passage and (a safe) return.<sup>20</sup>

<sup>19</sup> It is often identified with the Garuda, i. e. the celestial eagle. According to Naigh. 1, 14, it means "horse." Whether it is a personification of the sun, as is assumed in the Sanscrit Dictionary of Bochtlingk and Roth iii., page 310, is very doubtful to me.

(3) “ He (the Târkshya) passes in an instant “ by dint of his strength through the regions of all “ five tribes (i. e. the whole earth) just as the sun “ extends the waters (in an instant) by its light. “ The speed of him (the Târkshya) who grants a “ thousand, who grants a hundred gifts, is as irresistible as that of a fresh arrow.”

By the word sûrya he praises the sun openly. By the words “ the speed of him,” &c. he asks for a blessing for himself and the sacrificers.

21.

(On the way of repeating the Dûrohaṇam.)

After having called sôṃsâvom, he makes the Durohaṇam (representing the ascent to heaven). The celestial world is the Dûrohaṇam (for it is to ascend). Speech is the call s'ôṃsâvon; (Brahma is Speech). By thus calling s'ôṃsâvom he ascends through the Brahma, which is this call, to the celestial world. The first time he makes his ascent by stopping after every pada (of the Dûrohaṇa mantra). Thus he reaches this world (the earth). Then he stops after every half verse. Thus he reaches the airy region. Then he stops after having taken together three padas. Thus he reaches that world. Then he repeats the whole verse without stopping. Thus he gains a footing in him (the sun) who there burns.

(After having thus ascended) he descends by stopping after three padas, just as one (in this world) holds the branch of the tree (in his hand when descending from it). By doing so, he gains a firm footing in that world. By then stopping after each half verse he gains a firm footing in the airy region, (and by stopping) after each pada, (he gains a firm footing) in this world (again). After having thus reached the celestial world, the sacrificers obtain thus a footing (again) in this world.<sup>21</sup>

For those who aspire only after (a footing) in one (world), that is, after heaven, the Hotar ought to repeat (the Dûrohaṇam) without making the descent (in the way described, by stopping first after three padas, &c.) They (thus) conquer only the celestial world, but they cannot stay long, as it were, in this world.

Hymns in the Trishtubh and Jagatî metre are mixed to represent a pair. For cattle are a pair; metres are cattle. (This is done) for obtaining cattle

(To what the Vishuvan day is like. Whether or not the Shastras of the Vishuvan day are to be repeated on other days during the Sattra also. On the merit of performing the Vishuvan day. On this day an ox is to be immolated for Vis'vakarma.)

The Vishuvan day is like a man. Its first half is like the right half (of a man) and its latter half like the left half. This is the reason that it (the performance of the six months' ceremonies following the Vishuvan day is called the "latter" (half).

<sup>21</sup> One has to bear in mind that the sacrificer does not wish to reside permanently in heaven before the expiration of his full life-term, or one hundred years. But by means of certain sacrifices he can secure for himself even when still alive lodgings in heaven, to be taken up by him after death. He must already when alive mystically ascend to heaven, to gain a footing there, and to be registered as a future inhabitant of the celestial world. After having accomplished his end, he descends again to the earth. His ascent and descent is dramatically represented by the peculiar way in which the Dûrohaṇa mantra is repeated.

The Vishuvan day is (just as) the head of a man whose both sides are equal.<sup>22</sup> Man is, as it were, composed of fragments (bidala). That is the reason that even here a suture is found in the midst of the head.

They say, He ought to repeat (the recitation for) this day only on the Vishuvan day.<sup>23</sup> Among the Shastras this one is Vishuvan. This Shastra (called Vishuvan is the equator (vishuran). (By doing so the sacrificers become vishuvat (i. e. standing like the head above both sides of the body) and attain leadership.

But this opinion is not to be attended to. He ought to repeat it (also) during the year (the Sattr is lasting). For this Shastra is seed. By doing so, the sacrificers keep their seed (are not deprived of it) during the year.

For the seeds produced before the lapse of a year which have required (for their growth) five or six months, go off (have no productive power). The sacrificers will not enjoy them (the fruits which were expected to come from them). But they enjoy (the fruits of) those seeds which are produced after ten months or a year.

प्रबाहुक सतो वामदक्षिणभागौ समौ हस्ताऽवस्थितस्य हि यथोन्नतं सन्मध्ये ऽवतिष्ठते.

<sup>23</sup> That is to say, the performance of the Vishuvan day must be distinguished from that of all other days of the Sattrâ. The Mahâdivâkîrtyam Sâman, the Dârohanam, &c. ought to be peculiar to it. Ahas here clearly means "the performance of the ceremonies," more especially the "Shastras required for the Soma day."

Therefore the Hotar ought to repeat the (Shastra for the) Vishuvan day during the year (also). For this day's Shastra is the year. Those who observe this day's performance (during the year) obtain the (enjoyment of the) year.

The sacrificer destroys, by means of the Vishuvan day's performance, during the year all consequences of guilt (pāpman).

By means of (the performance of the Sattras ceremonies in) the months (during which the Sattras last) he removes the consequences of guilt from his limbs (the months being the limbs of the year). By means of the Vishuvan day's performance during the year he removes the consequences of guilt from the head (the Vishuvan being the head). He who has such a knowledge removes by means of the Vishuvan day's performance the consequences of guilt.

They ought (on the Mahāvratā day) to kill for the libations an ox for Vis'vakarman (Tvashtar) in addition (to the regular animal, a goat, required for that occasion); it should be of two colours on both sides.

Indra after having slain Vṛitra, became Vis'vakarman. Prajāpati after having produced the creatures, became (also) Vis'vakarman. The year is Vis'vakarman.<sup>25</sup> Thus (by sacrificing such a bullock) they reach Indra, their own Self, Prajāpati, the year, Vis'vakarman (i. e. they remain united with them, they will not die) and thus they obtain a footing in Indra, in their own Self (their prototype), in Prajāpati, in the year, in Vis'vakarman. He who has such a knowledge obtains a firm footing.

<sup>25</sup> Vis'vakarman means "who does all work." Generally the architect of the gods is meant by the term.

FOURTH CHAPTER.

(The Dvâdas'âha sacrifice. Its origin, and general rules for its performance. The initiatory rites.)

23.

(Origin of the Dvâdas'âha. Its Gâyatri form.)

Prajâpati felt a desire to create and to multiply himself. He underwent (in order to accomplish this end) austerities. After having done so he perceived the Dvâdas'âha sacrifice (ceremonies to be) in his limbs and vital airs. He took it out of his limbs and vital airs, and made it twelve-fold. He seized it and sacrificed with it. Thence he (Prajâpati) was produced (i. e. that form of his which enters creatures, his material body). Thus he was reproduced through himself in offspring and cattle. He who has such a knowledge is reproduced through himself in offspring and cattle.

Having the desire to obtain through the Gâyatri throughout the Dvâdas'âha everywhere the enjoyment of all things, (he meditated) how (this might be achieved).

(It was done in the following way.) The Gâyatri was at the beginning of the Dvâdas'âha in (the form of) splendour, in the midst of it, in (that of the) metre at its end in (that of) syllables. Having penetrated with the Gâyatri the Dvâdas'âha everywhere, he obtained the enjoyment of everything.

He who knows the Gâyatri as having wings, eyes, light, and lustre, goes by means of her being possessed of these things, to the celestial world.

The Dvâdas'âha (sacrifice) is the Gâyatri with wings, eyes, light, and lustre. The two wings (of the Dvâdas'âha) are the two Atirâtras which are at the beginning and end of it (lit. round about). The two Agnishômas (within the two Atirâtras) are the two eyes. The eight Ukthya days between (the Atirâtra and Agnishtoma at the beginning, and the Agnishtoma and Atirâtra at the end) are the soul.

He who has such a knowledge goes to heaven by means of the wings, the eyes, the light, and lustre of the Gâyatri.

24.

On the different parts, and the duration of the Dvâdas'âha sacrifice.) On the Bṛihatî nature of this sacrifice. The nature of the Bṛihatî.)

The Dvâdas'âha consists of three Tryahas (a sacrificial performance lasting for three days) together with the "tenth day" and the two Atirâtras. After having undergone the Dîkshâ ceremony (the initiation) during twelve days, one becomes fit for performing this sacrifice. During twelve nights he undergoes the Upasads<sup>1</sup> (fasting). By means of them he shakes off (all guilt) from his body.

He who has such a knowledge becomes purified and clean, and enters the deities after having during these twelve days been born anew and shaken off all guilt) from his body.

The Dvâdas'âha consists (on the whole) of thirty-six days. The Bṛihatî has thirty-six syllables. The Dvâdas'âha is the sphere for the Bṛihatî (in which he is moving). By means of the Bṛihatî the gods obtained (all) these worlds; for by ten syllables they reached this world (the earth), by (other) ten they reached the air, by (other) ten the sky, by four they reached the four directions, and by two they gained a firm footing in this world.

<sup>1</sup> He keeps the fasting connected with the Upasad ceremony. At this occasion he must live on milk alone. The Upasads are, at the Dvâdas'âha, performed during four days, on each day thrice, that makes twelve. See about them 1, 25.

He who has such a knowledge secures a firm footing (for himself).

About this they (the theologians) ask, How is it, that this (particular metre of thirty-six syllables) is called Brihatî, i. e. the great one, there being other metres which are stronger, and exceed the (Brihatî) in number of syllables? (The answer is) It is called so on account of the gods having reached by means of it (all) these worlds, by ten syllables, this world (the earth), &c. He who has such a knowledge obtains anything he might desire.

25.

(Prajâpati instituted the Dvâdas'âha. The nature of this sacrifice. By whom it should be performed.)

The Dvâdas'âha is Prajâpati's sacrifice. At the beginning Prajâpati sacrificed with it. He said to the Seasons and Months, "make me sacrifice with the Dvâdas'âha (i. e. initiate me for this sacrifice)."

After having performed on him the Dikshâ ceremony, and prevented him from leaving (when walking in the sacrificial compound) they said to him, "Now give us (first something) then we shall make the sacrifice." He granted them food, and juice (milk, &c.). Just this juice is put in the Seasons and Months.

When he granted them that, then they made him sacrifice. This is the reason that only a man who can afford to give something is fit for performing this sacrifice.

When receiving his gifts, they (the Seasons and Months) made him (Prajâpati) sacrifice. Thence must he who receives gifts, sacrifice for another. Thus both parties succeed those who, having such knowledge, bring sacrifices for others, as well as those who have them performed for themselves.

The Seasons and Months felt themselves burdened, as it were (with guilt), for having accepted at the Dvâdasâha (which they performed for Prajâpati) a reward. They said to Prajâpati, "Make us (also) sacrifice with the Dvâdasâha." He consented and said to them, "Become ye initiated (take the Diksha)!" The deities residing in the first (the so-called bright) half of the months first underwent the Diksha ceremony, and thus removed the consequences of guilt. Thence they are in the daylight as it were; for those who have their guilt (really) removed, are in the daylight, as it were (may appear everywhere).

The deities residing in the second half (of the months) afterwards underwent the Dikshâ. But they (could) not wholly remove the evil consequences of it. Thence they are darkness, as it were; for those who have their guilt not removed are darkness, as it were (comparable to it).

Thence he who has this knowledge ought to have performed his Dikshâ first and in the first half (of month). He who has such a knowledge thus removes (all) guilt from himself.

It was Prajâpati who, as the year, resided in the year, the seasons, and months. The seasons and months thus resided (also) in Prajâpati as the year. Thus they mutually reside in one another. He who is the Dvâdasâha performed for himself resides in the priest (who performs it for him). Thence they (the priests) say, "No sinner is fit for having the Dvâdasâha sacrifice performed, nor should such an one reside in it."

The Dvâdasâha is the sacrifice for the first-born. He who first had the Dvâdasâha performed (became) the first-born among the gods. It is the sacrifice for a leader (a śreṣṭha). He who first performed it (became) the leader among the gods. The first-born, the leader (of his family or tribe) ought to perform it (alone); then happiness lasts (all the year) in this (the place where it is performed).

(They say) "No sinner ought to have the Dvâdas'âha sacrifice performed; no such one should reside in me (the priest)."

The gods (once upon a time) did not acknowledge that Indra had the right of primogeniture and leadership. He said to Brishaspati, "Bring for me the Dvâdas'âha sacrifice." He complied with his wish. Thereupon the gods acknowledged Indra's right of primogeniture and leadership.

He who has such a knowledge is acknowledged as the first-born and leader. All his relations agree as (to his right) to the leadership.

The first three (Soma) days (of the Dvâdas'âha) are ascending (i. e. the metres required are from the morning to the evening libation increasing in number); the middle three (Soma) days are crossed, (i. e. there is no regular order of increase nor decrease in the number of syllables of the metres); the last three (Soma) days are descending (i. e. the number of syllables of the metres from the morning to the evening libations is decreasing)<sup>2</sup>

On account of the (metres of the) first three days (tryaha) being ascending, the fire blazes up, for the upward region belongs to the fire. On account of the (metres of the) middle three days being crossed, the wind blows across; the wind moves across (the other regions), and the waters flow (also) across; for the region which is across (the others) belongs to the wind. On account of (the metres of) the three last days being descending, that one (the sun) burns downwards (sending his rays down), the rain falls down, (and) the constellations (in heaven) send (their light) down. For the region which goes down belongs to the sun.

<sup>2</sup> Here are the nine principal days of the Dvâdas'âha sacrifice mentioned. They constitute the Navarâtra, i. e. sacrifice lasting for nine nights (and days). It consists of three Tryahas, i. e. three days performance of the Soma sacrifice. The order of metres on the first three days is, at the morning libation, Gâyatri (twenty-four syllables); at the midday libation, Trishṭubh (forty-four syllables); at the evening libation, Jagatī (forty-eight syllables). On the middle three days the order of metres is, Jagatī, Gâyatri, and Trishṭubh, and on the last three days, Trishṭubh, Jagatī, and Gâyatri.

The three worlds belong together, so do these three Tiyahas. These (three) worlds jointly shine to the fortune of him who has such a knowledge.

25.

(When the Dīkshā for the Drūdasāha is to be performed. The animal for Prajāpati. Jamadagni Śāmidheni verses required. The Purodās'a for Vāyu. On some peculiar rite when the Drūdasāha is performed as a Sattra.)

The Dīkshā went away from the gods. They made it enter the two months of spring, and joined it to it: but they did not get it out (of these months for using it). They then made it subsequently enter the two hot months, the two rainy months, the two months of autumn, and the two winter months, and joined it to them. They did not get it out of the two winter months. They then joined it to the two months of the dewy season (Sisīra); they (finally) got it out of these (two months for using it).

He who has such a knowledge reaches any one he wishes to reach, but his enemy will not reach him.

Thence the sacrificer who wishes that the Dīkshā or a sacrificial session<sup>3</sup> should come (by itself) to him, should have the Dīkshā rites performed on him.

self during the two months of the dewy season. Then he takes his Dikshâ when the Dikshâ herself presents, and receives her in person.

(The reason that he should take his Dikshâ during the two months of the dewy season is) because both time and wild animals are, in these two months (first want of green fodder), very thin and show only bones, and present in this state the most vivid image of the Dikshâ (the aim of which ceremony is to make the sacrificer lean by fasting). *

Before he takes his Dikshâ he sacrifices an animal for Prajâpati. For (the immolation of) this (animal) he ought to repeat seventeen Sâmidheni verses. For Prajâpati is seventeen-fold. (Thus done) for reaching Prajâpati. Aprî verses which come from Jamadagni are (required) for (the immolation of) this animal. About this they say, Since at (all) other animal sacrifices only such Aprî verses are chosen as are traceable to the Rishi-ancestors (of the sacrificer) why are at this (Prajâpati sacrifice) only Jamadagni verses to be used by all? (The reason is) The Jamadagni verses have an universal character, and make successful in everything. This (Prajâpati) animal is of an universal character, and makes successful in everything. The reason that they use (at that occasion) Jamadagni verses, is to secure all forms, and to be successful in everything.

The Purodâśa belonging to this animal is Vâyus. About this they ask, Why does the Purodâśa, which forms part of the animal sacrifice, belong to Vâyus, whilst the animal itself belongs to another deity (Prajâpati)? (To this objection) one ought to reply, Prajâpati is the sacrifice; (that Purodâśa is given to Vâyus) in order to have the sacrifice performed without any mistake. Though this urodâsa belongs to Vâyu, it is not withheld from Prajâpati. For Vâyu is Prajâpati. This has been said by a Rishi in the words paramânah prajâpatiḥ (9, 5, 9), i. e. Prajâpati who blows.*

If the Dvâdas'âha be (performed as) a Sattrâ, then the sacrificers<sup>5</sup> should put all their several fires together, and sacrifice in them. All should take the dikshâ, and all should prepare the Soma juice.

He concludes (this sacrifice) in spring. For spring is sap. By doing so he ends (his sacrifice) with (the obtaining of) food (resulting from the sap of spring).

27. .

The rivalry of the metres. The separation of Heaven and Earth. They contract a marriage. The Sâma forms in which they are wedded to one another. On the black spot in the moon. On posha and ūsha.)

Each of the metres (Gâyatrî, Trishṭubh, and Jagatî) tried to occupy the place of another metre. Gâyatrî aspired after the place of Trishṭubh and Jagatî, Trishṭubh after that of the Gâyatrî and Jagatî, and Jagatî after that of Gâyatrî and Trishṭubh.

Then upon Prajâpati saw this Dvâdas'âha with metres being removed from their proper places (abhachchamâsa). He took it and sacrificed with it.

Thus way he made the metres obtain (fulfilment) of all their desires. He who has such a knowledge obtains (fulfilment of) all desires.

The Hotar removes the metres from their proper places, in order that the sacrifice should not lose its sense.

This circumstance that the Hotar changes the proper place of the metres has its analogy in the fact that (great) people when travelling (to a distant place) yoke to their carriages at every station fresh horses or oxen which are not fatigued. Just in the same way the sacrificers travel to the celestial world by employing at every station fresh metres (representing the horses or oxen) which are not fatigued. (This results) from changing the places of the metres.

* At a Sattrâ or sacrificial session all the sixteen priests in their turn become sacrificers. They perform the ceremonies for one another.

These two worlds (heaven and earth) were (once) joined. (Subsequently) they separated. (After their separation) there fell neither rain nor was there sunshine. The five classes of beings (gods, men, &c.) then did not keep peace with one another. (Thereupon) the gods brought about a reconciliation of both these worlds. Both contracted with one another a marriage according to the rites observed by the gods.

In the form of the Rathantara Sâman this earth is wedded to heaven, and in the form of the Brihat Sâman, heaven is wedded to the earth. (And again) in the form of the Naudhasa Sâman the earth is wedded to heaven, and in the form of the Syâta Sâman heaven is wedded to the earth.

In the form of smoke this earth is wedded to heaven, in the form of rain heaven is wedded to the earth.

The earth put a place fit for offering sacrifices to the gods into heaven. Heaven (then) put cattle on the earth.

The place fit for offering sacrifices to the gods which the earth put in heaven is that black spot on the moon.

This is the reason that they perform their sacrifice in those half months in which the moon is waxing and full (for only then that black spot is visible); for they only wish to obtain that (black spot).

• Heaven (put) on the earth herbs for pasture.<sup>20</sup> About them Tura the son of Kavasha said: O Janamejaya, what is (to be understood by the words

posha (fodder) and úsha (herbs of pasturage)? This is the reason that those who care for what proceeds from the cow (such as milk, &c.) put the question (when sending a cow to a pasturage), are there úshâs, i. e. herbs of pasturage? For úsha is fodder.

That world turned towards this world, surrounding it. Thence heaven and earth were produced. Neither came heaven from the air, nor the earth from air.

(On the Sâma Prishthas.)<sup>6</sup>

At the beginning there were Brihat and Rathantaram; through them there were Speech and Mind. Rathantaram is Speech, Brihat is Mind. Brihat being created, thought Rathantaram to be inferior; the Rathantaram put an embryo in its body and brought forth Vairûpam. These two, Rathantaram and Vairûpam joined, thought Brihat to be inferior to them; Brihat put an embryo in its own body, whence Vairâjam was produced. These two, Brihat and Vairâjam joined, thought Rathantaram and Vairûpam to be inferior to them. Rathantaram then put an embryo in its body, whence the Sâkavaram was produced. These three, Rathantaram, Vairûpam, and Sâkavaram thought Brihat and Vairâjam to be inferior to them. Brihat then put an embryo in its body, whence the Raivatam was produced. These three Sâmans on each side (Rathantaram, Vairûpam, Sâkavaram, and Brihat, Vairâjam, Raivatam) became six Prishthas.<sup>7</sup>

At this (time, when the Sâma Prishthas originated) are three metres (Gâyatrî, Trishţubh, and Jagatî)

<sup>7</sup> The purport of this paragraph is to show why on certain days of the Dvâdasâha the Rathantara Sâman, and on others the Brihat Sâman is required for forming a Prishtha with another Sâman. See these different Sâmans, 4, 13.

were unable to get hold of these six Prishthas. Gâyatri put an embryo in herself and produced Anuṣṭubh. Trisṭubh put an embryo in herself and produced Pañkti. Jagatî put an embryo in herself and produced the Atichhandas (metres). The three metres having thus become six, were thus able to hold the six Prishthas.

The sacrifice of him becomes (well) performed, and (also) becomes well performed for the whole assemblage (of sacrificer) who at this occasion takes his Dikshâ when knowing this production of the metres and Prishthas.

FIFTH CHAPTER.

(The two first days of the Dvâdas'âha sacrifice.)

29.

(The Shastras of the morning and midday libations on the first day.)

Agni is the leading deity of the first day. The Stoma (required) is Trivṛit (the nine-fold), the Sâman Rathantaram, the metre Gâyatrî. He who knows what deity, what Stoma, what Sâman, what metre (are required on the first day), becomes successful by it. The words â and pra are the characteristics of the first day. (Further) characteristics of this day are: yukta joined, ratha carriage, âs'u swift, pâ ti drink, the mentioning of the deities in the first pada (of the verses repeated) by their very names, the allusion to this world (earth), Sâmans akin to Rathantaram, metres akin to Gâyatrî, the future of kr to make.

The Ajya hymn of the first day is, upa pravanti adhvaram (1, 74); for it contains the term pra, which is a characteristic of the first day.

The Pra-uga Shastram is, vāyarāyāhi dars'ateme (1, 2-3); for it contains the term ā, a characteristic of the first day.

The Pratipad (beginning) of the Marutvatīya Shastra is, ā nā ratham yathotaye (8, 57, 1-3); its Anuchara (sequel), idaṁ vaso sutam andhaḥ (8, 2, 1-3); they contain the terms ratha, and piba (drink) which are characteristics of the first day.

The Indra-Nihava Pragātha is, indra nediya ed ihi (Vālk. 5, 5-6); here the deity is mentioned in the first pada, which is characteristic of the first day.

The Brāhmaṇaspatya Pragātha is, praitu Brahmaspatiḥ (1, 40, 3-4); it contains the term pra which is a characteristic of the first day.

The Dhāyās are, agnir netā, tvam Soma kratubhiḥ, manyu apoh (Ait. Br. 3, 18); here are the deities mentioned in the first padas, which is a characteristic of the first day.

The Marutvatīya Pragātha is, pra va indrāya bṛihate (3, 78, 3-4); it contains the term pra, which is a characteristic of the first day.

The (Nivid) hymn is, ā yātv indro vāse (4, 21); it contains the term ā, which is a characteristic of the first day.

(Nishkevalya Shastra).

The Rathantara Prishtham is, abhi tvā s'ūra nonumo (32, 22-23) and abhi tvā pūrvapītaye (8, 3, 7-8); this is done) at a Rathantara day, of which characteristic the first day is.

The Dhāyā is, yad rāvaṇa (Ait. Br. 3, 22); it contains the term ā, which is a characteristic of the first day.

The Sāma Pragātha is, piba sutasya (8, 3, 1-2); it contains the term piba "drink," which is a characteristic of the first day.

The Tārksyam is, tyam ū shu rājinam (Ait. Br. 20). The Hotar repeats it before the (Nivid) hymn

(of the Nishkevalya Shastra). The TârksHYam is safe journey. (It is repeated) for securing safety. He who has such a knowledge makes his journey in safety and reaches the end of the year in safety.

30.

(The rest of the Nishkevalya Shastra, and the Shastra of the evening libation.)

The (Nivid) hymn (of the Nishkevalya Shastra) is â na indro dîrâd (4, 20); it contains the term â which is a characteristic of the first day.

Both Nivid hymns, that of the Marutvatiya as well as that of the Nishkevalya Shastras are (so called) Saṃpâtas.<sup>1</sup> Vâmadeva after having seen (once) these (three) worlds, got possession of them (saṃpatal) by means of the Saṃpâtas. On account of his getting possession of (saṃpati) by means of the Saṃpâtas they are called by this name (saṃpâtas).

The reason that the Hotar, on the first day repeats two Saṃpâta hymns, is, to reach the celestial world, to get possession of it, and join (its inhabitants).

The Pratipad (beginning verse) of the Vais'vadeva Shastra on the first day, which is a Rathantara day s, sat savitar vṛṣimale, (5, 82, 1-3); its Anuchara (sequel) is, adya no deva savitar (5, 82, 4-6). It is used at a Rathantara day, which is a characteristic of the first day.

<sup>2</sup> The so-called Rathantara days of the Dvâdas'âha are the first, third, and fifth. Say. here remarks that the Pratipad of the Vais'vadeva Shastra is joined to the Rathantara-Sâman. This is, however, an erroneous statement, as I can prove from the Sâma pravoga of Dvâdas'âha (the last sacrifice of this kind has been, in this part of India, performed about fifty years ago) which is in my possession. The triplet addressed to Savitar is always (at all Sâma sacrifices) the opening of the Vais'vadeva Shastra on the evening libation; on the first day of the Dvâdas'âha there is besides the Arâbha Pavamâna Stotra, only the Yajna yajniya Sâma used, the Arâbha which is required at the evening libation of the Agnishtoma. I wrote that explanation only to explain the term râthantara. It means only that this is done on the "Rathantara day." Rathantara is on this day required at the midday libation.

The (Nivid) hymn for Savitar is, unñjate mana uta (5, 81), it contains the term gyj to join, which is a characteristic of the first day.

The (Nivid) hymn for Heaven and Earth is, pradyarā ajpnāh (1, 159); it contains the pra, which is a characteristic of the first day.

The (Nivid) hymn for the Ribhus is, ihcha vo mayasā (3, 60). If it would contain pra and ā, the (proper) characteristics of the first day, then all would be pra, i. e. going forth, and consequently the sacrificers would depart (prāishyan) from this world. This is the reason that the Hotar repeats on the first day (as Nivid hymn for Heaven and Earth) ihcha mano (though it does not contain the terms characteristic of the first day). Ih, i. e. here, is this world. By doing so, the Hotar makes the sacrificers enjoy this world.

The (Nivid) hymn for the Vis'vedevāh is, devān hve trihach chhurasah srastave (10, 66). The deities are mentioned in the first pada, which is a characteristic of the first day.

The reason that the Hotar repeats this hymn (Nivid Śukta) for the Vis'vedevāh on the first day is to make the journey (of the sacrificers) safe, because those who hold a session lasting for a year, or who perform the Dvādas'āha, are going to set out on a long journey. Thus the Hotar makes (for them) the journey safe.

He who has such a know'edge reaches in safety the end of the year, as well as those who have a Hotar knowing this and acting accordingly.

The Pratipad of the Agnimâruta Shastra is, vaisvânarâya 1ṛ. thupâjase (3, 3). The deity (Vaisvâ-para) is mentioned in the first pada, which is a characteristic of the first day.

The (Nivid) hymn for the Marutas is, pra trakshasaḥ pra tavasaḥ (1, 87). It contains the term pra, which is a characteristic of the first day.

He repeats the Jâtavedâs verse, jâtavedase sunarâma (1, 99, 1) before (the Jâtavedâs) hymn. The Jâtavedâs verse is safe journey. (It is repeated) for securing a safe journey. Thus he secures a safe journey (for the sacrificer). He who has such a knowledge reaches in safety the end of the year.

The (Nivid) hymn for Jâtavedâs is, pra tarvasim naryasim (1, 143). It contains the term pra, which is a characteristic of the first day.

The Agnimâruta Shastra (of the first day of the Dvâdasâha) is the same as in the Agnishţoma.<sup>3</sup> The creatures live on what is performed equally in the sacrifice (i. e. in several different kinds of sacrifices). Thence the Agnimâruta Shastra (of the first day of the Dvâdasâha) is identical (with that of the Agnishţoma).

31.

(The characteristics of the second day of the Dvâdasâha. The Shastras of the morning and midday libations. Story of Sâryâta, the son of Manu.)

Indra is the leading deity of the second day: the Stoma (required) is the fifteen-fold (pañchadasâ), the Sâman is Brihat, the metre is Trishţubh. He who knows what deity, what Stoma, what Sâman, what metre (are required for the second day) succeeds by it. On the second day neither â nor pra (the characteristics of the first day) are used, but sthâ (derivations from this root) "to stand," is the characteristic. Other characteristics of the second day are, irdhra upwards, prati towards, antar in, between, vrishag male, vriddhan growing, the deities mentioned (by their names) in the second pada, the allusion to the arj region, what has the nature of the Bṛihat Sâman, what has the nature of the Trishṭubh, the present tense<sup>4</sup>

The Ajya (hymn) of the second day is, agnim dūtam rinimahe (1, 12); this contains the present tense (in rinimahe) which is characteristic of the second day.

The Pra-uga Shastra is, vāyo ye te sahasriṇo (2, 41); it contains the term vriddhan growing, increasing in the words sutaḥ soma ritāvriddhā (2, 41, 4), which is a characteristic of the second day.

The Pratipad (beginning) of the Marutvatiya Shastra is, visvânarasya vas patim (8, 57, 4-6), and its Anuchara (sequel), indra it Somapāt (8, 2, 4-6). They contain the terms vriddhan (8, 57, 5) and antar (8, 2, 5) which are characteristics of the second day.

The constant (Indra-Nihava) Pragâtha is, indra veliṇya ed ihi.

The Brahmanaspati Pragâtha is, uttishṭha brahmanaspatē; it contains the term ârdhra up, upwards. (in the word uttishṭha, i. e. rise) which is a characteristic of the second day.

The constant Dhâyyâs are, agnir netâ, tvam soma kratubhiḥ, pinvanti apah.

The Marutvatiya Pragâtha is, bṛihad indrâya gâṇta (8, 87, 1-2); it contains the term vriddhan increasing, in the word ritāvriddhā.

The (Nivid) hymn (of the Marutvatiya Shastra) is, indra somam somapate (3, 32); it contains the term vrishan in the word á vrishasva "gather strength," (-how yourself as a male 3, 32, 2) which is a characteristic of the second day.

<sup>4</sup> The word for "present tense" in the original is kurrat, which is the participle of the present tense of the root kri to make. That it cannot have any other meaning, undoubtedly follows from the application of this term to the hymn agnim dūtam rinimahe, in the whole of which there is nowhere any present tense or present participle of the root kri, but, present tenses of other verbs.

The Brihat Prishtham (i. e. Stotriyam, and Ann-rúpam) is, trám úddhi havámahe (6, 46, 1-2) and tram hēchi cherave (8, 50, 7-8); (this is done) on the Bārhatā day,<sup>6</sup> of which kind the second day is (the use of the Brihat prishthā) being a characteristic of the second day.

The constant Dhiyyā (of the Nishkevalya Shastra) is, yad vā.āna.

The Sāma Pragātha is, ubhayam śrīgarachcha (8, 50, 1-2); (the term ubhayam, i. e. both) means, what is today and what was yesterday. It belongs to the Brihat Sāman, which is a characteristic of the second day.

The constant Tārksya is, tyam ú shu vājīnam.

32.

(The remainder of the Nishkevalya Shastra, and the Shastras of the evening libation on the second day.)

The (Nivid) hymn (of the Nishkevalya Shastra) is, ya ta útr aram á (6, 25); it contains the term vrishan in the word vrishná á i (6, 25, 3), which term is a characteristic of the second day.

The Pratipad of the Vais vadeva Shastra is, visu devasya netns (3, 50, 1), and tat savitar varuṇan (3, 62, 10-1), the Anuchara (sequel) is, á risvaderan satpatim (5, 82, 7-9). It belongs to the Brihat day and is thus a characteristic of the second day, (which is a Brihat day)

The (Nivid) hymn for Savitar is, ud u shyā deva saritá (6, 71); it contains the term "up, upwards" (in ut) which is a characteristic of the second day.

The (Nivid) hymn for Dyâvâprithivî is, te hi dyâvâprithivî (1, 160); it contains the term antar, which is a characteristic of the second day.

The (Nivid) hymn for the Ribhus is, takshan atham (1, 111); it contains the term vrishan in the word vrishanrasâ, which is a characteristic of the second day.

The (Nivid) hymn for the Vis'vedevâh is, yojnasya rathyam (10, 92); it contains the term vrishâ in the words vrishâ ketur, which is a characteristic of the second day. This hymn is by Sâryâta. As the Annas were engaged in a sacrificial session for going to heaven, they became always confounded (in their recitations) as often as they were going to perform the ceremonies of the second day (of the Shalâha). Sâryâta, the son of Manu, made them repeat the hymn, yojnasya rathyam on the second day, whereupon they got aware of the sacrifice (the sacrificial personage), and (by means of it) of the celestial world. The reason that the Hotar repeats this hymn on the second day is (to help the sacrificer), to get aware of the sacrifice, and consequently to see the celestial world (of which he wishes to become an inhabitant).

The Pratipad (beginning) of the Agnimâruta Shastra is, prikshasya vrishno (6, 8); it contains the term vrishan, which is a characteristic of the second day.

The (Nivid) hymn for the Marutas in the Agnimâruta Shastra is, vrishno s'ardhâya (1, 64); it contains the term vrishan, which is a characteristic of the second day.

The constant Jâtavedâs verse is, Jâtavedase sunâma.

The (Nivid) hymn for Jâtavedâs is rajnena ardhata (2, 2); it contains the term vidh, which is a characteristic of the second day.

FIFTH BOOK.

FIRST CHAPTER.

(The characteristics and Shastras of the third and fourth days of the Drâdas'ûha.)

1.

(The characteristics of the third day. The Shastras of the morning and midday libations.)

The leading deities of the third day are the Visvadevâh; its (leading) Stoma is the so-called Sapudasa (seventeen-fold), its Sâman the Vairûpan, its metre the Jagatî. He who knows what deity, what Stoma, what Sâman, what metre (are required on the third day), becomes successful by it.

What hymn has a refrain, that is a characteristic of the third day. Other characteristics are: as'vâh ending, repetition, (punarârtti) consonance (in the ending vowels), cohabitation, the term "cover closed," (pryasta), the term three, what has the force of anta (end), the mentioning of the deity in the last pada, an allusion to that world, the Vairûpan Sâman, the Jagatî metre, the past tense.

The Ajya Shastra is, yukshrû hi devahûtam (8, 64). The gods went to heaven by means of the third day. The Asuras (and) Rakshas prevented them (from entering it). They said (to the Asuras) "Become deformed, become deformed" (virûpa); when the Asuras were becoming deformed, the Devas entered (heaven). This produced the Sâman called Vairûpan; thence it is called so (from virûpa deformed). He who has become deformed in consequence of his own guilt, destroys it (his deformity) by means of this knowledge.

The Asuras persecuted the Devas again, and came into contact with them. The Devas turned horses (as'va) and kicked them with their feet. Thence the horses are called as'va (from as' to reach). He who knows this obtains (as'nute) all he desires. Thence the horse is the swiftest of animals, because of its kicking with the hind legs. He who has such a knowledge destroys the consequences of guilt. This is the reason that the Ajya hymn on the third day contains the term as'va horse, which is a characteristic of the third day.

The Pra-uga Shastra consists of the following triplets, vāyavā āhi vāyavā (5, 51, 5-7), vāyō yāhi vāyavā (8, 26, 23-25), indus'cha vāyavā eshām sūtānām (5, 51, 6-8), āmīre varuṇē vāyam (5, 72, 1-3), asimā cha gachhatām (5, 75, 7-9), āśāky aviribhiḥ (5, 40, 1-3), śajūr drevibhir vis'rbhir (7, 34, 15-17), utamah pri ā (6, 61, 10-12). They are in the Ushnih metre, have a refrain (samānodurkam), which is a characteristic of the third day.

Tan tam id rādhasē (8, 57, 7-9), traya indrasya Soma (8, 2, 7-9) are the beginning and the sequel of the Marutvatiya Shastra, which contain the terms rtā, i. e. consonance (8, 57, 7) and traya, i. e. three, which are characteristics of the third day. Indra vadiya (Vâl. 5, 5-6) is the constant (Indra-Nihava) Pragâthah<sup>1</sup> Pra nūnam Brahmanaspatir (1, 40, 5-6) is the Brâhmanaspatya Pragâtha, which has a consonance (of vowels), is a characteristic of the third day. Agnir netā (3, 20, 4), tram Soma kratuh (1, 91, 2), and pīranti apō (1, 64, 6) are the immovable Dhāyyās. Nakih Sudâsô ratham (7, 32,

his clearly expresses what we call consonance; the recurrence of the same vowel at the end is compared to the movements of a dancer (inritam).

10) is the Marutvatîya Pragâtha, which contains the term panyasta, i. e. covered, closed. Trheryam manusho devatâtâ (5, 29) is the (Nivid) hymn (for the Marutvatîya Shastra); it contains the term "three." Yad dyâra indra (8, 59, 5-6), yad indra yâvata (7, 32, 18-19) form the Vairûpam Prishtham on the third day, which is a Rathantara day, which is characteristic of the third day.

Yad râvâna (10, 74, 6) is the constant Dhâvyâ. By repeating (after this Dhâvyâ): abhi tû sâ nu nonumak (7, 32, 22-23) the Hotar turns back the womb (of this day) because this (third) day is, as to its position, a Rathantara day, which Saman is therefore, the womb of it. Indra tridhâtû sâraṇam (6, 46, 9-10) is the Sâma Pragâtha; it contains the term "three" (in tridhâtû). Tyama û shu vâṇam (10, 178) is the constant Târکشya.

(The Nivid hymn of the Nishkeralya Shastra, and the Shastras of the evening libation of the third day.

Yo jâtô eva prathamô manasvân (2, 12) is the (Nivid) hymn, every verse of which ends in the same words (sa janâsa Indrah) which is a characteristic of the third day. It contains the words sa jana and Indra. If this be recited, then Indra becomes possessed of his Indra (peculiar) power. The Sam singers, therefore, say, the Rigvedis (the Hotar) praise Indra's peculiar nature (power, indrasya indriyam). This hymn is by the Rishi Gritsamada. By means of it this Rishi obtained Indra's favour and conquered the highest world. He who has this knowledge obtains Indra's favour and conquers the highest world.

Tat Savitur vrinîmahe vayam (5, 82, 1-3) and adhy nô deva savitah (5, 82, 3-5) are the beginning and the sequel of the Vais'vadeva Shastra on the third day, which is a Kāṭhantara day.

Tad devasā Savitū rāyam mahad viññāmahe (4, 33, 1) is the (Nivid) hymn for Savitar. Because the end (which is aimed at) is a great one (mahad); and the third day is also an end. Glṛitena dhāṁā rithicī (6, 70) is the (Nivid) hymn for Dyāvāprithivī. It contains the words glṛitas'ri,ā, glṛita rithā, glṛitar rithā, in which there is a repetition because the word glṛita is three times repeated) and the consonance of the terminating vowels (because here is three times ā at the end), which are characteristics of the third day.

Anasvō jāto asabhis'ur (4, 36) is the (Nivid) hymn for the Ribhus. It contains in the words rathas tri-śakāh, the term "three" (tri) which is a characteristic of the third day.

Pararato ya didhishanta (10, 63) is the (Nivid) hymn for the Vis'vedevāḥ. Because the word anta (the end) is to be found in the word pararato (atō (the strong form antō), and the third day is an end in object). This is the Gayasūkta, by which Gaya, the son of Plata, obtained the favour of the Vis'vedevāḥ and conquered the highest world. He who has his knowledge obtains the favour of the Vis'vedevāḥ and conquers the highest world.

Vaisṇava āva dhoshanām (3, 2) is the beginning of the Agnimāruta Shastra. The anta (end) is in dhā (but the t is wanting). The third day is so an "end" (of a Triaha or period of three days).

Blārā arā maruō (2, 34) is the (Nivid) hymn for the Marutas. Here is by anta the plural (most of the nominatives of this verse are in the plural) to be understood, because the plural is the end (the last long the terminations, following the singular and al). The third day is also the end (of the yaha).

Jâtavedase sunavâma (1, 99, 1) is the constant verse for Jâtavedâs. Tram agne prathamo angirâ (1, 31) is the (Nivid) hymn for Jâtavedâs, where each verse begins by the same words (tram agne), which is a characteristic of the third day. By repeating tram (in every verse) the Hotar alludes to the following three days (from the fourth to the sixth) in connecting (both series of three days). Those who with such a knowledge repeat (at the end of the hâ- Shastra of the third day a hymn every verse of which contains the term tram) have both series of three days performed without interruption and breach.

(Sây. These periods of three days form part of the Navarâtra—nine nights—included in the Dvâdasâ.)

<sup>2</sup> The rules for making the Nyûnkha are laid down in As'val. S. (7, 11). They are: प्रातरनुवाकप्रतिपद्यद्वा द्यौर्न्युक्ते द्वितीये स्वरमोकारं त्रिमात्रमुदात्तं त्रिसंख्यं तस्योपरिष्ठादपरिमितं चर्वाङ्गिकाराननुदात्तानुत्तमस्य, तु चीन् पूर्वमक्षरत्रिद्वयते गूळम् i. e. "On the fourth day is the second sound (syllable) of each the two first half-verses in the beginning of the Prâtaranuvâka be pronounced with Nyûnkha. (This Nyûnkha is made in the following manner). The ô (in âpô ravatir and râgô) is pronounced thrice with three moras, in the high tone (udâtta); this ô is pronounced in the high tone with three moras is each time followed by an indefinite number of half os (i. e. the vowel o pronounced abruptly with half a mora only) or by five only, the last ô (with three moras) being, however, followed by three half os only. The first sound is pronounced with some impetus, then a syllable spoken with Nyûnkha."

This description, which is quite exact, as I can assure the reader from my having heard the Nyûnkha pronounced by a Shrotriya, is illustrated in As'v. by several instances. It occurs twice in the first verse of the Prâtaranuvâka (after the words yajna and râgô the last syllable of both being changed into ô), and once in the Sûkta (âgim na 10, 21), after the ô of the word yajnavat, in the Nishkevalya Shastra. The Nyûnkha is always followed by a Pratigara, pronounced by the Adhvaryu, containing also the Nyûnkha.

The first Tryahah or period of three days is now explained, and the very same is the first part of the Prithivî comprising six days. Now the middle part of the Navarâtra (the second three days) are to be explained.)

The Stomas and Chandas are at an end (i. e. all the Stoma combinations, and the metres are exhausted) on the third day ; that one only remains. This "that one" is the syllable vâch which consists of three sounds ; vâch is one syllable, and (this) syllable consists of three sounds, which represent the latter three days (out of the six), of which Vâch (Speech) is one, and Gâus (Cow) is one, and Dyaus (Heaven) is one. Therefore Vâch alone is the leading deity of the fourth day.

On just the fourth day they make Nyûñkha, of this syllable by pronouncing it with a tremulous voice increasing and decreasing (dividing) the tone. It serves for raising the fourth day (to make it peculiarly important). Because the Nyûñkha is (induces) food, for the singers seeking a livelihood, under about in order to make food grow (by their singing for rain).

By making Nyûñkha on the fourth day they produce food ; (because it is done) for producing food. Hence the fourth day is jâtavat, i. e. productive. One says, one must make Nyûñkha with a word comprising four sounds ; for the animals are four-footed, in order to obtain cattle. Others say, one must make Nyûñkha with three sounds. These three loks are the three worlds. In order to conquer these worlds, they say, one must make Nyûñkha with one sound only. Sângalâyana, the son of Mudgala, Brahman, said "The word 'Vâch' comprises one syllable only ; therefore he who makes Nyûñkha by one sound only, does it in the right way." They say, one must make Nyûñkha with two sounds for obtaining a stand-point, for man has two legs, and the animals have four; thus he places the two-footed man among the four-footed animals. Therefore the Hotar ought to make Nyûnkha with two sounds. At the beginning he makes Nyûnkha in the morning prayer (Prâtaranuvâka); because creatures first eat food with the mouth. In this way the Hotar places the sacrificer with his mouth (ready for eating) towards food.

In the Ajya Shashtra the Nyûnkha is made in the middle; for in the middle he makes the creature fond of food, and he places thus the sacrificer in the midst of food. In the midday libation the Hotar makes Nyûnkha at the beginning, because animals eat food with their mouth. Thus he places the sacrificer with his mouth towards food. Thus he makes Nyûnkha at both the libations (morning and midday) for obtaining food.

4.

(The characteristics of the fourth day. The Shastras of the morning and midday libations)

The leading deity of the fourth day is the Vâch. The Stoma is the twenty-one-fold, the Sâman is Vairâja, the metre is Anushtubh. He who knows what deity, what Stoma, what Sâman, what metre (are required) on the fourth day, succeeds through it (the fourth day). The terms â and prâ are the characteristics of the fourth day. The fourth day has all the characteristics of the first, viz. yâtha, âs'au. pâ (to drink); the mentioning of the deity in the first pada, an allusion to this world. Other characteristics of the fourth day are, jâta, hara, s'ukra, what has the form of speech (the Nyûnkha), what is by Vimada vîjîhîta, what has different metres (richandas), what is wanting in syllables, and what has an excess of them; what refers to Virâj and to Anushtubh; the tense is future (karishyat).

Agnim na svavriktibhih (10, 21) is the Ajya hymn of the fourth day.

It is by the Rishi Vimada, whose name is continued in an alliteration in it (in vi vo made), and has alliterations, consonances, and assonances (viriphitam).<sup>3</sup> Such a hymn is a characteristic of the fourth day. It consists of eight verses, and is in the Paṅkti metre; because the sacrifice is a Paṅkti (series of ceremonies); and cattle are of the Paṅkti nature (i. e. they consist of five parts); (it is done) for obtaining cattle.

These eight verses make ten Jagatīs,<sup>4</sup> because

The word viriphitam has, it appears, been understood by one who explains it by "nyūṅkha," i. e. in which the Nyūṅka is made. It is true, the Nyūṅkha is made by the Hotar, when doing the two Vimada hymns (agnim na svavriktibhih 10, 21, and avata indrah 10, 22) on the morning and midday of the fourth day (See Asv. S'r. S. 7, 11). But the term nyūṅkha being well-known to the author of our Brāhmanam, and its application being accurately described by him (in 5, 3), it is surprising only to be should call this peculiar way of lengthening the syllable ō (m) the midst of a verse here viriphitam. Besides the Nyūṅkha does not happen in the Vimada hymns only, but in the beginning verse of Prāṇayaka, which verse is by the Sudra Rishi Kavashāmbha. Viriphitam must refer to some peculiarities which lie in the volume alluded to. On reference to them, every one will observe that in the first of them, each verse concludes with the word vīrak- and contains the words vi vo made, which are an allusion to the name of the Rishi Vimada, who is therefore also called viriphitam; in the second, there occurs in the two first verses in the same place (in the commencement of the second pada) the term adya, and at the first several padas in the following verse, the word vajriyah. These occurrences of the same words, generally commencing with ra, vi, vo need admit, the proper meaning of the term "viriphitam" as understood by the author of our Brāhmanam.

<sup>3</sup> This is brought about by repeating thrice the first and last words. The Paṅkti consists of 41 syllables. In this way of computation one obtains 480 syllables, just as many as 10 Jagatīs comprise (24). If they are divided by 32 (the number of syllables for the Anushtubh metre), then we obtain 15 Anushtubhs, and if divided by 20 Gayatris.

this morning libation of the middle three days (from the fourth to the sixth) belongs to the Jagat (i. e. Jagati). This (the connection of the Jagatî with the morning libation) is a characteristic of the fourth day.

These eight verses comprise ten Anushtubhs, for this is the Anushtubh day, in the application of which metre one of the characteristics of the fourth day consists.

These eight verses contain twenty Gâyatrîs for this day is again a day of commencement (like the first, where Gâyatrî is the metre). In this consists a characteristic of the fourth day.

Although this hymn is neither accompanied by the chants of the Sâma singers, nor by the recitation of the Hotri priests, the sacrifice does not lose its essence by it, but the sacrificial personage is ever actually present (in it); thence it serves as the Ap. Shastra of the fourth day. They thus develop (stretch) out (of the form of) the sacrifice (contained in this hymn), the sacrifice (i. e. this hymn is the external shape, in the boundary of which the sacrifice—conceived as a being—extends and thrives), and obtain (through the medium of this hymn) the Vâc again. (This is done) for establishing a connection (between the several periods of three days). Those who have such a knowledge move continually within the closely connected and uninterrupted periods of three days (required for having success in the sacrifice).

The Pra-uga Shastra, which is in the Anushtubh metre, is composed of the following verses: Vâyo'suk (4, 47, 1), vihi hotrâ axitâ (4, 48, 1), vâyo'sata harinâm (4, 48, 5), indras'cha vâjav eshâm (4, 48, 2-4), chikitâna sukratû (5, 66, 1-3), â no vis'vâh itibhiḥ (7, 24, 4-6), tyam u vo aprahanam (6, 44, 4-6), apa tyam vriḥinan ripum (6, 51, 13-15), ambitâ naditame (2, 41, 1-3). In them there occur the word

ā, pra, and s'ukra, which are characteristics of the fourth day.

Tam trā yajnebhīr imāhe (8, 57, 10) is the beginning (pratīva) of the Marutvatiya Shastra. The word imāhe "we ask for" in this verse means, that this day's work is to be made long (in consequence of the multitude of rites) as it were (just as one has to wait long before a request is acceded to). This is a characteristic of the fourth day (for it indicates the multitude of its rites).

The verses, Idam raso satam andhah (8, 2, 1-2), Indra nedyu (Val. 5, 5-6), prāitu Brahmanaspatir (1, 40, 34), Agnir ictā (3, 20, 4), trām Soma kratubhih (1, 91, 2), piurantu apō (1, 64, 6), pra ra indrāya brikate (8, 78, 3), which form part of the Marutvatiya Shastra of the first day, are also required for the fourth day, and a characteristic of it. S'rudhi haram mā rishanya (2, 11, 1) is the hymn which contains the word hava, (ll) being a characteristic of the fourth day. In the hymn Marutvāñ Indra vṛishabhō (3, 47) there is its last quarter (47, 5) in the word huvema, the root perceptible, which is a characteristic of the fourth day. This hymn is in the Trishṭubh metre.

By means of the padas of this hymn which stand in the Hotar keeps the libation lest it fall from its proper place (it should be kept in its proper place, as a piece in machinery). Imam nu māyinaṃ huva (7, 65, 13) is the setting (paryāsa) containing the word huva which is a characteristic of the fourth day. The verses (of this hymn) are in the Gâyatrî metre, and the Gâyatrî verses are the leaders of the midday libation in these latter three days. That metre is the leading one in which the Nivid is placed; therefore we put in (these) Gâyatrî verses the Nivid.

Piba Somam Indra mandatu (7, 22, 1-2) and s'rudhi nam vipipānasyādrer (7, 22, 4-5) is the Vairāja Trishṭham of the Bṛihat days, to which the fourth day belongs. This (reference to the Bṛihat) is a characteristic of the fourth day.

Yad vârána (10, 74, 6) is the immovable Dháyyâ.

Trám iddhi harâmahe (6, 46, 1) forms the womb (central verse) to which the Hotar brings (all) back, after the Dháyyâ has been recited; for this is a Bṛihat Sâma day according to its position (therefore the Pragâtha, constituting the text of the Bṛihat Sâman is its womb).

Tṛam Indra pratârtishu (8, 88, 5) is the Sâma Pragâtha; (the third pada) as'astihâ janitâ contains the term "jâta" which is a characteristic of the fourth day. Tyam ñ shu vâjinam (10, 178) is the immovable Târkshya.

5.

(The remainder of the Nishkeralya Shastra, and the Shastras of the evening libation)

Kuha s'ruta indrah (10, 22) is the Vîmada hymn with alliterations, assonances, and consonances, by the Rishi whose (name) is contained in an alliteration (vi vâ made in 10, 21 being taken as equal to vîmada). This is one of the characteristics of the fourth day. The hymn yudhmasya te vṛishabhasya (3, 46) contains (in the fourth verse) the word janushâ (from the root jan "to be born") which is a characteristic of the fourth day. It is in the Trishṭubh metre. B means of the padas of this hymn which stand firm the Hotar keeps the libation, lest it fall from its proper place.

Tyam urah satrâsâham (8, 81) is the setting. Its words vis'râsu gîrshv âyatam indicate that this day's work is to be made long, as it were, which is one of the characteristics of the fourth day. They are in the Gâyatrî metre; the Gâyatrîs are the leaders of the midday libation in these three (latter) days.

The Nivid is to be put in that metre which leads (the day); therefore they put the Nivid in the Gâyatri. Vis'ró devasya netus (5, 50, 1), tat savitur arenyam (3, 62, 10-11), á vis'vaderam saptatim (5, 82, 7-9), are the beginning and sequel of the Vais'vadeva Shastra on the fourth day, which is a Brihat day, being one of the characteristics of the fourth day. A devó yātu (7, 45) is the (Nivid) hymn for savitar; it contains the term á, which is a characteristic of the fourth day.

Pra dyāvā yajnāih prithivī (7, 53) is the (Nivid) hymn for Dyāvāprithivī; it contains the term pra, which is a characteristic of the fourth day. Pra ribhubhyā dūtām iṣa rācham ishya (4, 33) is the (Nivid) hymn for the Ribhus; it contains the words pra and rācham ishya, which are characteristics of the fourth day. Pra s'ukráitu devī manishā (7, 34) is the (Nivid) hymn for the Vis'vedevāh; it contains the words pra and s'ukra, which are characteristics of the fourth day. It has different metres, such as consist of two padas, and such as consist of four padas. This is a characteristic of the fourth day.

Vais'rānarasya sumatāu syāma (1, 98) is the beginning of the Agnimāruta Shastra; it contains the term ā, which is a characteristic of the fourth day. Ka vyaktā (7, 56) is the (Nivid) hymn for the Marutas. In the third pada of its first verse there are the words, nakir hy eshām janūnshi veda, which contain the root jan to be born (in janūnshi), which is a characteristic of the fourth day. The verses of this hymn are in unequal metres; some have two padas, some four. This constitutes a characteristic of the fourth day.

Jātavedase sunavāma sōmam (1, 99, 1) is the immovable Jātavedās verse. Agnim naró dūdhitibir (7, 1) is the (Nivid) hymn for Jātavedās; it contains the term janayanta, which is a characteristic of the fourth day. Its metres are unequal; there are in it Virāṣas and Trisṭubhs. This constitutes a characteristic of the fourth day.

SECOND CHAPTER.

(The characteristics and Shastras of the fifth and sixth days of the Drādasāha.)

6

(The characteristics of the fifth day. The Shastra of the morning and midday libations.)

The leading deity of the fifth day is Gāus (the cow). Its Stoma is the Trinava (twenty-seven-fold) the Sāman is the Sākṣaram, the metre is Pañkti. He who knows what deity, what Stoma, what Sāman, what metre (are required on this day), succeeds by it. What is not ā and not pra, what is fixed (standing) that is a characteristic of the fifth day. Beside the characteristics of the second day re-occur in the fifth, such as īrdhva, prati, antar, īrishan, īridhan, the mentioning of the deity in the middle pada, an allusion to the airy region. (In addition to these there are the following peculiar characteristics), duḡdha (duh to milk) udha (udder), dhenu (cow), prist (cloud, cow), mad (drunk), the animal form, an increase (adhyāsaḥ), <sup>1</sup> for the animals differ in size, as were, one being smaller or bigger than the other. This (fifth) day is jāgatam, i. e. it refers to the movable (jagat) things (or the Jagatī metre), he animals are movable; it is bārhatam, for the animals have reference to the Brihatî metre; it is nūktam, for the animals refer to the Pañkti metre; it is rāmam, i.e. left, because the animals are of this quality.<sup>3</sup> It is havishmat, i. e. having offerings; because the animals are an offering (serve as an offering); it is vapushmat, i. e. having a body; for the animals have a body; it is sākṛam pāñktam, and has the present tense, just as the second day.

Imam āshu vo atithim (6,15) is the Ajya Shastra. It is in the Jagatî metre with additional other metres (such as Sakvarî, Atisakvari, &c.); this is the animal characteristic of the fifth day.

The Pra-uga Shastra of the fifth day, which is in the Brihatî metre, consists of the following verses: A no yajnam divispriam (8, 90, 9-10), ā no rāyo (8, 46, 25), rathena prithapājasā (4, 46, 5-7), bahavaḥ sarachakshasā (7, 66, 10-12), imā u rām dixishṭaya (7, 74, 1-3), pibā sutasya rasiṇō (8, 3, 1-3), devam ro rose devam (8, 27, 13-15), brihad u gāyishhe vacu (7, 96, 1-3).

In the verse yat pāñchajanyayāvisā (8, 52, 7), which is the beginning of the Marutvatîya Shastra, there is the word pāñchajanyayā (consisting of five families) which (five) is a characteristic of the fifth day (it being pāñkta, i. e. five-fold).

Indra it somapa ekah (8, 2, 4), Indra nedliya edihî (Val. 5, 5), uttishtha Brahmanaspate (1, 40, 1), Agnir netā (3, 20, 1), tram soma kratubhiḥ (1, 91, 2), <sup>3</sup> Say. interprets the word rāma here differently. He takes it to mean "lovely, beautiful." This, he says, refers to the song (what song, he does not specify) which is pleasing to hear on account of its sweet tones and sounds; or to the beautiful view which animals, such as cows, horses, &c. represent to the eye of the spectator. But these explanations have no sense at all, and appear to be mere guesses. I think it better to take the word in the meaning "left" according to which the animals are the "left part" in creation, opposed to men and gods, who represent the right.

pinvanty apó (1, 64, 6), bṛihad Indráya gáyata (8, 78, 1) is the extension (of the Marutvatîya Shastra) of the fifth day, which is identical with that of the second day.

Arítâsi sumrató (8, 36) is a hymn which contains the word mad "to be drunk." There are (in the first verse) five padas, which is in the Pañkti metre, all these are characteristic of the fifth day. Itthá hi soma in mada (1, 80) is another hymn in the Pañkti metre, consisting of five padas, which contains the word mad also.

The hymn Indra piba tubhyam suto madáya (6, 40), composed in the Trishtubh metre, contains the word mad also. By means of this pada which remained firm, the Hotar keeps the libation in its proper place, preventing it from slipping down. The triplet marut áñ indra mîdhva (8, 65, 7-9) is the setting containing neither the words á nor pra which is a characteristic of the fifth day. These verses are in the Gâyatrî metre, which lead the midday libation of the three days' sacrifice. The Nivid is placed in that metre which is the leading one. Therefore the Hotar places the Nivid in (these) Gâyatrîs.

7.

(On the Sákvara Sáman and the Mahánámnîs.
The Nishkeralya Shastra.)

On this fifth day, which is a Rathantára day, Sâma singers chant the Mahánámnî verses<sup>4</sup> according to the Sákvara tune; this is a characteristic of fifth day. Indra (having had once a desire of coming great) made himself great by means of these verses; therefore they are called Mahánámnî. The worlds (also) are Mahánámnîs, for they are great

Prajâpati had, when he created the universe, the power (of making all) this and everything. The power possessed by Prajâpati to make all this and everything when creating these worlds became the Sakvari verses. Thence they are called Sakvaris from śakti, he has the power. He (Prajâpati) made them (these Mahânâmis) to extend beyond the frontiers. All that he created as extending beyond the frontiers, turned cords (śina). Thence comes the word śiman, from śina, a cord.

The verses S. â'or itthâ rishāvato (1, 84, 10), upa no bṛhbatam (1, 82, 31), indram viśvā aridhannā (1, 111, 1) are the Anurūpa (of the Nishkevalya shastra): they contain the words riśkan, prīśni, mad, śilka, which are characteristics of the fifth day. Yad vā'āna (10, 71, 6) is the immovable Bhavya. By repeating Abhi tiā s'ūa nommo after the Ohīyā, the Hotar returns to the womb of the Rathantaram (as the receptacle of all ceremonies), this (fifth) day being a Rathantara day by its position. Mō shu tvā rāghatāś'clana (7, 32, 1-2) is the Sāma Prāgatha with an additional foot, having the animal form (five parts), which is a characteristic of the fifth day. Tyam vā shu vājīnam is the immovable Tarkshya.

8.

(The remainder of the Nishkevalya Shastra. The Shastras of the evening libation.)

The hymn, predum brahma (8, 37) is in the Pañkti metre, comprising five padas. The hymn, Iudro madāya vāridha (1, 81) is in the Pañkti metre, consisting of five padas, and containing the term "mad." By means of the hymn Saṭrā madāśas tara (6, 36, 1) which contains the term "mad" also, and is in the Tristubh metre, the Hotar keeps through, its padas which remained firm, the libation in its proper place, thus preventing it from falling down. The triplet, tam Indram vājayāmasi (8, 82, 7-9) is the setting (paryāsa). (Its third pada) sa vṛishā vṛishabho bhuvāt, contains the animal form (there is the word vṛishan, i. e. male, in it). It is in the Gāyatrī metre, for the Gāyatrīs are the leading metres at the midday libation in this Tryaha (the three days from the fourth to the sixth). The Nivid is placed in that metre which is the leading. Therefore the Hotar places the Nivid in (these) Gāyatrīs.

The verses, tat savitar vrinimāhe (5, 82, 1-3), adhyā no deva savitar (5, 82, 13-15), are the beginning and sequel of the Vaisṇadeva Shāstra on the Rathantara day, of which the fifth is one. Ud u shva deva savitā dāmūnā (6, 71, 4-6) is the (Nivid) hymn for Savitar. In it there is the word vāmam (in the last pada) i. e. left, which is a characteristic of the animal form. In the Dyāvāprithivī hymn, madh dyāvāprithivī (4, 56) the words rural dhokshā (in the last pada) contain the animal form (because the word dhokshā, from the root duh to milk, is in it).

Ribhur vibhrā vāja (4, 34) is the Ribhu hymn. Because the animals are vājah, i. e. property, booty which (vājah) is an animal form. Stushe janāni surratañ navyasibhir (6, 49, 1) is a hymn (in the Trishṭubh metre) with an additional pada (in the last verse, which is in the Śākvari, instead of in the Trishṭubh metre). This is the animal form (animal being supposed to have five feet instead of four, the mouth being counted as the fifth) which is characteristic of the fifth day. Harish pāntam ajaram (10, 88, 1) is the beginning of the Agnimāruta Shāstra. It contains the word havis, i. e. offering, which is a characteristic of the fifth day. Vopur na tach chikitushē (6, 66) is the (Nivid) hymn for the Marutas which contains the word vapus, i. e. form. Jātavedas sunarāma is the invariable Dhāyyā. Agnir hot rikhopatih (6, 15, 13) is the (Nivid) hymn for Jâta-edâs, with an additional pada (at the end); this is the animal form, which is a characteristic of the fifth lay.

9.

(On the Rituyâjas of the sixth day.)

The sixth day is dera kshetra, i. e. the field of the gods. Those who enter on the sixth day, enter the field of the gods who do not live together, but each in his own house. They say, No Ritu (season) lives in the house of another Ritu. Therefore the priests perform the Rituyâjas (offerings to the Ritus), each for himself, without appointing another one to do it for them.<sup>5</sup> Thus the priests prepare all the Ritus without foregoing such or such one (and make them for their own use), that the whole assemblage enjoys happiness, each in his own place. They say, in order for making the Ritu offering is required, and the formula "riâushat" to be repeated. Because the order given (by the Maitrâvaruṇa), for the Ritu offerings are the Vâch, who is wearied on the sixth day. When they would give the order (for repeating the Yâjyâs) for the Ritu offerings, and call "riâushat," then they would have Vâch wearied, and sinking under her load<sup>6</sup> (the number of mantras recited on the previous days) and faltering in her voice.<sup>7</sup> But if the priests do not repeat the order for the Ritu offerings, nor repeat vâushat after the Yâjvâs, then they fall from the line of the sacrifice which should not be broken and consequently they fall from the sacrifice, from the prâṇa (breath), Prajâpati and cattle, and will (henceforth) walk crooked. Therefore the order (praisha) to repeat the mantras, as well as the Yâjyâ verse (at the end of which the Vashatkâra occurs) should be preceded by a Rik verse.<sup>8</sup> Thus they will not have the Vâch wearied, tired, sinking beneath her load, faltering in her voice, nor will they fall from the line of sacrifice which should not be broken, nor from the sacrifice, nor from the prâṇa, nor from Prajâpati, nor from the cattle, nor walk crooked.

<sup>5</sup> This refers to the circumstance that at the common Soma sacrifices, such as the Agnishtoma, the Rituvâja mantra for the Adhvaryu and the sacrificer are repeated by the Hotar, and not by the Adhvaryu and the sacrificer themselves. But at a Sattra, to which class of sacrifices the Dyausâśula belongs, this is not allowed; each must act for himself, each member of the body of priests who are performing a Sattra, being alternately priest and sacrificer. The Rituvâja mantras in the Adhvaryu and sacrificer are the eleventh and twelfth in order. See the note on page 135-36.

(On the nature and meaning of the Paruchhepa verses.)

They place at the two first libations a Paruchhepa verse (one seen by the Rishi Paruchhepa) before each of the Yâjvâs, which are repeated by the seven Hotârs in their order (the so-called prasthitas).<sup>9</sup> The name of their metre is Rohita. By means of it Indra ascended the seven heavens. Thus he who has this knowledge ascends the seven heavens. They say, Verses which consist of five padas (steps) are a characteristic of the fifth day, and such ones as consist of six padas are fit for the sixth day, why then are metres of seven padas (as the Rohita is) recited on the sixth day? (The reason is) By six steps the sixth day is reached; but by cutting off, as it were, the seventh day (by taking it single) they settle with the seventh step down (in heaven after having reached it by six). Thus they regain the Vâch for the connection (of the whole). Those who are possessed of such a knowledge have the three days connected and unbroken.

<sup>9</sup> Previous to the recital of every Yâjyâ, one of the Paruchhepa verses is to be repeated. These are, vrishann indra vrisha pîvava indavah (1, 139, 6-11) and pibâ somam indra suvinam (1, 140, 2-10).

11.

(On the origin of the Paruchhepa verses.)

The Devas and Asuras waged war in these worlds. The Devas turned the Asuras by means of the sixth day's ceremonies out of these worlds. The Asuras seized all things which they could grasp, took them and threw them into the sea. The Devas following them behind <sup>10</sup> seized by means of this metre (of the Paruchhepa verses which have seven padas) all they (the Asuras) had grasped. Just this pada, viz. the additional pada (the seventh in the Paruchhepa verses) became a hook for the purpose of gathering the treasures (thrown into the sea by the Asuras). Therefore he who has this knowledge deprives his enemy of his fortune and turns him out of all these worlds.

12.

The characteristics of the sixth day. The Shastras of the morning and midday libations.)

Heaven (Dyâus) is the leading deity of the sixth day. The Stoma is the thirty-three-fold, the Sâman Raivâtam, Atichhandâs the metre. What has the same end (refrain) is a characteristic of the sixth day.

29 s

The sixth day has the same characteristics as the third, viz. the words, as'va, antu end, repetition, consnance, cohabitation, paryagsta (set), three, what h the form of anta; the mentioning of the deity in t last pada, an allusion to that world (heaven). The peculiar characteristics of this sixth day are, th Paruchhepa hymns comprising seven padas, th Naras'añsam, the Nābhānedishtham, the Raivata the Atichhandāh, and the past tense.

Ayam jāyata manusho dharimāni (1, 128) is th Ajya Shastra, which is a Paruchhepa hymn, a Atichandāh (a metre exceeding the normal measure comprising seven padas, which is a characteristic of the sixth day).

The Pra-uga Shastra consists of the following verses, which all are Paruchhepa, and Atichandāh comprising seven padas: sīrṇam barhīr upa no yāt vātaye (1, 135, 1-3); ā vām ratho niyutrān (1, 136, 4-6); sushumā yatam adribhīr (1, 137, 1-3); yurān stonebhīr devayanto (1, 139, 4-6); avar maha (1, 139, 6-7); astu s'rāushol (1, 139, 1); o shu no agne s'r nūhi trām īlitō (1, 139, 7); ye devāso diry ekalas (1, 139, 11); iyam adadād rabhasam (6, 61, 1-3).

Sa pūrvyō mahānām (8, 52, 1-3) is the beginning of the Marutvatīya Shastra, because mahan is a word in anta (acc. mahāntam), and anta, i. e. end, is a characteristic of the sixth day, being the end (the last of the second series of three days). The verses, Traya indrasya Soma (8, 2, 7-9); Indra nedī edihī (Vāl. 5, 5-6); pru nīnam Brahmanaspatir (40, 5-6); Agnir netā (3, 20, 4); tram Soma krat bhīh (1, 91, 2); pinxanti apō (1, 64, 6); and nak sudāsō ratham are the extension (ālānah of the Marutvatīya Shastra) and identical with those of the third day.

Yam tram ratham indra medhasātaye (1, 129) is a Paruchhepa hymn in the Atichandāh metre, con-sting of seven padas. Sa yo vṛishâ vṛishnyeḥhih (100) is the hymn whose verses have the same refrain<sup>11</sup> (samānodarka). Indra Marutvâ iha pâhi (51, 7) is the hymn<sup>12</sup> which contains an anta (a participle of present tense form in ant, or its equivalent) in the words (verse 9), teḥhih sâkam pibatu itrahâdah; because vṛitrakhâdô (âdô being taken equivalent to anta) is the anta, and the sixth day is the end (anta). By means of this hymn, which is in the Trisṭubh metre, the Hotar keeps through its adas which remain firm, the libation in its proper place, preventing it from falling. Ayañ ha yena (10, 65, 4-6) is the triplet which serves as a setting, for in its words, sva marutvatâ jitam there is an anta, ita is an anta.<sup>13</sup> These verses are in the Gâyatrî metre; the Gâyatrîs are the leading metres at the midday libation during these three days. The Nivid is put in the leading metre; thence the Hotar puts the Nivid in the Gâyatrî metre.

The verses, revatîr na sadhamâde (1, 30, 13-15), and revân id (8, 2, 13-15) form the Raivata Prishtha (the Raivaita Sâma), which is used on a Bṛihat day, to which the sixth day belongs. The verse yad vâvâna is the invariable Dhâyyâ. By "tvâm iddhi kavāmahé" (6, 46, 1-2) which follows the Dhâyyâ, the Hotar returns all to the womb of the Bṛihat Sâma; for this is a Bṛihat day according to its position. Indram id devatâtaya (8, 3, 5-6) is the Sâma<sup>14</sup> ragâtha which has the characteristic of ninṛita (has consonance).<sup>14</sup> Tyam ū shu vâjinam is the invariable Târکشya.

(The remainder of the Nishkevalya Shastra and the Shastras of the evening libation.)

Endra yâhy upa nah (1, 130) is the Paruchhepa hymn, in the Atichandâh metre, comprising seven padas. Pra gha nã asya (2, 15) is the hymn whose several verses have the same refrain.<sup>15</sup> In the hymn abhâr eko rayipate (6, 31), the words occur (verse 5) ratham âtishtha tvaînimna bhîmam; in the word sthâ "to stand," marks an end (standing being the end of going) which is a characteristic of the sixth day. By means of this hymn, which is in the Trishtubh metre, the Hotar keeps, through its padas which remain firm, the libation in its proper place, preventing it from falling. Upa no huribhîh stutam (8, 82, 31-33) is the setting which has the same refrain. It is in the Gâyatri metre, which is the leading one of the midday libation of the three (latter) days. Therefore the Nivid is to be placed in it. Abhi tyañ devam Savitâram (Vaj. Sañh. 4, 25) is the beginning of the Vais'vadeva Shastra, in the Atichanda metre. Tat Savitur varenyam (3, 62, 10-11) and doshô agât form the sequel, because gata, i. e. gone, signifies an end, which is a characteristic of the sixth day.

Ud u shya devah savitâ savâya (2, 38) is the (Nivid) hymn for Savitar; the words therein, s'as'vattamam tadapa vahnir asthât, contain an anta, for sthita, i. e. standing is an anta.

Katarâ pûrvâ (1, 185, 1) is the (Nivid) hymn for Dyâvâprithivî, whose verses have the same refrain.<sup>16</sup>

Kim u s'reshtha kim yavishthô (1, 161) and upa no râjâ adhvaram ribhuksha (4, 37) form the Arbhavam

varâs'aṃsam hymns, in which the term "three" curs, being a characteristic of the third day.

The two hymns Idam itthâ râudram (10, 61), and yajñena dakṣhīṇayâ samaktâ (10, 62) form the is'vadeva (Nâbhânedishṭha) hymns.

(The story of Nâbhânedishṭha, the son of Manu.)

He recites the Nâbhânedishṭham. Nâbhânedishṭha is a son of Manu, who was given to the sacred study (after his investiture in the house of his Guru);<sup>17</sup> his brothers deprived him of his share of the paternal property. He went (to them) and said, "what portion is left to me?" They answered, "Go to the adjudicator<sup>18</sup> and arbitrator." By "adjudicator and arbitrator" they meant their father. He went to his father and said, "They have divided the property including my share among themselves." His father answered, "My dear son, do not mind that. There are the Angirasah just engaged in holding their sacrificial session (Sattrâ) for going to heaven. As often as they commence the ceremonies on the sixth day, they are puzzled (frustrated in their design). Let them recite on the sixth day those two hymns (abovementioned, Rigveda 10, 61-62), then they will give thee the sum of a thousand which contributed by all the sacrificers who participate in the sacrificial session,<sup>19</sup> when they go to heaven." He said, "Well, let it be so." He then went to them, saying, "Receive me, the son of Manu, among you, O ye wise!" They said, "What dost thou wish, that thou speakest thus?" He answered,

"I will show you how to perform the sixth day, then give me the reward for the sacrificial session of a thousand (cows or other valuables), when you go up to heaven." They said, "Well, let it be so." He made them recite on the sixth day those two hymns; then they became aware of the Yajna (the sacrifice regarded as a person, leading to heaven), and of the heaven-world. Therefore the Hotar recites those two hymns on the sixth day, in order that the sacrificer might become aware of the sacrifice, and to have subsequently pointed out the heaven-world. When they were going up, they said, "This thousand, O Brâhmana, belongs to thee." When he was putting all together (the thousand pieces), a man clothed in a blackish (dirty) dress<sup>20</sup> alighted and approaching him, said, "This is mine; I have left it here." He answered, "The Angirasa have given it to me." The man said "Then it belongs to either of us, thy father may decide." He went to his father. He asked him, "Have they not, my dear son, given you (the reward)?" He said, "They have given me; but a man clothed in a blackish dress alighted, and approaching me, said, 'this is mine, I have left it here.' So saying, he took it." The father said, "It is his, my dear son! but he will give it to thee." He went back to him, and said, "Sir, this belongs only to you; so says my father." He said, "I give it to thee, because you have spoken the truth (i. e. acknowledged that it is my property)." Therefore a man who is learned must speak only the truth. This is the mantra of "the thousand gifts," the Nâbhânedishtha hymn. Upon that man who has this knowledge a thousand gifts shower, and he gets a glimpse of heaven by means of the sixth day.

15.

(On the auxiliary Shastras at the evening libation, Nâbhânedishṭha, Vâlahhilyâ, the Sukîrti hymn, Vrihâkapi, and Evayâmarut. The Agnimâruta Shâstra of the sixth day. See 6, 27-30.)

The Hotar ought to repeat these Shastras which are called the accompaniments (of the others on the sixth day), viz. the Nâbhânedishṭham, Vâlahhilyâ, Vrihâkapi and Evayâmaruta only as auxiliaries (to the Vaisvadeva-Shâstra). If the Hotar foregoes only one of them, (these additional Shastras) the sacrificer will lose something. If he foregoes the Nâbhânedishṭham, then the sacrificer will lose his semen; if he foregoes the Vâlahhilyâs, then the sacrificer will lose his breath; if he foregoes the Vrihâkapi, the sacrificer will lose his soul, and if he foregoes the Evayâmaruta, then he will turn the sacrificer out of his divine and human position. By means of the Nâbhânedishṭham, he (the priest) poured the semen into the sacrificer; by means of the Vâlahhilyâ verses he transformed them (to make an embryo). By means of the hymn <sup>21</sup> by Sukîrti, the son of Kakshîvat, he made the womb set forth the child, because therein (in the first verse is said), "Let us rejoice in thy shelter, Indra! (just as people find pleasure in a large commodious room)." Thence the child (garbha) though being larger does not damage the womb which is (much) smaller. If the womb is prepared by (this) sacred hymn (Brahma, the Sukîrti hymn), then the Hotar imparts to the sacrificer the faculty of walking by means of the Evayâmaruta hymn (5, 87). If he has done all required for making the sacrificer walk, then he walks (he has obtained the faculty of walking).

Ahas'cha krishnam ahar arjunam (6, 9, 1-3) is the beginning of the Agnimâruta Shâstra, because ahas

ahas is a repetition, and a consonance, which is a characteristic of the sixth day. Madhvo vo náma márutam yajatrâ (7, 57) is the Maruta hymn. Here is the plural (because the Marutas are many) to be urged; because the plural is an anta, and this is a characteristic of the sixth day.

Jâtavedase sunavâma (1, 99, 1) is the invariable Jâtavedâs verse. Sa prathathâ sahasâ (1, 96, 1) is the (Nivid) hymn for Jâtavedâs, whose verses have the same refrain, which is a characteristic of the sixth day.

The priest, apprehending the anta, i. e. ends of the sacrifice, might fall down, keeps them up by repeating twice the word dhârayan,<sup>22</sup> i. e. they may hold, just as one ties and unties successively the ends of a cord,<sup>23</sup> or just as one (a tanner) is driving in the end of a (wetted) skin a peg in order to keep it (expanded). It is done to keep the sacrifice uninterrupted. Those who have such a knowledge have the three days continuous and unbroken (undisturbed).

THIRD CHAPTER.

(The characteristics and Shastras of the seventh and eighth days.)

16.

(The characteristics of the seventh day. The Shastras of the morning and midday libation.)

The terms â and prâ are the characteristics of the seventh day. The seventh day is just like the first, yukta, ratha, â's'u, piba, the deity mentioned in the first pada, the allusion to this world (earth), jâta, anirukta, karishyat (future), these are the characteristics of the seventh day.

Samudrâd ūrmim (10, 123, 2) is the Ajya hymn. Here is something hidden (aniruktam, i. e. not explicitly stated) which is a characteristic of the seventh day. In the sea (Samudra) is Vâch; because neither the sea becomes (ever) extinct, nor Vâch. Thence this (hymn) is the Ajya (Shas-tra) of the seventh day. From the Yajna (sacrifice) only, the Hotar thus extends the sacrifice,<sup>1</sup> and thus they recover Vâch again (to continue the sacrifice). The Stomas are at an end, the metres are at an end on the sixth day. Just as (at the parśapūrnāmāsa Ishṭi) they cause to drip upon the pieces of sacrificial food drops of melted butter (ājya), in order to make them hot again<sup>2</sup> for recovering its essence already gone; in the same way they recover the Stomas and metres for regaining (the essence of) the sacrifice again by this Ajya Shastra of the seventh day. It is in the Trisṭubh metre; because this is the metre at the morning libation during the (last) three days.

The Pra-uga Shastra consists of the following mantras: ā vāyo bhūsha (7, 92, 1), pratyābhīr yāsi (7, 92, 3), ā no nyudbhīh s'atinir (7, 92; 5), pra sotā iro adhvareṣhy asthāt (7, 92, 2), ye vāyava indra māda (7, 92, 4), vā vām satam (7, 91, 6),<sup>3</sup> pra yad vām Muhavarūṇā (6, 67, 9-11), ā gomatā nāsatyā (7, 72, 1-3) ā no deva s'arasā (7, 30, 1-3), pra ro pjarsu (7, 43, 1-3), pra kshodasā dhāyasā (7, 95, 1-3). In these verses there are the characteristics of the seventh day, ā and pra, contained. They are in the Trishtubh metre, because this is the metre at the morning libation during the (last) three days.

A trā ratham yathotaya (8, 57, 1-2), idam vasa sutam andah (8, 2, 1-2), Indra nediya ed ihi (Vāl. 5, 5-6), praitu Brahmanaspatir (1, 40, 3-4), Agnir netā (3, 20, 4), tvam soma kratubhih (1, 91, 2), pinranty apah (1, 64, 6), pra ra indrāya brihate (8, 78, 3) are the extension (of the Marutvatīya Śhastīa) of the seventh day, identical with that of the first.

In the hymn, Kayā s'ubhā savayasah (1, 165, 9th verse) in the words na jāyamāno naśate na jāta the term jāta occurs, which is one of the characteristics of the seventh day. This is the Kayās'ubhīya hymn which effects unanimity (among people) and prolongs life. By means of it Indra Agastya, and the Maruts became (unanimous). By reciting the Kayas'ubhīyam hymn, the Hlota produces unanimity. But it bears upon the prolongation of life also. Who desires that, may have repeated the Kayās'ubhīyam. It is in the Trishtubh metre. By means of its pada which remains firm the Hotar keeps the libation in its proper place preventing it from falling down.

The hymn, tyam su mesham mahayā (1, 52) contain (in the second pada of the first verse) the word atyam na vājam haranasyadañratham, the term ratha i. e. carriage, being a characteristic of the seventh day. It is in the Jagatī metre, for the Jagatīs are the leading metres at the midday libation of these three last days. The Nivid is placed in that metre which is the leading; thence one places (here) the Nivid in the Jagatīs.

The hymns representing cohabitation are now repeated; they are in the Trishtubh and Jagatī metres. Because cattle is represented by cohabitation and the Chandomâs<sup>4</sup> are cattle and calculated for obtaining cattle. Tvâm iddhi havâmahe, and tvam hy ehi

<sup>4</sup> The Chandomâs are three peculiar Stomas, which are required on the three last days of Navarâtra, or the seventh, eighth, and ninth days of the Dvâdasâha and the name of these three days themselves. They are minutely described in the Tândya Brahmanam 3, 8-13. These Stomas are, the twenty-four-fold (chaturvîṃśā), the forty-four-fold (chatus'chatvârîṃśā), and the forty-eight-fold (aṣṭâchaturvîṃśā). The verses required for chanting the Chandomâs on the three last days of Navarâtra are (according to the Udgatî prayoga of the Dvâdasâha) all put together in the second part of the Sâmavedârçhikam, commencing with the second Shloka of the fourth Prapâthaka (prâ kâryam usânera), and ending with the fifth Prapâthaka (with the verse Yukṣhva hi keśinâ ra). The order is, on the seventh day all Sâma verses are put in a twenty-four-fold Stoma, on the eighth all are chanted according to the forty-four-fold Stoma in three varieties, on the ninth all are put in the forty-eight-fold Stoma, of which there are two varieties enumerated. There is here no change of the Stomas according to libations, as it is in the Agnishtoma and the cognate sacrifices. That Stoma, in which the first Stotram (the Bahish-pavamâna) is intoned, remains in force for the whole day. The Bahish-pavamânas all three days, generally contain as many verses as the Stoma in which they are intoned. So, for instance, the Bahish-pavamâna of the seventh day consists of 24 verses (Sâmaveda ii. 465-88), for the twenty-four-fold Stoma is reigning during this day; the Bahish-pavamâna of the eighth day consists of forty-four verses (Sâmaveda ii. 524-67), for the Stoma reigning during this day is the forty-four-fold, &c. The four Sâmans which follow the Bahish-pavamâna Stotras at the midday libation are called âjyâni, the four which follow the Bahish-pavamâna Stotras at the evening libation are called ukthâni. Now the âjyâni, prishthâni and ukthâni generally consist only either of three or even only two verses. If they consist of only two verses, they are to be made three, just as is the case with the Rathantara, Nândhasa, and Kârya Prishtha at the Agnishtoma. The three verses then are, in three turns, so often to be repeated, as to yield twenty-four, forty-four, or forty-eight. Each turn of the twenty-four-fold Stoma contains, for instance, eight verses, in three divisions, in the following way:—

I. 8—a, 3; b, 4; c, 1: II. 8—a, 1; b, 3; c, 4: III. 8—a, 4; b, 1; c, 3.

In the forty-four-fold Stoma the repetitions are arranged in the following way:—

I. 15—a, 3; b, 11; c, 1: II. 14—a, 1; b, 3; c, 10: III. 15—a, 1; b, 1; c, 3.

cherave (8, 50, 1-2) form the Bṛihat Prishṭha on the seventh day. The same Prishṭhas take place as on the sixth day. The Vairūpam (Sâma) belongs to the Rathantaram; the Vairâjam to the Bṛihat; the Sâkvaram to the Rathantaram, and the Raivatam to the Bṛihat. Therefore (because the Raivatam representing the Bṛihat was chanted on the sixth day) the Bṛihat Prishṭha takes place (on the seventh day); for they fasten through that Bṛihat (of the sixth day) the Bṛihat (of the seventh day) to prevent the cutting off of the Stomas; for if the Rathantaram (which is opposed to the Bṛihat) is used, then the union (of the sixth and seventh days) is destroyed. Therefore only the Bṛihat is to be used (on the seventh day).

Yad vâvâna is the immovable Dhâyyâ. B the subsequent recital of the Rathantaram abhitrâ sūra nonumah the Hotar brings all back to the womb; for this is a Rathantara day according to its position. Pihâ sutasya rasinah (8, 3, 1-2) is the Sâma Pragâtha, which has piba, one of the characteristics of the seventh day. Tyam ū shu vâjinam is the invariable Târکشya.

17

(The remainder of the Nishkevalya Shastra. The Shastras of the evening libation.)

Indrasya nu vîryûni (1, 32) is a hymn which has the characteristic word pru of the seventh day. It is

---

The forty-eight-fold Stoma is as follows :—

I. 16—a, 3; b, 12; c, 1: II. 16—a, 1; b, 3; c, 12: III. 16—a, 12; b, 1; c, 3.

The forty-eight-fold Stoma is the last of the Stomas; thence it is called anta. The Chandomâh are said to have the animal form. According to the Tândya Brâhmin. (3, 8) the animals have eight hoofs, thence are eight verses required in each turn when the twenty-four-fold Stoma is made; or they are said (3, 12) to consist of sixteen pieces; thence are sixteen verses in each turn required when the forty-eight-fold Stoma is made.

the Trishtubh metre. By means of the pādas which remain firm, the Hotar keeps the libation in its proper place, preventing it from falling down.

Abhi tyam mesham puruhûtam (1, 51, 1) is a hymn which pra is replaced by abhi, forming a characteristic of the seventh day. It is in the Jagatî metre, because the Jagatîs are the leading metre at the midday libation. Therefore the Nivid is to be placed at it.

These hymns representing cohabitation are now repeated, which are in the Trishtubh and Jagatî metres; because cohabitation represents cattle, and the Chandomâs represent cattle; (this is done) in order to obtain cattle.

Tat savitar irinîmahe (5, 82, 1-3), adya no deva savitar (5, 82, 3-5) are the beginning and sequel of the Vaisvadeva Shastra in the Rathantara days, on the seventh day. Abhi trâ deva Savitar (1, 24, 3) is the (Nivid) hymn for Savitar, which contains instead of pra the word abhi, which is identical with abhi, a characteristic of the seventh day.

Pretâm yajñasya (2, 41, 19) is the (Nivid) hymn for Yavaprithivî, which contains the word pra. Āyam yajñamava (1, 20) is the (Nivid) hymn for the bhū, which contains the word jan, to be born.

He repeats now the verses, consisting of two pādas, commencing āyāhi ranasā saha, (10, 172, 1); for man has two feet, and animals have four; animals are represented by the Chandomâs. (This is done) for obtaining cattle. If he repeats these verses which consist of two feet, then he places the sacrificer, who has two legs, among the four-footed cattle.<sup>5</sup>

Abhir agne duro (1, 14) is the (Nivid) hymn for Visvedevâh, which has the characteristic ā of the seventh day. It is in the Gâyatî metre; for the third libation is headed by the Gâyatri during these three days.

Viśvānaro ajīmat is the beginning of the Agni-mâruta Shastra, which contains the word jan to be born. Pra yad vas trishṭubham (8, 7) is the (Nivid) hymn for the Marutas, which has the word pra. Jâtavedase sunavâma (1, 99, 1) is the invariable Jâtavedâs verse. Dâtam vo viśvavedasam (4, 8) is the (Nivid) hymn for Jâtavedâs, where the name (Jâtavedâs) is not explicitly mentioned (only hinted at). All these are in the Gâyatri metre; for the third libation on these three days is headed by the Gâyatri.

18.

(The characteristics of the eighth day. The Shastra of the morning and midday libations.)

Neither the words â nor pra, but what is "standing" is the characteristic of the eighth day; because the eighth is identical with the second. The characteristics are, ârdhva, prati, antar, vrishan, and the mentioning of the deity in the middle pâda, allusion to the airy region, twice the name Agni (the same pâda), the words muhad, vihûta, pa the present tense.

Agnim vo deram ajñibhiḥ (7, 3) is the Ajya of the eighth day; because it contains twice the word â. It is in the Trishṭubh metre; for the Trishṭubh is the leading metre at the morning libation during these three days. The Pra-nga Shastra is composed of the following verses: Kucid anga namasû (7, 91), pîro annân (7, 91, 3), uchhan uṣhasah (7, 91), usântâ dûtâ (7, 91, 2), yâxat taras (7, 91), prati vâm sûra udîte (7, 65, 1-3), dhenuh prath (3, 58, 1-3), Brahmâna indropa (7, 28, 1-3), agnih sumatim (7, 39, 1-3), uta syâ nah sara (7, 95, 4-6). In these verses are the character ratī, antar, vihīta, urdhvāi contained; they are in the Trishtubh metre, which is the leading metre at the morning libation on these three days.

The extension (of the Marutvatiya Shastra) consists of the following verses: Viśvānarasya vaspatim (8, 57, 4), Indra it Somapā ekah (8, 2, 4), Indra medhya ed ihī (Vāl. 5, 5-6), uttishṭha 1.rahmanaspate (1, 40, 1-2), agnir netā, tvam Soma kratubhih, pinvanti apo, bṛihad incirāya gāyata. This Shastra is identical with that of the second day.

Now follow the Mahadvat hymns, i. e. such ones as contain the word mahat great. (These are) suñsā ahām (3, 49), mahas'chit tram (1, 169), pibā somam bhīyam (6, 17, in the words īrvam gavyam mahi), ahām indro nrivat (6, 19). This hymn is in the Trishtubh metre; by means of its pādas which remain in the Hotar keeps the libation in its proper place, preventing it from falling down.

Tam asya dyāvā prithivī (10, 113) is a mahadvat hymn also; for in the second pāda of the first verse the word mahimāno occurs. It is in the Jagatī metre. The Jagatīs are the leading metres at the midday libation during the three last days (abovementioned). Hence the Nivid is placed in it. These hymns represent cohabitation; they are in the Trishtubh and Jagatī metres, for cattle is represented by cohabitation, and for obtaining cattle, the mahadvat hymns are repeated. The air is mahad; in order to obtain the airy region, five hymns (there are five, four in Trishtubh, and one in Jagatī) are required. For the Pañkti metre comprises five pādas, the sacrifice belongs to this metre, cattle belong to it; cattle is represented by the Chandomās.

Abhi tvā s'ūra nonumah, and abhi tvā pūrvapītaye in the Rathantaram Prishtham of the eighth day. Ad vācānu is the invariable Dhāyyā. By tvām Abhi harāmahe all is brought back to the womb; for this day is a Bârhata day according to its position. Ubhayaṁ sriṇarachcha (8, 50, 1-2) is the Sām Pragâtha; the meaning of ubhayaṁ, i. e. both, i. it is, what is to-day and what was yesterday. This is a characteristic of the eighth day, which is Brihat day. Tyam ūshu vâjinam is the invariable Târkshya.

19.

(The Mahadvat hymns of the Nishkeralya Shastra
The Shastrus of the evening libation.)

The five Mahadvat hymns are, apîrvyâ purutamâni (6, 32), tâm su te kîrtim (10, 54), tvam mahâ-Indra yo ha (1, 63), tvam mahân indra tubhyam
(4, 17). These (four) hymns are in the Trishtubh metre; by means of its pādas which remain firm, the Hotar keeps the libation in its proper place, preventing it from falling down. The fifth is in the Jagat metre, viz. divas'chid asya varimâ (1, 55), which contains in the words, indram na mahná the term maha great. For obtaining cattle these Mahadvat hymns are repeated. The air is mahat, and for obtaining the airy region two times five hymns must be repeated. Because a Pañkti (a collection of five hymns) has five feet, the Yajna consists of five parts cattle consist of five parts. Twice five make ten; this decade is Virât, Virât is food, cattle are food, the Chandomâs are cattle.

Viśro devasya netus (5, 50, 1), tat savitur varenyam
ā vis'vederam saptatim (5, 82, 7-8), are the beginning and sequel of the Vaisvadeva Shastra. Hiranyapadūṭaye (1, 22, 5-7) which contains the word śrīdhra, the (Nivid) hymn for Savitar. Mahī dyāuh prithichana (1, 22, 13-15) is the (Nivid) hymn for Dyāvā prithivī, which contains the word mahat. Yuvā-

Sāy.—The five Mahadvat hymns of the Marutvatīya, and the of the Nishkeralya Shastras are to be understood.

ṛitārā punar (1, 20, 4-8) is the (Nivid) hymn for the Ribhus, which has the characteristic word "punah."

Imā nu kam bhuvanā (10, 157) is the hymn which contains only verses of two feet.<sup>7</sup> For man has two feet, whilst the animals have four, and by means of this hymn he places the two-footed sacrificer among the four-footed cattle. Devānām id avo mahad (8, 72, 1) is the (Nivid) hymn for the Viśvedevās, which contains the term mahat. These verses are in the Gâyatrî metre (except the Dvipāds), because the Gâyatrî is the leading metre at the evening libation during these three (last) days.

By ritāvānam vaiśvānaram (As'v. S'r. S. 8, 10), commences the Agnimâruta Shashtra; because in the words agnir vaiśvānaro mähôn, there is the word mahat contained. Krîlam vah s'ardho mârutam (1, 37) is the (Nivid) hymn for the Marutas; because it contains (in the fifth verse) the word varridhe, which is a characteristic of the eighth day.

Jâtaveduse sunavāma is the invariable Jâtavedâs verse. Agne mrîṣa mahân asi (4, 9) is the (Nivid) hymn for Jâtavedâs; it contains the characteristic term mahad. All these verses are in the Gâyatrî metre, which is the (leading) metre at the evening libation during these three (last) days.

FOURTH CHAPTER.

The ninth and tenth days of the Dvâdasâha. Conclusion of this sacrifice.)

20.

The characteristics of the ninth day. The Shastras of the morning and midday libations.)

What has the same refrain, is a characteristic of the ninth day. This day has the same characteristics as the third, viz. as'ra, anta, punarāvrittam, punar nirittam, rata, pariyasta, the number three, antarīpa the mentioning of the deity in the last pada, an allusion to that world, s'uchi splendour, satya truth

ksheti to reside, gata gone, oka house, the past tense.

Aganma mahā namasā (7, 12, 1) is the Ajya hymn of the ninth day, because it contains the word "gone" (in aganma we went), it is in the Trishtubh metre.

The Pra-uga Shastra consists of the following verses: pra virayā (7, 90, 1), te te satyāna manusā
(7, 90, 5), divi kshayanta (7, 64, 1), ā viś'va vāri
(7, 70, 1-3), ayam soma indra tubhyam sunva (7, 29, 1-3), pra Bráhmaṇo (7, 42, 1-3), Sarasvatīm decayan- to (10, 17, 7-9), ā no divo brihataḥ (5, 43, 11-13), Sarasvaty abhi no (6, 61, 14-16). These verses have the characteristics, s'uchi, i. e. splendour; satya, i. e.
truth; ksheti, i. e. residence; gata, i. e. gone; oka, i. e. house. They are in the Trishtubh metre, which is the (leading) metre at the morning libation, during the three (last) days.

The extension (of the Marutvatīya Shastra) is the same as on the third day. The five hymns representing cohabitation which contain the characteristics of this day, and represent cattle, are, Indra sváhá
pibatu (3, 50); sváhá here is an anta; gáyat sáma- nabhanyam (1, 173), which contains an anta in the word svar; tishsthá havi ratha (3, 35), which contains an anta in sthá to stand; ima utvá purutam- asya (6, 21), which contains an anta in rathestha.
These four are in the Trishtubh metre. The fifth is in the Jagatī metre, pra mandine pitumat (1, 101), whose verses have the same refrain. The Jagatī being the leading metre on the three (last) days, the Nivid is to be put in them. These hymns in the Trishtubh and Jagatī metres are repeated as (representing) cohabitation. For cattle is cohabitation; the Chandomās are cattle. (This is done) for obtaining cattle. Five (such) hymns are repeated. For the Pañkti consists of five pādas; the sacrifice has the nature of the Pañkti, and so have cattle (also); the Chandomāḥ are cattle, (this is done) for obtaining cattle.

Trām iddhi havāmahe and tvām hyehi chраве, form the Brihat Prishtha. Yad vāvāna is the invariable Dāyā. By abhī tvā s'īra nonumo all is brought to the womb, because the ninth day is a Rathantara day according to its position. Indra tridhātu s'araṇam i, 46, 9-10 is the Sāma Pragātha containing the characteristic "three." (The Tārکشya just as on the other days.)

21.

The remainder of the Nishkevalya Shastra. The Shastras of the evening libation.)

There are five other pair-hymns enumerated, the four first are in the Trishtubh, the fifth in the Jagat metre. These are, saṁ cha tre jagmur (6, 34), which contains the word "gone;" kudā bhuvan (6, 35) which contains the word "kshī" to reside (in bhayanī), which is an autarūpa, "he resides, as it were, gone to an end (having gained his object)," satya yātu (4, 16) which contains satya truth, tat indriyam paramam (1, 103), which contains an anta in the word "paramam" i. e. highest. Ahañ uram (10, 48, 1), which contains an anta in jayāmi, conquer.<sup>1</sup>

The commencement and sequel of the Vaisvadeva shastra is, tat Savitur vriṇmahe, and adyā no deva aritar. (The Nivid) hymn for Savitar is dosho yāt (?) The (Nivid) hymn for Dyāvâprithivî is, tvām mahi dyavî abhi (4, 56, 5-7).

Indra ishe dadātu nah (8, 82, 34), te no ratnāni (1, 20, 7-8) form the (Nivid) hymn for the Ribhus, the words trir āsaptāni (1, 20, 7) contain the characteristic "three." Babhrur eko nishunah (8, 29) is the Dvipadā. By repeating a Dvipād, the Hotar puts the two-legged sacrificer among the four-legged animals. Ye triṁsati trayas para (8, 28) is the (Nivid) hymn for the viśvedevāh, because it contains the term "three." Vaiśvánaro na ūtaye (As'v Sr'. S. 8, 11) is the Pratipad of the Agnimāruta Shastra; it contains the term parāvatah, which is an anta.

Maruto yasya hi kshaya (1, 86) is the (Nivid) hymn for the Marutas. It contains the term kshi to reside, which is an antarūpam; for one resides, as it were after having gone to a (certain) object.

The (Nivid) hymn for Jâtavedâs īs, prâgnaye râchan îraya (10, 187) (each verse of which ends with) sa nai parshad ati dvishah, i. e. may he (Agni) overcome our enemies, and bring (safely our ceremonies) to a conclusion. He repeats this refrain twice. For in this Navarâtra sacrifice (which is lasting for nine days there are so many ceremonies, that the committal c a mistake is unavoidable. In order to make good (any such mistake, the pâda mentioned must be repeated twice). By doing so, the Hotar makes the (the priests and sacrificers) free from all guilt. These verses are in the Gâyatri metre; for the Gâyatri is the (leading) metre at the evening libation during the three (last) days.

22.

(To what the different parts of the Dvâdasâha are be likened. The tenth day.)

The six Prishtha days (the six first in the Dvâdasâha) represent the mouth; the Chandomâh days from the seventh to the ninth, are then what in the mouth, as tongue, palate, and teeth; but that by which one produces articulate sounds of speech, or by which one distinguishes the sweet and not sweet, this is the tenth day. Or the six Prishtha days are comparable to the nostrils, and what is between them, to the Chandomâh days; but that by which one discerns the different smells, this is the tenth day. Or the six Prishtha days are comparable to the eye; the Chandomâh are then the black in the eye, and the tenth day then is the pupil of the eye, by which one sees. Or the six Prishtha days are comparable to the ear; while the Chandomâh represent what is in the ear; but by what one ears, that is the tenth day.

The tenth day is happiness; those who enter on the tenth day, enter on happiness, therefore silence must be kept during the tenth day; for "we shall not bespeak the (goddess of) fortune,"<sup>2</sup> because a happy thing is not to be spoken to.

Now the priests walk, clean themselves, and proceed to the place of the sacrificer's wife (patniśāh).<sup>3</sup> That one of the priests, who should know his invocation offering (āhuti), shall say:

"Hold one another;" then he shall offer the oblation by repeating the mantra "here be thou happy, ere be ye happy, here may be a hold, here may be hold for all that is yours;<sup>4</sup> may Agni carry it (the sacrifice) up! Svâhâ!<sup>5</sup> may he take it up!"

When he says, "be happy here," then he makes happy (joyful) all those (sacrificers) who are in this

<sup>4</sup> All that you have, all your possessions may be upheld and remain the same prosperous state.

world. When he says, "enjoy yourselves," then he makes joyful their offspring in these worlds. When he says, "here may be a hold, a hold for all that is yours," then he provides the sacrificers with children and speech (the power of speech). By the word "may Agni carry it up" (rát) the Rathantaram Sâman is to be understood, and by "Svâhâ! may he carry it up!" the Brihat Sâman is meant. For the Rathantaram and Brihat Sâman are the cohabitation of the gods; by means of this cohabitation of the gods one obtains generation; by means of this cohabitation of the gods generation is produced. (This is done) for production. He who has this knowledge obtains children and cattle.

Now they all go and make ablution and proceed to the place of the Agnîdhira. That one who knows the invocation offering (âhuti) shall say, "hold now one another," then he should bring the offering and recite, "he who produced besides us this ground (our) mother, he, the preserver who feeds (us), may preserve in us wealth, vigour, health, and strength, Svâhâ!" Who knowing this, recites this formula, gains for himself, as well as for the sacrificers, wealth, vigour, health, and strength.

23.

(The chanting and repeating of the Serpent mantra The Chaturhotṛi mantra. Its effect. Who ought to repeat it.)

All the other priests (except the Udgâtris) go from thence (the Agnîdhîrîya fire) and proceed to the Sadas (a place in the south-east of the Uttaravedi) all walking each in his own way, in this or that direction. But the Udgâtris walk together. They chant the verses (seen) by the Queen of the Serpent (Sarpa-râjñî); because the earth (iyam) is the Queen of the Serpents, for she is the queen of all the moves (sarpāt). She was in the beginning without hair, as it were (without trees, bushes, &c.) She then saw this mantra, which commences, āyam gāuh prīśnir akramīt (10, 189). In consequence of it, she obtained a motley appearance, she became variegated (being able to produce) any form she might like (such as) herbs, trees, and all (other) forms. Therefore the man who has such a knowledge obtains the faculty of assuming any form he might choose.

The three Udgātris, Prastotar, Udgātar, and Prathartar, repeat their respective parts in their mind (i. e. they do not utter words), but the Hotar repeats aloud with his voice; for Vāch (speech) and Manas (mind) are the cohabitation of the gods. By means of this cohabitation of the gods, he who has such a knowledge obtains children and cattle.

The Hotar now sets forth the Chaturhotri mantras; <sup>6</sup> he repeats them as the Shastra accompanying the Stotram (the chanting of the verses just mentioned) by the Udgātris. The sacrificial name of the deities in the Chaturhotris was concealed. Therefore the Hotar now sets forth these names, and makes public the appropriate sacrificial name of the deities, and brings what has become public, to the public. He who has this knowledge, becomes public (i. e. celebrated).

A Brahman who, after having completed his Vedic studies, should not attain to any fame, should go to a forest; string together the stalks of Dharbā grass, with their ends standing upwards, and sitting on the right side of another Brahman, repeat with a loud voice, the Chaturhotri mantras. (Should he do so, he would attain to fame).

24.

All touch now the branch of an Udumbara tree (which is at the sacrificial compound behind the seat of the Udgâtar) with their hands, thinking, "I touch food and juice;" for the Udumbara tree represents juice<sup>7</sup> and food. At the time that the gods distributed (for the earth) food and juice, the Udumbara tree grew up; therefore it brings forth every year three times ripe fruits. If they take the Udumbara branches in their hands, they then take food and juice. They suppress speech, for the sacrifice is speech; in suppressing the sacrifice (by abstaining from it) they suppress the day; for the day is the heaven-world, and (consequently) they subdue the heaven-world. No speech is allowed during the day; if they would speak during the day, they would hand over the day to the enemy; if they would speak during the night, they would hand over the night to the enemy. Only at the time when the sun has half set, they should speak; for then they leave but this much space (as is between the conjunction of day and night) to the enemy. Or they should speak (only) after the sun has completely set. By doing so, they make their enemy and adversary share in the darkness. Walking round the Ahavanîya fire, they then speak; for the Ahavanîya fire is the sacrifice, and the heaven-world; for by means of the sacrifice, which is the gate of the heaven-world, they go to the heaven-world. By the words, "if we have failed, by omission, or improper application, or by excess, of what is required, all that may go (be taken away) to (our) father, who is Prajâpati," they recommence speaking. For all creatures are born after Prajâpati (he being their creator). Prajâpati, therefore, is the shelter from (the evil consequences of) what is deficient, or in excess (in his creatures); and thence these two faults do no harm to the sacrificers. Therefore all that is deficient or in excess with them who have this knowledge, enters Prajâpati. Thence they should commence speaking by (repeating) this mantra).

25.

The Chaturhotri mantras. The bodies of Prajâpati. The Brahmodyam. The sacrificers take their seats in heaven.)

When the Hotar is about to repeat the Chaturhotri mantra, he cries, "Adhvaryu!" This is the proper form of the âhâva (at this occasion, and not sahsârôm). The Adhvaryu then responds "Om, Hotar! tathâ Hotar!" The Hotar (thereupon) repeats (the Chaturhotri mantras), stopping at each of the ten padas!

- (1) Their sacrificial spoon was intelligence!
- (2) Their offering was endowed with intellect!
- (3) Their altar was speech!
- (4) Their Barhis (seat) was thought!
- (5) Their Agni was understanding!
- (6) Their Agnîdhra was reasoning!
- (7) Their offering (havis) was breath!
- (8) Their Adhvaryu was the Sâman!
- (9) Their Hotar was Vâchaspati!
- (10) Their Maitrâvaruṇa (upa-vakîû) was the mind!
- (11) They (sacrificers) took (with their mind) the Grâha!
- (12) O ruler Vâchaspati, O giver, O name!
- (13) Let us put down thy name!
- (14) May'st thou put down our (names); with (our) names go to heaven (announce our arrival in heaven)!

- (15) What success the gods who have Prajâpati for their master, gained, the same we shall gain!"<sup>8</sup>

The Hotar now reads the Prajâpati tanu (bodies) mantras, and the Brahmodyam.

- (1 & 2) Eater of food, and mistress of food. The eater of food is Agni; the mistress of food is Aditya.

- (3 & 4) The happy and fortunate. By "happy" Soma, and by "fortunate" cattle are meant.

- (5 & 6) The houseless and the dauntless. "Houseless" is Vâyu, who never lives in a house, and "fearless" is Death, for all fear him.

- (7 & 8) The not reached, and not to be reached. "The not reached" is Earth, and "the not to be reached" is Heaven.

- (9 & 10) The unconquerable, and the not to be stopped. "The unconquerable" is Agni, and "the not to be stopped" is Aditya (sun).

- (11 & 12) Who has no first (material) cause (apirra), nor is liable to destruction. "Who has no first (material) cause" is the mind (manas), and "what is not liable to destruction" is the year.

These twelve bodies of Prajâpati make up the whole Prajâpati. On the tenth day one reaches the whole Prajâpati.

They now repeat the Brahmodyam. "Agni is <sup>8</sup> Heaven-world. The gods ascended to heaven by sacrifice. The same is the object of the sacrificers. This is the Graha mantra, recited by the Hotar. Now follow the Prajâpati tanu mantras, and the Brahmodyam. There are twelve Prajâpati tanu mantras; they are repeated by pairs, every time two.

<sup>9</sup> That is, what Brahmins ought to repeat. It begins with the words, Agnir grihapatih and ends with arâtsma. This Brahmodyam is no proper mantra, but a kind of Brâhmanam, or theological exposition. However the whole is repeated by the Hotar as a mantra. See the whole of it also in the As'v. S'r. S. 8, 13.

"the house-father; thus say some, for he is the "master (house-father) of the world (earth). Vâyu "is the house-father, thus say others; for he is the "ruler of the airy region. That one (Aditya, the "sun) is the house-father; for he burns (with his "rays). The Ritus are the houses. He who knows "what god is their (the Ritus') house-father, becomes "their house-father, and succeeds. Such sacrificers
 "are successful (they become masters themselves).
 "House-father (master) becomes he who knows the god who destroys the evil consequences of sin (Aditya, the sun). This house-father destroys the evil consequences of sin and becomes (sole) master.
 These sacrificers destroy the evil consequences of their sin (and say), O Adhvaryu! we have succeeded, we have succeeded!"

FIFTH CHAPTER.

(The Agnihotram. On the duties of the Brahmâ priest.)

26.

(The Agnihotram.<sup>1</sup> When the sacrificer has to order his priest to bring fire to the Ahavaniya. The sixteen parts of the Agnihotram.)

The Agnihotrî says to his Adhvaryu, "Take from (here the Gârhapatya fire) the Ahavaniya fire."
 Thus he says at evening; for what good he was doing during the day, all that is taken away (together with <sup>1</sup> The Agnihotram is a burnt offering of fresh milk brought every day twice during the whole term of life. Before a Brahman can take upon himself to bring the Agnihotram, he has to establish the three sacred fires, Gârhapatya, Dakshina, and Ahavaniya. This ceremony is called Agnyâdhâna. The performers of these daily oblations are called "Agnihotris." They alone are entitled to bring the Ishtis and Soma sacrifices. There are up to this day Agnihotris in the Dakkhan, who may be regarded as the true followers of the ancient the fire and brought) eastwards and put in safety. If he says at morning time, "Take from (here) the Ahavaniya," then he takes with him all the good he was doing during the night, (brings it) eastwards and puts it in safety. The Ahavaniya fire is the sacrifice (sacrificial fire); the Ahavaniya is the heaven-world. He who has this knowledge, places the heaven-world (the real heaven) in the heaven-world, which (is represented by) the sacrifice alone. Who knows the Agnihotram which belongs to all gods, which consists of sixteen parts; and is placed among cattle, is successful by means of it.

What in it (the offering of which the Agnihotram consists) is of the cow (such as milk) belongs to Rudra. What is joined to the calf belongs to Vayu. What is being milked belongs to the Asvins. What has been milked, belongs to Soma. What is put on the fire to boil belongs to Varuna. What bubbles up (in boiling) belongs to Pushan. What is dripping down belongs to the Maruts. What has bubbles, belongs to the Vis'vedevas. The cream (of the milk) gathered, belongs to Mitra. What falls out (of the pot) belongs to Heaven and Earth. What turns up (in boiling) belongs to Savitar. What is seized (and placed in the vessel) belongs to Vishnu. What is placed (on the Vedi) belongs to Brihaspati. The first offering is Agni's, the latter portion is Prajapati's, the offering itself (chief portion) belongs to Indra. This is the Agnihotram, belonging to all gods, which comprises sixteen parts.

27.

(How the priest has to make good certain casualties which may happen when the Agnihotram is offered.)

If the cow of an Agnihotrî,<sup>2</sup> which is joined to the calf, sits down during the time of being milked, what is the penance for it? He shall repeat over it, this mantra, "Why dost thou sit down out of fear? from this grant us safety! protect all our cattle! Praise to Rudra the giver!" (By repeating the following mantra) he should raise her up. "The divine Aditi (cow) rose, and put long life in the sacrifice, she who provides Indra, Mitra, and Varuna with their (respective) shares (in the sacrifice)." Or he may hold on her udder and mouth a vessel filled with water and give her (the cow) then to a Brahman. This is another Prāyas'chitta (penance).

If the cow of an Agnihotrî, which is joined to her self, cries during the time of being milked, how this to be atoned for? If she cries out of hunger, indicate to the sacrificer what she is in need of, then he shall give her more food in order to appease her. For food is appeasing. The mantra sūyacasād bhagnatî (I, 164, 40) is to be repeated. This is the Prāyas'chitta.

If the cow of an Agnihotrî which is joined to her self moves during the time of being milked, what is the Prāyas'chitta? Should she in moving spill (some milk) then he shall stroke her, and whisper (the following words), "What of the milk might have fallen to the ground to-day, what might have gone to the herbs, what to the waters,—may this milk be in my houses, (my) cow, (my) calves, and in me." He shall then bring a burnt offering with what has remained, if it be sufficient for making the burnt offering (Homa).

Should all in the vessel have been spilt (by the moving of the cow) then he shall call another cow, milk her and bring the burnt offering with that milk, and sacrifice it. It is to be offered alone in faith.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> The meaning of the sentence : आत्वे अदाये होतव्यं is : this (substitute) is to be offered (completely) even including the śradhā. This is the formula : अहं अदा जुहोमि i. e. "I offer (this) in faith (as a believing one)."

This is the Prâyas'chitta. He who with such a knowledge offers the Agnihotram, has (only) offerings in readiness (which are fit) and has (consequently) all (accepted by the gods).

28.

(On the meaning of the Agnihotram, if performed in perfect faith. It represents Dakshinâ. The As'vina Shâstra, Mahâvrata, and Agnichayana are hinted at in it.)

That Aditya (the sun) is his (the Agnihotrî's) sacrificial post, the earth is his altar, the herbs are his Barhis (seat of grass), the trees are his fuel, the waters his sprinkling vessels, the directions the wooden sticks laid round about (the hearth). If anything belonging to the Agnihotrî should be destroyed, or if he should die, or if he should be deprived of it, then he should receive all this in the other world, placed, as it were, on the Barhis (sacrificial litter). And the man who, having this knowledge, performs the Agnihotram, will actually obtain (all this).

He brings as Dakshinâ (donation) both gods and men mutually, and everything (the whole world). By his evening offering he presents men to the gods, and the whole world. For men, if being fast asleep without shelter, as it were, are offered as gifts to the gods. By the morning offering he presents the gods as gifts to men, and the whole world. The gods, after having understood the intention (of men that the gods should serve them) make efforts (to do it), saying, "I will do it, I will go." What world the man, who has presented all this property to the gods might gain, the same world gains he who, with this knowledge, performs the Agnihotram.

By offering the evening oblation to Agni, the Agnihotrî commences the As'vina Shâstra (which commences with a verse addressed to Agni). By using the term vâch, i. e. speech (when taking out the Agnihotram) he makes a (pratigara) i. e. response (just as is done at the repetition of a Shastra).

By (thus) repeating every day "Vâch" the Asvina Shastra<sup>4</sup> is recited by Agni at night, for him who, having this knowledge, brings the Agnihotram.

By offering the morning oblation to Aditya, he commences the Mahāvratā<sup>5</sup> ceremony. By using (a term equivalent to) prāṇa i. e. life (when eating the remainder of the Agnihotram) he makes a pratigara (also). By (thus) repeating every day the word "food" (life), the Mahāvratā (Shastram) is recited by Aditya at day for him who, with this knowledge, performs the Agnihotram.

The Agnihotri has to perform during the year 720 evening offerings and also 720 morning offerings, just as many bricks (1440) marked by sacrificial formulas as are required at the Gavām ayanam. He who with such a knowledge brings the Agnihotram, has the sacrifice performed with a Sattrā lasting all the year (and) with Agni Chitya<sup>a</sup> (the hearth constructed at the Chayana ceremony).

<sup>4</sup> The Asvina Shastra is required at the commencement of the ayanam ayanam, when making Atirātra. See 4, 17-11. The author of our Brāhmanam here tries to find out some resemblance between the performance of the evening Agnihotram, and the Asvina Shastra. He finds it in the circumstance, that this offering belongs to Agni (1, 7). Having thus obtained the commencement of the Shastra, he must find out also the pratigara or response which belongs to every Shastra. This he discovers in the formula: vâchâ tvâ hotre which the Agnihotri repeats as often as the offering is taken out for being sacrificed.

<sup>5</sup> This concludes the Gavām ayanam. See the note to 4, 12. The resemblance between the Mahāvratā and the morning Agnishtōma found by our author in the following points: The morning Agnihotram belongs to Aditya, and the Nishkevalya Shastra of the Mahāvratā commences with a mantra addressed to the same deity. In Pratigara he finds in the mantra, annam payo reto smāsu which the Agnihotri repeats as often as he eats the remainder of his offering.

29.

(Whether the morning oblation of the Agnihotri is to be offered before or after sunrise.)

Vṛishas'ushma, the son of Vātazata, the son of Jātukarna, said, "We shall tell this to the gods, that they perform now the Agnihotram, which was brought on both days, (on the evening of the preceding, and the morning of the following day) only every other day." And a girl who was possessed by a Gandharva, spoke thus, "We shall tell it to the Pitaras (ancestors), that the Agnihotram, which was performed on both days, is now performed every other day."

The Agnihotram performed every other day is performed at evening after sunset, and at morning before sunrise. The Agnihotram performed on both days is performed at evening after sunset, and at morning after sunrise. Therefore the Agnihotram is to be offered after sunrise. For he who offers the Agnihotram before sunset, reaches in the twenty-fourth year the Gâyatrî world, but if he brings it after sunrise, in the twelfth. When he brings the Agnihotram before sunrise during two years, then he has actually sacrificed during one year only. But if he sacrifices after sunrise, then he completes the yearly amount of offerings in one year. There fore the Agnihotram is to be brought after sunrise. He who sacrifices after sunset at evening, and after sunrise in the morning, brings the offering in the lustre of the day-night (Ahorâtra). For the night receives light from Agni, and the day from the sun (Aditya). By means of this light the day is illuminated. Therefore he who sacrifices after sunrise, performs the sacrifice only in the light of Ahorâtra that is, he receives the light only once, instead of twice, the offering brought before sunrise belonging to the night, and being illuminated by Agni, not by Aditya).

<sup>a</sup> At each Atirâtra of the Gavâṃ ayanam the so-called Chayana ceremony takes place. This consists in the construction of Uttarâ Vēdi (the northern altar) in the shape of an eagle. About 14 bricks are required for this structure, each being consecrated with a separate Yajus mantra. This altar represents the universe: a tortoise is buried alive in it, and a living frog carried round it afterwards turned out. The fire kindled on this new altar is Agni Chitya. To him are the oblations of flesh and Soma to be given. The whole ceremony is performed by the Adhvaryu alone.

30.

(Several stanzas quoted regarding the necessity to bring the Agnihotram after sunrise.)

Day and night are the two wheels of the year. By means of both he passes the year. He who sacrifices before sunrise, goes by one wheel, as it were, only. But he who sacrifices after sunrise, is going through the year with both wheels, as it were, and reaches his destination soon. There is a sacrificial Gâthâ (stanza) which runs as follows:

"All that was, and will be, is connected with the two Sâmans Brihat and Rathantaram, and subsists through them. The wise man, after having established the sacred hearths (the Agnihotri), shall bring a different sacrifice at day, and a different one at night (i. e. devoted to different deities)."

The night belongs to the Rathantaram, the day to the Brihat. Agni is the Rathantaram, Aditya the Brihat. Both these deities cause him to go to the heaven-world, to the place of splendour (bradhna), who with this knowledge sacrifices (the Agnihotram) after sunrise. Thence it is to be sacrificed after sunrise. Regarding this there is a sacrificial Gâthâ chanted, which runs as follows:

"Just as a man who drives with one pack-horse

"only without purchasing another one, act all those "men who bring the Agnihotram before sunrise."

For all beings whatever follow this deity (Aditya), when he stretches (the arms at sunrise and sunset).
He who has this knowledge, is followed by this deity, after whom all follows, and he follows her. For this Aditya is the "one guest" who lives among those who bring the sacrifice after sunrise. Concerning this there is a Gâthâ (stanza, which runs as follows):

"He who has stolen lotus fibres, and does not "receive (even) one guest on the evening, will "chargè with this guilt the not guilty, and take off
"the guilt from the guilty."

This Aditya is the "one guest" (ekâtithiḥ) he is it "who lives among the sacrificers." The man who Ṡâyana makes the following remarks on this rather obscure stanza

The stealing of bisāni, i. e. lotus fibres, from a tank appears to have been a great offence in ancient times. Not to receive one guest (at least) on the evening was considered as equally wicked. The man who has committed such crimes will, in order to clear himself from all guilt, charge an innocent man with it. The forms abhisatit and apaharāt have evidently the sense of a future tense, as is the case in other instances also. The stanza in question appears to be very old and was hardly intelligible even to the author of our Brāhmanam He means by ekâtithiḥ "the one guest," the śan, which according to the context, cannot have been the original sense.

thinking, it is enough of the Agnihotram, does not sacrifice to this deity (Aditya), shuts him out from being his guest. Therefore this deity, if shut out, shuts such an Agnihotrî out from both this world and that one.

Therefore he who thinks, it is enough of the Agnihotram, may nevertheless bring sacrifices. Thence they say, a guest who comes at evening is not to be sent away. It happened that once a learned man, Janasruteya, a resident of a town (a Nagarî), said to an Aikâdasâksha, a descendant of Manu, "we recognise from the children whether one brings the Agnihotram with or without the proper knowledge." Aikâdasâksha had as many children as are required to fill a kingdom. Just as many children will he obtain who brings the Agnihotram after sunrise.

31.

(The Agnihotram is to be offered after sunrise.)

In rising the sun joins his rays to the Ahavanîya. Who therefore sacrifices before sunrise is like a female giving her breast to an unborn child, or a cow giving her udder to an unborn calf. But he who sacrifices after sunrise is like a female giving her breast to a child which is born, or like a cow giving her udder to a calf which is born. The Agnihotram being thus offered to him (Sûrya), he (Aditya) gives to the Agnihotrî in return food in both worlds, in this one and that one. He who brings the Agnihotram before sunrise is like such an one who gives food before a man or an elephant, who do not stretch forth their hands (not caring for it). But he who sacrifices after sunrise is like such an one who throws food before a man or an elephant who stretch forth their hands. He who has this knowledge, and sacrifices after sunrise, lifts up with this hand (Aditya's hand) his sacrifice, and puts it down in the heaven-world. Therefore the sacrifice is to be brought after sunrise.

When rising, the sun brings all beings into motion (pranayati). Therefore he is called prāṇa (breath). The offerings of him who knowing this, sacrifices after sunrise, are well stored up in this prāṇa (Aditya). Therefore it is to be sacrificed after sunrise.

That man is speaking the truth, who in the evening after sunset, and in the morning after sunrise, brings his offering. He commences the evening sacrifice by the words "Bhūr, Bhurāḥ, Svar, Om! Agni is Light, Light is Agni;" and the morning sacrifice by "Bhūr Bhurāḥ, Svar, Om! Sun is Light, Light is Sun." The truth-speaking man offers thus in truth, when he brings his sacrifice after sunrise. Therefore it must be sacrificed after sunrise. This is well expressed in a sacrificial stanza which is chanted.

"Those who sacrifice before sunrise tell every morning an untruth; for if celebrating the Agni hotram at night which ought to be celebrated a day, they say, Sun is Light, but then they have no light (for the sun has not risen)."

32.

(On the creation of the world. The origin of the Vedas and the sacred words. The penances for mistakes committed at a sacrifice.)

Prajâpati had the desire of creating beings and multiplying himself. He underwent (consequently) austerities. Having finished them, he created the worlds, viz. earth, air, and heaven. He heated (with the lustre of his mind, pursuing a course of austerities); three lights were produced: Agni from the earth, Vâyu from the air, and Aditya from heaven. He heated them again, in consequence of which the three Vedas were produced. The Rigveda came from Agni, the Yajurveda from Vâyu, and the Sâmaveda from Aditya. He heated these Ved in consequence of which three luminaries arose, viz. Bhûr came from the Rigveda, Bhuvah from the Yajurveda, and Svar from the Sâmaveda. He heated these luminaries again, and three sounds came out of them â, u, and m. By putting them together he made the syllable om. Therefore he (the priest) repeats "Om! Om!" for Om is the heaven-world, and m is that one who burns (Aditya).

Prajâpati spread the sacrifice<sup>8</sup> (extending it), took it, and sacrificed with it. By means of the Rik (Rigveda), he performed the duties of the Hotar; by means of the Yajus, those of the Adhvaryu; and by means of the Sâmān, those of the Udgâtar. Out of the splendour (seed) which is inherent in this three-fold knowledge (the three Vedas), he made the Brahma essence.

Prajâpati offered then the sacrifice to the gods. The gods spread it, took it, and sacrificed with it, and did just as Prajâpati had done (regarding the office of the Hotar, &c.) The gods said to Prajâpati, "If a mistake has been committed in the Rik, or in the Yajus, or in the Sâmān, in our sacrifice, or in consequence of ignorance, or of a general misfortune, what is the atonement for it?" Prajâpati answered, "When you commit a mistake in the Rik, you shall sacrifice in the Gârhapatya, saying Bhûh. When you commit one in the Yajus, then you shall sacrifice in the Agnîdhriya fire<sup>9</sup> or (in the absence of it as is the case) in the Havis offerings<sup>10</sup> in the cooking fire (Dakshina Agni) saying, Bhuvoh. When a mistake is committed in the Sâmān, then it is to be sacrificed in the Ahavanîya fire by saying Svar. When a mistake has been committed out of ignorance, or in consequence of a general mishap, then you shall sacrifice in the Ahavaniya fire, reciting all three words, Bhūh, Bhuvah, Svar. These three "great words" (vyāhriti) are like nooses to tie together the Vedas. It is just like joining one thing to another, one link to another link, like the stringing of anything made of leather, or of any other thing, and connecting that which was disconnected, that one puts together by means of these great words all that was isolated in the sacrifice. These Vyāhritis, are the general Prāyas'chitta (penance); thence the penances (for mistakes) at a sacrifice are to be made with them.

33.

(On the office of the Brahmā priest. He ought to remain silent during all the principal ceremonies.)

The great sages (mahāvadaḥ) ask, "When the duties of a Hotar are performed by the Rik, those of the Adhvaryus by the Yajus, and those of the Udgātār by the Sāman, and the three-fold science is thus properly carried into effect by the several (priests employed), by what means then are the duties of the Brahmā priest performed?" To this one should answer, "This is done just by means of this three-fold science."

He who blows (Vāyu) is the sacrifice. He has two roads, viz. speech and mind. By their means (speech and mind) the sacrifice is performed. In the sacrifice there are both, speech and mind, required. By means of speech the three priests of the three-fold science perform one part (assigned to Vāch); but the Brahmā priest performs his duty by the mind only. Some Brahmā priests after having muttered the Stomabhāgas<sup>11</sup> when all arrangements have been made for the repetition of the Prâtaranuvâka (the morning prayer) sit down, and speak (without performing any of the ceremonies).

Respecting this (the silence on the part of the Brahmanâ priests) a Brahman, who saw a Brahmanâ priest at the Prâtaranuvâka talk, said (once) "they (the priests and the sacrificer) have made one-half of this sacrifice to disappear." Just as a man who walks with one foot only, or a carriage which has one wheel only, falls to the ground, in the same manner the sacrifice falls to the ground (bhreshm nyeti), and if the sacrifice has fallen, the sacrificer falls after it too (if the Brahmanâ priests talk during the time they ought to be silent). Therefore the Brahmanâ priest should, after the order for repeating the Prâtaranuvâka has been given, refrain from speaking till the oblations from the Upâms'u and Antaryâma (Grahas) are over. After the order for chanting the Pavamâna Stotra has been given, (he ought also to refrain from speaking) till the last verse (of the Stotra) is done. And the Stoma is like, such as a cord, a joint, &c.; b) To what it is devoted or joined; c) An order to the Stoma to favour the object to which it is joined; d) An order to the chanters to chant the Stoma by the permission of Savitar in honour of Brihaspati. The last (fourth) part is in all the Stomabhâga mantras the same. I give here some of these mantras, which are all to be found in the Tândya Brâhmanam (I, 8.9). They commence:

(a) रश्मिरसि (b) क्षयाय त्वा (c) क्षयं जित्वा (d) सवितृप्रसूता
बृहस्पतये स्तुत

(a) प्रेतिरसि (b) धर्मणे त्वा (c) धर्मं जित्वा (d) सव०

(a) अन्वितिरसि (b) दिवे त्वा (c) दिवं जित्वा (d) सव०

(a) सन्धिरसि (b) अन्तरिक्षाय त्वा (c) अन्तरिक्षं जित्वा (d) सव०

(a) विष्टम्बो ऽसि (b) दृष्ट्यै त्वा (c) दृष्टिं जित्वा &c.

be proper meaning of the repetition of these and similar mantras the Brahmanâ priests is, to bring the chant (Stoma) which is about to be performed into contact with the external world, with day, night, rain, the gods, and secure the favour of all these powers and things.

again, he should during the chanting of the (other) Stotras, and the repeating of the Shastras, refrain from speaking, till the Vashatkâra (at the end of the Yâjyâ verse of the Shastra) is pronounced. Likewise as a man walking on both his legs, and a carriage going on both its wheels, does not suffer any injury; in the same way such a sacrifice (if performed in this manner), does not suffer any injury, nor the sacrificer either, if the sacrifice be not injured.

(On the work done by the Brahmâ. He permits the chanters to chant.)

They say, When the sacrificer has the reward (dukshinâ) given to the Adhvaryu, he thinks, "this priest has seized with his hands my Grahâs (Sonnacups), he has walked for me, he has sacrificed for me." And when he has the reward given to the Udgâtar, he thinks, "he has sung for me;" and when he has the reward given to the Hotar, he thinks, "this priest has spoken for me the Anuvâkyâs, and the Yajvas, and repeated the Shastras." But on account of what work done is the Brahmâ priest to receive his reward? Shall he receive<sup>11</sup> the reward, thinks the sacrificer, without having done any work whatever? Yes, he receives it for his medical attendance upon the sacrifice, for the Brahmâ is the physician of the sacrifice (which is regarded as a man). Because of the Brahmâ priest performing his priestly functions with the Brahma, which is the quintessence of the metres. He does one-half of the work, for he was at the head of the other priests, and the others (Adhvaryu, Hotar, Udgâtar) do the other half. (The Brahmâ priests tell if any mistake has been committed ted in the sacrifice, and perform the Prāyaś'chittas, as described above.)<sup>12</sup>

The Prastotar <sup>13</sup> says, after the order for chanting the Stotram has been given, "O Brahmā, we shall now chant, our commander!" The Brahmā then shall say at the morning libation, "Bhūr! filled with the thought of Indra, ye may sing!" At the midday libation he says, "Bhuvah! filled with the thought of Indra, ye may sing;" and at the evening libation, <sup>12</sup> I have not translated the passage regarding the Prāyaś'chitta to be performed by the Brahmā priest if any mistake has been committed, for it is only a repetition from 5, 32.

<sup>13</sup> The announcement of the Prastotar, that the chanters are ready to perform their chant, as well as the orders to do so given by the Brahmā and Matrávaruna, are contained in full in the As'val. Śr. S. 5, 21, and in the Sānk. Śr. S. (6, 8). I here give the text from the As'v. S. — then the Prastotar calls) "Brahmā, we shall chant, O commander!" then the two priests (the Brahmā and Matrávaruna) whose duty it is to allow (the chanters to sing) give their permission. The Brahmā after having first muttered the words "bhūr, be ye filled with power, created by Savitar (or permitted by Savitar)," at the morning libation, says, "chant;" at the midday libation he uses instead of bhuvah, and at the evening libation, svar (the remainder of Japa being the same). Before all the Stotras which follow the Manu Śāstra (which concludes the Śāstras of the Agni Śāstra), that is to say, at the Ukthya, Sholas'i, Atrātra sacrifices, the Brahmā mutters all the three great words (bhūr, bhuvah, h, along with the remainder of the formula) at the same time. Matrávaruna, after having muttered "Speak what is right and true, ye who are created by Savitar, the god to whose honour these are chanted, do not lose the sacred verses (chanted by ye) which are life, may he protect both bodies of the Sāman (the *śr*s and the tune) Om!" says aloud "chant!"

अन्नं कोष्यामः प्रक्षतस्वरिति स्तोत्रायानिर्जितावतिसृजतो भूरि-

he says, "Svar! filled with the thought of Indra, ye may sing."

At the time of the Ukthya or Atirâtra sacrifice, all the three great words, Bhûr, Bhuvah, Svar, are required. If the Brahmâ says, "Filled with the thought of Indra, ye may sing," this means, that the sacrifice is Indra's, for Indra is the deity of the sacrifice. By the words, "filled with the thought of Indra," the Brahmâ priest connects the Udgitha (the principal part of the chant) with Indra. This saying of the Brahmâ means, "Do not leave Indra; filled with him, ye may sing." Thus he tells them.

SIXTH BOOK.

FIRST CHAPTER.

(On the offices of the Grāvastut and Subrahmanya.)

1.

Serpent Rishi Arbuda.)

The gods held (once upon a time) a sacrificial session in Sarvacharu. They did not succeed in <sup>1</sup>See also him about As'v, S'r. 8, 5, 12. His services are only required at the midday libation. He performs his function of repeating mantras over the Soma squeezing stones before the so-called Dadhi Gharma ceremony. He enters through the eastern gate, and passes on to the two Havirdhānas (the two carts, on which the sacrificial offerings are put, and the two covered places, in which these two carts are). Having arrived north-east of the exterior front of the axe (akṣhaś'ras) of the southern Havirdhāna, he throws off a stalk of grass held in his hand, which ceremony is called nirasananu (it is performed often by other priests also). He then faces the Soma shoots assuming a peculiar posture. The Adhvaryu gives him a band (ushnisha) which he ties round his face. As soon as the Adhvaryu and his assistants take the Soma sprouts from below the athisharana board (see the note to 7, 32), he ought to repeat the mantras over the Grāvānas which are now being employed for extracting the Soma juice. He commences with verses containing the term su to squeeze, or derivatives of it. The first is: abhi tvā deva savitar (1, 24, 3). After some more single verses follow the three principal Grāvāna hymns, viz. prāite vadantu (10, 94), ā va rūmjase (10, 76), and pravo grāvānah (10, 175). The first and the last are said to have been seen by Arbuda the Serpent Rishi, the second by Jarat karā, one of the Serpent tribe also. These hymns very likely formed part of the so-called Sarpaveda or Serpent Veda (see the Gopatha Brahmanam 1, 10, according to whose statement this Veda came from the east), and were originally foreign to the Rigveda. They may be nevertheless, very ancient. The two latter hymns are to be repeated before the last verse of the first, and are thus treated like a Nivid at the evening libation. Either in the midst, or before, or destroying the consequences of guilt. Arbuda, the son of Kadru, the Serpent Rishi, the framer of mantras, said to them, "You have overlooked one ceremony which is to be performed by the Hotar. I will perform it for you, then you will destroy the consequences of guilt." They said, "Well, let it be done." At every midday libation he then came forth (from his hole), approached them, and repeated spells over the Soma squeezing stones. Thence they repeat spells at every midday libation over the Soma squeezing stones, in imitation of him (the Serpent Rishi). The way on which this Serpent Rishi used to go when coming from (his hole) is now known by the name Arbudodā Sarpaṇī (at the sacrificial compound).

The King (Soma) made the gods drunk. They then said, "A poisonous serpent (as'irisho) looks at our King! Well, let us tie a band round his eyes." They then tied a band round his eyes. Therefore they recite the spells over the Soma squeezing stones, when having tied (round the eyes) a band in imitation (of what the gods did). The King (Soma) made them drunk. They said, "He (the Serpent Rishi) repeats his own mantra over the Soma squeezing stones. Well, let us mix with his mantra other verses." They then mixed with his mantra other verses, in consequence of which he (Soma) did not make them drunk.<sup>2</sup> By mixing his mantra with other verses for effecting propitiation, they succeeded in destroying the consequences of guilt.

after these two hymns, the Grāvastut must repeat the so-called Pāvamāni verses (Rigveda 9.) He has to continue his recitation as long as the squeezing of the juice lasts, or he may go on till it is filled in the Grahas (ā vā graha grahaṇāt); he then must conclude with the last verse of the first Grāvāna hymn. Besides this ritual for the Grāvastut another one is given by As'valāyana, which he traces to Gānagāri.

In imitation of this feat achieved by the gods, the Serpents destroyed all consequences of their own guilt. Having in this state (being quite free from guilt and sin) left off the old skin torn, they obtain a new one. Who knows this destroys the consequences of his own guilt.

2.

How many verses are to be repeated over the Gâvanas? How they ought to be repeated. They are required only at the midday libation. No order for repeating them necessary.)

They say, With how many mantras should he (the rāvastut) pray over the Soma squeezing stones? he answers, with a hundred; for the life of a man a hundred years, he has a hundred powers, and a hundred bodily organs; by doing so, he makes man anticipate in age, strength, and bodily organs. Others say, He ought to repeat thirty-three verses, for he (the Serpent Rishi) destroyed the sins of thirty-three gods, for there are thirty-three gods. (Others) say, he ought to recite an unlimited number of such mantras. For Prajâpati is unlimited; and this recital of the mantras referring to the Soma squeezing stones belongs to Prajâpati, and in it all desires are comprised. Who does so, obtains all he desires. Thence he ought to repeat an unlimited number of such mantras.

Now they ask, In what way should he repeat these mantras (over the Soma squeezing stones)? Syllable by syllable, or should he take four syllables together, or pâda by pâda, or half verse by half verse, or verse by verse? With whole verses (repeated without stopping) one does not perform any ceremony, nor with stopping at every pâda. If the verses are repeated with stopping at every syllable, or every four syllables, then the metres become mutilated, for many syllables (sounds) would thus be lost. Thence he ought to (repeat) these mantras one half verse by another. For man has two legs, and cattle are four-footed. By doing so, he places the two-legged sacrificer among the four-legged cattle. Thence he ought to repeat these mantras by half verses.

Since the Grâvastut repeats only at every midday libation mantras over the Soma squeezing stones, how do mantras become repeated over them at the two other (morning and evening) libations? By repeating verses in the Gâyatrî metre, he provides for the morning libation; for the Gâyatrî metre is appropriate to the morning libation; and by repeating verses in the Jagatî metre, he provides for the evening libation; for the Jagatî metre is appropriate to the evening libation. In this way he who, with this knowledge, repeats the mantras over the Soma squeezing stones only at the midday libation, supplies these praises for the morning and evening libations.

They say, What is the reason, that, whilst the Adhvaryu calls upon the other priests to do their respective duties, the Grâvastut repeats this mantra without being called upon (without receiving a prâishā)? The ceremony of repeating mantras over the Soma squeezing stones is of the same nature as the mind which is not called upon. Therefore the Grâvastut repeats his mantra without being called upon.

(The Subrahmanyâ formula. On its nature. By whom it is to be repeated. The oblation from the Pâtñivata Graha. The Yâjyâ of the Agnidhrâ.)

king Soma. At the time of buying Soma, they call the Subrahmanyâ (thither) just as one calls a cow.

ular pronunciation of this formula is noted by Pāṇini (1, 2, 37-38), the most complete information on its use being only to be found in the Sāmaveda Sūtras, I here give the passages from Lāṭyāyana referring to it along with the formula itself:—

After the Atithya Ishti has been finished, he (the Subrahmanyâ) should stand in the front part of the enclosure made for the wife of the sacrificer inside the Veda, and when touching the sacrificer and his wife, after having called thrice "subrahmanyam," recite the following formula, "Come, Indra! come owner of the yellow horses! son of Medhātithi! Menâ of Vrishanâs'va! thou buffalo (gaura) who ascendest the female (avashandin)! lover of Ahalyâ! son of Kosika! Brâhmana! son of Gotama! (come) thou who art called" to appear at the Soma feast in so and so many days how many ere might intervene (between the day on which the Subrahmanyâ calls him, and that of the Soma festival at which his presence is requested). The Subrahmanyâ is required on the second, third, fourth, and fifth day of the Agnishtoma, and almost on every day of the other Soma sacrifices. On the second day the terms tryahe utyâm, "three days hence" (i. e. on the fifth); on the third day, dyau utyâm, i. e. two days hence; on the fourth, stas, i. e. tomorrow; and on the fifth (the day of the Soma feast) adya, i. e. to day, is used to mark the time when the Soma banquet, to which Indra is by this formula solemnly invited, is to come off. As far as ब्रूवाण is followed by the mentioning of the time appointed न्यहे, न्यहे there is no difference anywhere observable. But the few differences which follow, and which conclude the formula, differ according to different schools. Some were (according to Lāṭyāyana) of opinion, that only आगच्छ "come hither" is to follow; others recommended आगच्छ मघवन, "come hither, O Maghavan." Others, such as Gautama, were of opinion, that either is to be omitted, and the concluding formula, देवा ब्रह्मण आगच्छतागच्छतागच्छत "come, ye divine Brahma priests, come, come!" has to follow immediately upon सुत्यां.

Through this son the Subrahmanyâ priest milks* (obtains) all desires for the sacrificer. For Vâch grants all desires of him who has this knowledge. They ask, What is the nature of this Subrahmanyâ?

The name of the tune (Sâman) according to which it is chanted (or rather recited) is Brahmas'ri, the metre is called Sanipat, the Rishi is Aditya, and Indra is the deity.

At the so-called Agnishtut sacrifices, which open the Çatur-das'arâtra Sattras (sacrificial sessions lasting for a fortnight), (Asv. S'r. S. 11, 2) the Subrahmanyâ calls Agni instead of Indra (Lâyay. 1, 4) according to Gautama, by the following formula:

अग्र आगच्छ रोहिताभ्यां बृहद्भानो धमकेनो जातवेदे विषवं आगिरस ब्राह्मणागिरस भुवाण i. e. "Come, O Agni, with (thy two red ones (horses), thou brightly shining, thou blazing in smoke Jâtavedâs, thou wise! Añgiras! Brâhmanya, (come) call-n," &c
In the concluding formula देवा ब्रह्म०, अग्रय fires, is used instead of देवा According to Dhânanjaya the Subrahmanyâ formula for Agni runs as follows: अग्र आगच्छ रोहितव आगच्छ भरद्वाजस्य पुत्र सुनो दारावस्किन्दृषसे आरागिरस. (the remainder as above) 11

"Come, Agni! master of the red horses, goat of Bharadvâja, son of power, thou who ascendest (the female); lover of Ushas," &c. The latter formula is just like that one addressed to Indra. Agni, as well as Indra, are in both these formulas, which must be very ancient invoked as family deities, the first pre-eminently worshipped by the Añgirasa, the latter by the Kusîkas. Both gods are here called "Brâhmanas." In later books Indra appears as a Kshattriya, at as a model of a king.

On the so-called Agnishtomiya day of all sacrifices (in the Agnishtoma it is the fourth and precedes the Soma day), on which day the animal for Agni and Soma is slain and sacrificed, an extension of the Subrahmanyâ formula takes place. The Subrahmanyâ priest has on this day to announce to the gods, that such and such a (the name of the sacrificer must be mentioned), the son of such a such one, the grandson of such and such one, offers, as a Dikshita (as initiated into the sacrificial rites) a sacrifice. (दक्षितोयमि) The term 'Dikshita' forms then henceforth part of the name of the sacrificer, and his descendants down to the seventh degree. In the part of Indra there are many Brâhmanas distinguished by this honorific epithet, which always indicates that either the bearer of it or his immediate ancestors have performed a Soma sacrifice, and have been proclaimed dikshita by the Subrahmanyâ in all due form.

* Duho must be a 3rd person singular, as Sây explains it.

One should answer, She is Vâch. For Vâch is Brahma, and Subrahma (good Brahma).

They ask, Why does one call him (the Subrahmanyâ priest) who is a male, a female? (They answer) Subrahmanyâ represents Vâch (which is in the feminine gender).

They further ask, When all the other priests are to perform their respective duties within the Vêdi, and the Subrahmanyâ outside the Vêdi, how is it that the duty of the Subrahmanyâ (in this particular case) becomes performed inside the Vêdi? One should answer, The Vêdi has an outlet where things (which are no more required) are thrown; if the Subrahmanyâ priest calls (the Subrahmanyâ) when standing in this outlet, then, in this way, (his duty is performed within the bounds of the Vêdi). They ask, Why does he, standing in the outlet, repeat the Subrahmanyâ? (On this they tell the following story.)

The Rishis held once a sacrificial session. They said to the most aged man among them, "Call the Subrahmanyâ. Thou shalt call the gods standing among us (on account of thy age), as it were, nearest to them." In consequence of this the gods make him (the Subrahmanyâ) very aged. In this way he pleases the whole Vêdi.

They ask, Why do they present to him (the Subrahmanyâ) a bull as a reward for his services? (The answer is) The bull is a male (virishâ), the Subrahmanyâ is a female, both making thus a couple. (This is done) for producing offspring from this pair.

The Agnîdhra repeats the Yâjyâ mantra for the Pâtñivata Graha (a Soma vessel), with a low voice. For the Pâtñivata is the semen virile, and the effusion of the semen virile passing on without noise, as it were, he does not make the Anuvashatkâra. For the Anuvashatâra is a stop. Thinking, I will not stop the effusion of the semen, he does not make the Anuvashatkâra, for the semen which is not disturbed in its effu-ion, bears fruit. Sitting near the Neshtar, he then eats, for the Neshtar is in the room of women. Agni (Agnidhra) pours semen in women, to produce children. He who has this knowledge provides through Agni his females with semen, and is blessed with children and cattle.

The Subrahmanyâ ends after the distribution of the Dakshinâ,<sup>5</sup> for she is Vâch. The Dakshinâ is food; thus they place finally the sacrifice in food, which is Speech.

SECOND CHAPTER.

(On the Shastras of the minor Hotri-priests at the Sattras.)

4.

(On the Shastras of minor Hotri-priests at the morning and evening libations)

The Devas spread the sacrifice. When doing so, the Asuras approached them, thinking, let us obstruct their sacrifice. They attacked them from the right side, thinking this to be the weak point. The Devas awoke, and posted two of their number, Mitra and Varuna on the right side. Through the assistance of these two, the Devas drove the Asuras and Rakshas away from the morning libation. And thus the sacrificers drive them away (if they have the Maitrâvaruṇa Shashtra repeated); thence the Maitrâvaruṇa priest repeats the Maitrâvaruṇa Shashtra the morning libation. The Asuras, defeated on the north side, attacked the centre of the sacrifice. The Devas awoke, posted then Indra, and defeated through his assistance the enemies. Therefore the Brâhmaṇsî repeats at the morning libation the Indra Shastra.

The Asuras, thus defeated, attacked the sacrifice on the northern side. The Devas posted on this side the Indrâgnî, and defeated thus the Asuras. Therefore the Achhâvâka repeats the Aindrâgna Shastra at the morning libation. For by means of Indrâgni the Devas drove the Asuras and Rakshas away from the northern side.

The Asuras, defeated on the northern side, marched arrayed in battle lines towards the eastern part. The Devas awoke and posted Agni eastwards at the morning libation. Through Agni the Devas drove the Asuras and Rakshas away from the eastern front. In the same way the sacrificers drive away from the eastern front the Asuras and Rakshas. Thence the morning libation is Agni's. He who has such a knowledge destroys the evil consequences of his sin.

The Asuras when defeated eastwards, went westwards. The Devas awoke and posted the Viśve Devâh themselves (westwards) at the third libation, and thus drove the Asuras and Rakshas away from the western direction at the third libation. Likewise the sacrificers drive through the Viśve Devâh themselves at the third libation the Asuras and Rakshas away. Thence the evening libation belongs to the Viśve Devâh. He who has such a knowledge destroys the consequences of his sin.

In this manner the Devas drove the Asuras out of the whole sacrifice. Thence the Devas became masters of the Asuras. He who has this knowledge becomes therefore through himself (alone) master of his adversary and enemy, and destroys the consequences of his sin. The Devas drove away the Asuras and destroyed the consequences of sin by means of the sacrifice arranged in such a way, and conquered the heaven-world. He who has this knowledge, and he who, knowing this, prepares (these) libations required in the said manner, drives away his enemy and hater, destroys the consequences of his guilt, and gains the heaven-world.

5.

(The Stotriya of the following day is made the Anurûpa of the preceding day in the Shastras of the minor Hotri-priests at Soma sacrifices lasting for several days.)

They use at the morning libation the Stotriya (triplet) (of the following day) as Anurûpas<sup>1</sup> (of the preceding day). They make in this way the following day the Anurûpa (corresponding to the preceding day). Thus they commence the performance of the preceding day with a view to that of the following. But this is not done at the midday libation, for the Prishthas<sup>2</sup> (used then) are happiness (they are independent); they have at this (the midday libation) not that position (which the verses have at the morning libation) that they could use the Stotriya (of the following day) as Anurûpa (of the preceding day). Likewise they do not use at the third libation, the Stotriya (of the following day) as Anurûpa (of the preceding day).

6.

(The opening verses of the Shastras of the minor Hotri-priests at the Ahargana Soma sacrifice, i. e. such ones as last for a series of days.)

Now follow the opening verses (of these Shastras after the Stotriyas have been repeated). Rijunīti no Vāṇa (1, 90, 1) is that of the Maitrāvaruṇa Śhastra; for in its second pāda is said, "Mitra, the use, may lead!" for the Maitrāvaruṇa is the leader of the Hotri-priests. Therefore this is the leading verse.

By Indram ro viśvatas pari (1, 7, 10) commences the Brāhmaṇāchhaṁsi; for by the words "we call him (Indra) to the people" they call Indra every day. When the Brāhmaṇāchhaṁsi, with this knowledge, recites this verse every day, then no other sacrificer, notwithstanding he (Indra) might be called by different parties (at the same time), can get Indra away.

Yat soma ā sute nara (7, 94, 10) is the verse of the Achhāvāka. By its words "they called hither Indrāgni," they call Indrāgni every day. When the achhāvāka is doing this every day, no other one can wrest (from them) Indrāgni. These verses (riju-ti, &c.) are the boats which lead to the shores of the heavenly world. By them means the sacrificers (on the sea) and reach the heavenly world.

7

(The concluding verses of the same Shastras at the Ahargana Soma sacrifices.)

Now follow the concluding verses of these Shastras: ishama deva varuṇa (7, 66, 9) is that of the Maitrāvaruṇa Śhastra. For by its words, "we contemplate food (isham) and light (svar)," they get

- hold of both worlds ; for " food " is this world, and
- " light " is that world.

By the triplet vyantariksham atirad (8, 14, 7-9), which has the characteristic vi, i. e. asunder, the Brâhmaṇachhaṁsî opens the gates of the heavenly world. The words, " Indra, inebriated by Soma, cleft the hole and made appear the lights " (8, 14, 7), refer to the passionate desire of those who are initiated into the sacrificial art (for heaven) ; thence it is called the Balavati verse.<sup>3</sup> The words, " He drove out the cows, and revealed them which were hidden, to the Aṅgiras, and flung away Bala " contain the expression of a gift to them (the Aṅgiras). By the words, "indrena rochanâ divi (verse 9) the heaven-world is alluded to. By the words, " The fixed lights (stars) of heaven have been fastened by Indra, the fixed ones he does not fling away," the sacrificers approach every day heaven and walk there.

- Ahañ sarasvatîrator (8, 38, 10), is the verse of the Achhâvâka. For Sarasvatî is the voice ; (the dual is used) for this day belongs to the " two who have the voice." (As to who they are is expressed by the words) " I choose the tone of Indragñi. For the voice is the beloved residence of Indragñi.
- Through this residence one makes both successful
- Who has this knowledge will be successful in his own residence (his own way).

8.

(On the Alîna and Aikâhika concluding verses of the Shastras of the minor Hotri-priests.)

The concluding verses of the Hotri-priests (Maitravaruṇa, Brâhmaṇachhaṁsî, and Achhâvâka) are,<sup>2</sup>

<sup>3</sup> There is the word vala hole, in it, which may be regarded as proper name of an Asura also.

the morning and midday libations, of two kinds, viz. âhîna (which are proper for Soma sacrifices which last for several days successively) and aikâhika (which are proper for Soma sacrifices which last for one day only). The Maitrâvaruṇa uses the aikâhikas, preventing (thus) the sacrificer from falling out of this world. The Achhâvâka uses the âhînas for making (the sacrificer obtain heaven). The Brâhmaṇâchhaṇsi uses both; for thus he holds both worlds (with his hands) and walks in them. In this way he (the Brâhmaṇâchhaṇsi) walks holding both, the Maitrâvaruṇa and the Achhâvâka, the Âhîna and Ekâha, and (farther) the sacrificial session lasting all the year round (such as the Gavâṃ ayanam) and the Agnistoma (the model of all Aikâhikas).

The Hotri-priests require at the third libation Ekâhas only for concluding. For the Ekâha is the footing, and thus they place the sacrifice at the end on a footing.<sup>4</sup>

At the morning libation he must read the Yâjyâ verses without stopping (anavânam). The Hotar shall not recite one or two additional verses (atis'āṃśnam) for the Stoma. It is just the same case as if one who asks for food and drink must be speedily supplied. Thinking, I will quickly supply the gods their food, he speedily gets a footing in this world. He should make the Shastram at the two latter libations with an unlimited number of verses; for the heaven-world is unlimited. (This is done) for obtaining the heaven-world. The Hotar may, if he like, recite those verses which the minor Hotri-priests used to repeat on a previous day. Or the Hotri-priests (may, if they like, repeat those verses) which the Hotar (used to repeat on the previous day). (For the Hotar as well as the Hotri-priests form parts of one body only.) For the Hotar is the breath, and the Hotri-priests are the limbs. This breath goes equally through the limbs. Thence the Hotar should, if he like, recite those verses which the minor Hotri-priests used to recite on the previous day. Or the Hotri-priests (may, if they like, repeat those verses) which the Hotar (used to repeat on the previous day). The last verses of the hymns with which the Hotar concludes, are the same with the concluding verses of the minor Hotri-priests at the evening libation. For the Hotar is the soul, and the Hotri-priests are the limbs; the ends of the limbs are equal, therefore the (three) Hotri-priests use at the evening libation, the same concluding verses.

THIRD CHAPTER.

(The hymns for lifting the Chamasa (Soma cups); The Prashthita Yájyás of the seven Hotars concluding this ceremony. The two different kinds of Hotars. Explanation of some apparent anomalies in the performances of the minor Hotris. The Jagatī hymns for Indra. The concluding verses of the minor Hotri-priests. On a peculiarity in the Shastras of the Achhárāka.)

• 9.

(The number of verses which the Hotar has to repeat at the time of the Soma cups being lifted at the three libations.)

When at the morning libation the Soma cups are lifted and filled, he (the Maitrávaruṇa) recites the hymn, á tvá vahan'u harayaḥ (1, 16) the seven verses of which contain the words, vriṣṇan (male pīta (drunk), suta (squeezed), mad (drunk), are complete in their form and are addressed to Indra, fo the sacrifice is Indra's. He repeats Gâyatrîs; for Gâyatrî is the metre of the morning libation. At the morning libation he recites nine verses only, one less (than ten). For the semen is poured into a place made narrow (nyûna). At the midday libation he repeats ten verses; <sup>1</sup> for the semen which was poured in a narrow place grows very large, after having reached the centre of the woman's body. At the evening libation he repeats nine <sup>2</sup> verses, one less (than ten); for from a narrow place (represented by the third libation) men are born. If he recites these hymns complete, then he makes the sacrificer bring forth the embryo of his (spiritual body) begotten in the sacrifice, such is the womb of the gods.

Some recite every time only seven verses at the morning, midday and evening libations, asserting that there must be as many Puroṣuvâkyâs as there are Yâgyâs. Seven (Hotri priests) having their faces turned (towards the fire) recite the Yâgyâs, and pronounce Vaushat ! Now they assert that those seven verses are the Puroṣuvakyâs of these (seven days); but the Hotar ought not to do so (to recite only seven verses). For in this way they pour the semen of the sacrificer, and consequently the sacrificer himself.

The Maitrâvaruṇa carries in this way the sacrificer for the sacrificer is the hymn, by means of nine verses from this world to the airy region; but by means of ten he carries him further on to that (seven) world; for the airy region is the oldest; and that world he takes him by means of nine verses up to the celestial world. Those who recite only seven verses do not wish to raise the sacrificer to heaven. Therefore the hymns are to be recited complete only.<sup>3</sup> 10.

Some one (a theologian) has asked, When the sacrifice is Indra's, why do only two, the Hotar and Brāhmaṇāchhaṁsi, at the morning libation, for the Soma drops which are in readiness, repeat Yājyā where Indra's very name is mentioned, the Yājyā of the Hotar being idam te somyam madhu (8, 54, 8) that of the Brāhmaṇāchhaṁsi, indra trā vṛishabhav rayam (3, 40, 1) ?

When the other (priests) repeat verses addressed to different deities, how do they concern Indra. For the Yājyā of the Maitrāvaruṇa is mitram rayam havāmahe (1, 23, 4), "we invoke Mitra;" but in its words varuṇam somapātaye, i. e. "we call Varuṇa to the Soma beverage;" there is an allusion to Indra; for whatever word refers to "drinking," harkens to Indra, and pleases him.

The Yājyā of the Potar is, Maruto yasya kshaya (1, 86, 1); its words sa sugopātamo janah, i. e. "he is the best protector," allude to Indra; for Indra is the gopā, which is a characteristic of Indra. Thus he pleases Indra.

The Yājyā of the Neshtar is, agne patnīr ihā vah (1, 22, 9); in its words, tvashṭāram somapātaye <sup>3</sup> These Yājyās are at each libation seven in number, and repeated successively by the so called 'seven Hotars' (Hotar, Maitravaruṇa, Brāhmaṇāchhaṁsi, Potar, Neshtar Agnidhira, and Achhāvāka) who the Chamasa Adhvaryu or cup-bearers, are holding up the cups filled with Soma. As often as one of them has repeated his Yājyā, libations from seven cups are thrown at the same time in the fire. The rest to be drunk by them.

there is an allusion to Indra; for Indra is Tvashtar, which is a characteristic of Indra. Thus he pleases him.

The Yâjyâ of the Agnîdhra is, Ukshânnâya (8, 43, 1); in its words Soma prishthâya vedhase, there is an allusion to Indra; for Indra is Vedhâs (striker, eater) which is a characteristic of Indra. Thus he pleases him.

The verse of the Achhâvâka, which is directly addressed to Indra, is complete, viz: prâtaryâvabhîr (8, 38, 7), (for in the last part of it there is the term Indrâgni). Thus all these verses refer to Indra. Though there are different deities mentioned in them (such as Mitra, Varuṇa, &c.) the sacrificer does not satisfy other deities (alone). The verses being in the Gâyatrî metre, and this being sacred to Agni, the sacrificer gains, by means of these verses, the favour of three deities, i. e. Indra, the nânâdevatâs of different deities, and Agni.

11.

The hymn to be repeated over the Soma cups being lifted, and the Prasthîta Yâjyâs at the midday libation.)

At the midday libation, when the Soma cups are being lifted, the Hotar repeats, Asâvi deram goṛichikam (21). This hymn contains the words, vrishan, a, suta, mad; its verses are complete in form and addressed to Indra. For the sacrifice belongs to Indra. The verses are in the Trishtubh metre; for this metre is appropriate to the midday libation. We say, if the term mad, "to be drunk" is only appropriate to the third libation, why do they recite these verses (containing this term) at the midday libation as Anuvâkyâs and Yâjyâs? The gods get drunk, as it were, at the midday libation, and are consequently at the third libation in a state of complete drunkenness. Thence he repeats verse containing the term mad as Anuvâkyâs and Yâjyâ at the midday libation.

At the midday libation all the priests repeat Yâjyâs addressed to Indra by his very name (for the Soma drops) which are in readiness. Some (the Hotar, Maitrâvaruṇa, and Brâhmaṇâchhaṇsi) make the Yâjyâs with verses containing (besides the name of Indra) the words, abhi trid. So the Hotar repeats, pibâ somam abhi yam ugra turda (6, 17, 1) the Maitrâvaruṇa, sa im pâhi ya rijishi (6, 17, 2) and the Brâhmaṇâchhaṇsi, evâ pâhi j ratnathâ (17, 3).<sup>5</sup>

The Yâjyâ of the Potar is, arrâṅg ehi somahîm (1, 104, 9) The Yâjyâ of the Neshitar is, ta â sa somas tram (3, 35, 6). The Yâjyâ of the Achhitar is, indrâya somah pra divo vidâna (3, 36, 2). The Yâjyâ of the Agnidhra is, âpurnô asya kalas svâhâ (3, 32, 15).

Among these verses there are those containing the words abhi trid. For Indra once did not come at the morning libation; but by means of the verses he broke down the barriers and made himself master (abhi triṇat) of the midday libation. That these verses.

12.

(The hymn and the Prasthita Yâjyâs at the even libation.)

At the third libation the Hotar repeats at the time when the Soma cups are being lifted, the ihopayâta s'avasô napâta (4, 35, 1). Its verses are complete in form, are addressed to Indra, belong to the Ribhus, contain the words (trid).

suta mad. They ask, Why is the Pavamâna Stotra at the evening libation called Arbhava, though they do not sing Ribhu verses? (The answer is) Prajâpati, the father, when transforming the Ribhus who were mortals, into immortals, gave them a share in the evening libation. Thence they do not sing Ribhu verses, but they call the Pavamâna Stotra Arbhava.

One (great Rishi) asked about the application of metres, viz. for what reason does he use the Trishtubh metre at the third libation, whilst the appropriate metre for this libation is Jagatî, as well as the Gâyatrî that for the morning, and the Trishtubh for the midday libation? One ought to say (in reply), At the third libation the Soma juice is done; but if they use a sparkling (s'ukriyam) metre as the Trishtubh, the juice of which is not done, then they provide the (third) libation with juice (liquor). Then he makes Indra participate in this libation also. One says, Why, since the third libation belongs to Indra and the Ribhus, and the Hotar alone makes the Yâjyâs for the Soma which are in readiness (prasthita) with an Indra-Ribhu verse, at the third libation, do the other Hotri-priests use verses addressed to various other deities for their Yâjyâs? In the Yâjyâ of the Hotar, ribhubhir vajadbhuḥ samukshitam (not in the Rigveda) the Ribhus are mentioned, but in the Yâjyâs of the other priests they are only hinted at.

The Maitrâvaruṇa repeats, indravaruṇa sutapāv aṁ sutam (6, 68, 10); in the words, yuro ratho thraram devarîṭaye, there is a plurality (in the words devarîṭaye = devânâm vîṭaye, i. e. for the enjoyment of the gods) which is a characteristic of the Ribhus.

The Brâhmanâchhamañsi repeats the verse, indra-cha somam pibā'am (4, 50, 10); in its words, śāntu inlavah, i. e. "may the drops come," a plurality is expressed, which is a characteristic of the Ribhus.

The Yâjyâ of the Potar is, â vo vahantu sap-tayā (1, 85, 6); in its words, raghupatvānaḥ prajigāta bāhuhir, there is a plurality (these three words are in the plural) expressed, which is the characteristic of the Ribhus.

The Yâjyâ of the Neshtar is, amevaḥ naḥ suharā (2, 36, 3), in it the word gantana "go ye!" expresses a plurality.

The Yâjyâ of the Achhāvâka is, indrāvishṇu pibatām madhvo (6, 69, 7); its words, â vām aindhāmsi madirānī expresses a plurality.

The Yâjyâ of the Agnîdhra is, imañ stomam arhate (1, 94, 1); in its words ratham iva sañmahemā (this is first person plural) there is a plurality expressed.

In this way all these verses become Aindra-Ar-bhavaḥ. By repeating verses being (apparently) addressed to various deities, he pleases other deities (also), save Indra and the Ribhus. They are the conquerors of the jagat, i. e. world; therefore the Jagatî metre is required for the evening libation, to make it successful.

13.

(On the relationship of those Ho'ars who have to repeat a Shastra to those who have none. How the Shastras of the minor Hotri-priests are supplied at the evening libation.)

Some one asks, Some of the duties of the Hotri priests being performed without Shastra, <sup>o</sup> some without Shastra, how are then all these ceremonies (as i should be) provided with their respective Shastras, and consequently equal and complete? (The answer is) They call the performance (i. e. the repetition of Yâjyâs) of those (Hotris) who like the Potar, Neshtar, and Agnîdhra, have no Shashtra (to repeat) Hotrâ (also), on account of their reciting their (respective) verses along with (the other Hotri-priests, such as the Hotar, Maitrâvaruṇa, &c. who repeat proper Shastras). In this way they are equal. But in the fact that some Hotri-priests perform their duties with Shastras, others without Shastras, lies their inequality. Thus (both kinds of Hotri performances) become provided with Shastras, equalised and successful (for the Yâjyâs of all seven Hotri-priests are repeated one after the other).

Now the Hotri-priests (Maitrâvaruṇa, Brâhmaṇâchhaṁsi, Achhâvûka) repeat Shastras at the morning and midday libations only, in what way is this duty performed at the third libation? One ought to answer, In this way, that they (these three priests just mentioned) repeat at the midday libation two hymns each. Some one may ask, In what way do the Hotri-priests (who properly speaking repeat one Shashtra only) repeat two Shastras, as many as the (chief) Hotar<sup>7</sup> does? One ought to answer, Their Yâjyâs are addressed to two deities.

How the Praisha formula, hotâ yakshat, is applicable to the Potar, Neshtar, and Agnîdhra. The Praisha for the chanters. The Praisha for the Achhâvâka. On the inequality of the deities of the Shastras and Stotriyas of the evening libation.)*

Some one asks further, If there are the performances of three Hotri-priests only provided with a Shastra, how are these Shastras supplied for the performances of the others (the three remaining Hotri-priests)? (The answer is) The Ajyam is the Shastra for the Yâjyâ repeated by the Agnîdhra; the Marutvatiya that one for the Potar's Yâjyâ; the Vais'vadevam that one for the Neshtar's. These Yâjyâs have the characteristic sign of the respective Shastra.<sup>7</sup>

Some one asks further, If the other Hotri-priests are requested only once (to repeat their Shastras), why are the Potar and Neshtar requested twice?

(Regarding this the following story is reported). At the time when the Gâyatri having assumed the shape of an eagle, abstracted the Soma (from heaven), Indra (out of anger) cut off from these (three) Hotri-priests (Agnîdhra, Potar, and Neshtar) their Shastras, and transferred them to the Hotar, saying "Do not call me, you are quite ignorant of it." The gods said, "Let us give more strength to the performances of these two Hotri-priests (Potar and Neshtar) through Speech (by requesting them once more than the others). Thence come the two requests (for Neshtar and Potar) The performance of the Agnidhra was strengthened by one additional verse to his Yâjyâ; therefore his Yâjyâs are super-numerary by one verse.

Some one asks, When the Maitrâvaruṇa calls upon the Hotar by the words, "may the Hotar repeat the Yâjyâ! may the Hotar repeat the Yâjyâ!" why does he call upon those who are no Hotars, but only the repeaters of Hotri verses, by the same words, "may the Hotar repeat the Yâjyâ?" (The answer is) The Hotar is life, and all the (other) sacrificial priests are life also. The meaning (of the formula "may the Hotar repeat his Yâjyâ," is) "may the life repeat the Yâjyâ, may the life repeat the Yâjyâ!"

If some one asks further, Are there requests for the Udgâtri priests (to chant)? One should answer, 'Yes, there are.' For if all (the priests) are ordered to do their respective duties, then the Maitrâvaruṇa, after having muttered with a low voice (a mantra), says, "praise ye!"<sup>8</sup> These are the summons for the Udgâtri priests.

Some one asks, Has the Achhâvâka any preference (to the other priests)?<sup>9</sup> The answer is, Yes, he has; for the Adhvaryu says to him, "Achhâvâka, speak what you have to speak (and no more)!"

Some one asks, Why are at the evening libation the Stotriya and Anurûpa verses addressed to Agni, whilst the Maitrâvaruṇa at that time repeats an Adra-Varuṇa Shastra? (The answer is) The Devas banished the Āsuras out of the Shastras by means of their mouth. Therefore the Stotriya and Anurûpa are addressed to Agni.

<sup>8</sup> See note to 5, 34.

<sup>9</sup> That is, is there anything exceptional to be seen in the performance of his duties? This refers to the peculiar praisha given to him, which is mentioned in the context. See also As'v. S'r. S. 5, 7.

Some one asks, Why are both the Stotriya and Anurûpa of the singers devoted to Indra at the evening libation, whilst the Shastram repeated by the Brâhmaṇâchhaṁsi is addressed to Indra and Brihaspati, and that of the Achhâvâka to Indra and Vishṇu? (The answer is) Indra turned the Asuras out from the Shastras (of which they had got hold) and defeated them. He said to the Devas, "Which (from among you) follows me?" They said, "I, I,<sup>10</sup> (we will follow)," and thus the Devas followed. But on account of Indra having first defeated (the Asuras) the Stotriya and Anurûpa of the singers (they precede the Shastram) are addressed to Indra. And on account of the other deities having said, "I, I, (will follow)" and (actually) followed, both the Brâhmaṇâchhaṁsi and Achhâvâka repeat hymns addressed to several deities.

15.

(On the Jagatî hymns addressed to Indra at the evening libation. On the hymn of the Achhâvâka. The concluding verses of the Maitrâvaruṇa, Brâhmaṇâchhaṁsi, and Achhâvâka. The last four syllables of the last Shashtra of the Soma day to be repeated twice.)

Some one asks further, For what reason do the repeat at the commencement of the evening libation hymns addressed to Indra, and composed in the Jagatî metre, whereas the evening libation belongs to the Vis'vedevas? (The answer is) Having got hold of Indra (ârabhya having commenced with him) by means of these (hymns), they proceed to act, being sure of success). The Jagatî metre is used because the evening libation belongs to the Jagatî, implying a desire for this world (jagat); and any me which is used after (this commencement) becomes related to the Jagatî (jagat), if, at the beginning of the evening libation, hymns in the Jagatî metre are repeated which are addressed to Indra.

At the end (of the Shastra) the Achhâvâka repeats a hymn in the Trishtubh metre, sañ vâm karmanû (6, 69). The word karma (ceremony) alludes only to the praise of drinking (the Soma).<sup>11</sup> In the words sañ ishû, the word ishû means food; it (serves) for obtaining food (by means of this mantra). (By the words of the last pâda) "both (Indra and Vishṇu) carry us through on safe paths," he pronounces every day<sup>12</sup> something relating to welfare.

Some one asks, Why do they conclude the evening libation by Trishtubhs, if properly the Jagatî metre should be used at it? Trishtubh is strength; (by repeating at the end Trishtubhs) the priests (who are at the Sattras the sacrificers themselves) get finally possessed of strength.

The concluding verse of the Maitrâvaruṇa is, iyam Indram Varuṇam (7, 84, 5). That of the Brâhmaṇâchhaṁsi is, Bṛihaspatir na paripâtu (10, 42, 11). That of the Achhâvâka is, ubhâ jigya-thur (6, 69, 8). For "both (Indra and Vishṇu) had been victoribus (jigyathuh), i. e. they had not sustained any defeat, neither of them was defeated."<sup>13</sup>

<sup>11</sup> The word alluded to is, panâyya, which is traced to a root pan = pan to praise; but it hardly can mean "praising" in general. It refers, as Sâyana justly remarks, to the "drinking of the Soma juice." In the fifth verse of the hymn in question, we have the word panayâyana, which is the same as panâyya, where the words indrâvishṇû tat panayâyam vâm evidently mean, "this is your praise for having drunk the Soma."

<sup>12</sup> The hymn is to be repeated every day on the Soma sacrifices which last for several days.

<sup>13</sup> This is a paraphrase by the author of the Brâhmaṇam of the first half of the verse 6, 69, 8 (ubhâ jigya-thur). It differs little from

In the words indras'cha Vishṇo yad apaspridhetā,<sup>14</sup> (there is hinted) that Indra and Vishṇu fought with the Asuras. After they had defeated them, they said to them, "Let us divide!" The Asuras accepted the offer. Indra then said, "All through which Vishṇu makes his three steps is ours, the other part is yours." Then Indra stepped through these (three worlds), then over the Vedas, and (lastly) over Vâch.

They ask, What is meant by the "sahasram,"<sup>15</sup> a thousand? One should say in reply, These worlds, the Vedas, and Vâch. The Achhâvâka repeats twice the (last) word airayethâm, i. e. "you both (Indra and Vishṇu) strode," at the Ukthya sacrifice; for the part (repeated) by the Achhâvâka, is the last in it; whereas at the Agnishṭoma and Atirâtra the Hotar (repeats twice the four last syllables of his Shâstra); for (the part recited by him) is in these the original, and retains most of the terms of the verse without giving any substitute for them. This shows, that in my verses and terms of speech in the mantras were perfectly intelligible to the author of the Brâhmaṇas. The only difference of the paraphrase from the original is the substitution of ayoh for enoh, which is an uncommon dual form (2en.) of a demonstrative form; one ought to expect enayoh.

<sup>14</sup> This is the second half of the last verse of 6, 69, 8, which concludes the hymn repeated by the Achhâvâka. The author of the Brâhmaṇam explains it also by reporting a story to which he thinks the contents of this latter half allude. However he does not quite overlook the meaning of several terms; apaspridhetâm he explains by yuyudhâte, "they two have fought," and vayairayethâm by vichakrame, "he stepped through." The meaning of these words is certainly correct; but the grammatical structure is misunderstood by our author; airayethâm is taken by him as a singular, though it is a dual, for it refers to both Indra and Vishṇu, and not to Vishṇu alone.

<sup>15</sup> In the last pada of the last verse ubhâ jiggyathur. There the words tredhâ sahasram ri tad airayethâm mean "ye both strode through this thousand." The "thousand" refers to the booty they made in the battle, or perhaps to the "thousand cows" given as reward at great sacrifices.

sacrifices, the last. At the Sholās'î there it is questionable whether or not (the last four syllables) are to be repeated twice. They say, He ought to repeat them twice, for why should he repeat them twice on the other days, and not on this one? Therefore he should repeat them twice (also at the hoḷa sî).

16.

Why the Achhâvâka at the end of his Shilpa-Shastra does not recite verses addressed to Narâs'āmsa.)

Some one further asks, Why does the Achhâvâka at the end, in his Shilpas, recite verses not addressed to Narâs'āmsa at the third libation, although this libation belongs to Narâs'āmsa? The Narâs'āmsa part represents the change (of the semen into the human form); for the semen becomes by and by somewhat changed; that which then has undergone the change becomes the prajâtam (the proper form).<sup>16</sup> Or the Narâs'āmsam is a soft and loose matter, as it were; and the Achhâvâka is the last reciter; therefore (it cannot be used), for (the priests think) we must put the end in a firm place for obtaining stability. Therefore the Achhâvâka does not repeat at the end, in his Shilpas, verses referring to Narâs'āmsa.<sup>17</sup> <sup>16</sup> Sāv. says, "For seven nights after the coition the semen has the form of a bubble, a fortnight after it is changed into a ball, which, if the change has been completed, assumes the proper (human or animal) form." The Narâs'āmsam is the state of transition for the semen from the bubble into the ball form. Therefore in order not to disturb and stop the course of this change, no verses, referring to the imperfect state, can be repeated.

FOURTH CHAPTER.

(The Saṃpāta hymns. The Vāḷakhilyas. The Dūro-haṇam.)

17.

When they make at Soma sacrifices, which require several days for their performance (ahinas) in order to make them continuous, at the morning libation the singing verse (Stotriya) of the following day the Anurūpa of the preceding day, it is just the same as with the performance of a Soma sacrifice which lasts for one day only (ekāha). For just as the (three) libations of the one day's Soma sacrifice are connected with each other, in the same way are the days of a Soma sacrifice which lasts for several days connected with one another. The reason that they make at the morning libation the singing verse (Stotriya) of the following day, the Anurūpa of the preceding day, is to make the days during which the sacrifice lasts one continuous series. Thus they make the days of the Ahina sacrifices one continuous whole.

The Gods and Rishis considered. Let us make the sacrifice continuous by equalising (its several days). They then saw this equality (of the several parts) of the sacrifice, viz. the same Pragūthas, the same Pratipads (beginning triplets), the same hymn. For Indra walks in the sacrifice on the first as well as on the following day, just as one who has occupied a house. (The Soma days are thus equalised) in order to have (always) Indra (present).

18.

(On the Saṃpāta hymns. The counter-Saṃpāta hymns. On a peculiarity in the use of the hymns of the Achhāvāka.)

Viśvāmitra saw for the first time (the so-called

Saṃpāta hymns; but Vâmadeva made those seen by Vis vâmitra known to the public (as'rijata). These are the following: evâ trâm indra (4, 19); yanna indro (4, 22); kathâ mahâm avridhat (4, 23). He went at once after them (samapātāt) and taught them his disciples.<sup>1</sup> Thence they are called Saṃpātas.

Vis vâmitra then looked after them, saying, "The Saṃpāta hymns which I saw, have been made public<sup>2</sup> by Vâmadeva; I will counteract these Saṃpātas by the publication of other hymns which are like them. Thus he made known as counterparts the following hymns: sadyô ha jāto vṛishanah (3, 18); indrah pūrbhiḥ ātirad (3, 34); imām ū shu nabhrītim (3, 36); ichhanti trā somyāsaḥ sakhāyaḥ (3, 30); s'āsad vahnir duhitur (3, 31); abhi tashṭeva dūdhayō manīshām (3, 38); (Other Saṃpāta hymns are), the hymn of Bharadvāja, ya eka id dhavyas (6, 22); those of Vasishtā, yas tigmas'riṃgo vṛishabho na bhīma (7, 19), ud u brahmāny airata (7, 23); and that of Nodhās, asmā id u pratavase (1, 61).

These Hotri-priests (Maitrâvaruṇa, Brâhmaṇâbhaṃsi, and Achhâvâka) after having recited at the morning libation of the six days' sacrifice the Stotriya verses, repeat at the midday libation the hymns or the several days' sacrifices (ahīna). These hymns are, â satya yātu maghavan (4, 16); for the Maitrâvaruṇa (by whom it is to be repeated) is endowed with satya, i. e. truth. The Brâhmaṇâchhaṃsi repeats, asma id u pratavase (1, 61); for in this hymn there occur the words indrāya brahmāni tatamâ (in the fourth pada of the first verse), and indra brahmāni Gotamāso akrann (verse 16), i. e. the Gotamas have made the prayers, Indra! in which the word "brahma" is mentioned. The Achhâvâka repeats s'âsad vahnir (3, 31), in which the words janayanta vahnim (verse 2) occur; for he is the Vahni (guide).

Some one asks, Why does the Achhâvâka repeat in both kinds of days<sup>3</sup> (of the Gavâm ayanam sacrifice) this Vahni hymn in those days which stand by themselves (parâñchi) as well as those which form regular periods (of six days) one following the other (abhyâvarti)! The answer is, the Bahvricha (Rigveda) priest (i. e. one of the Hotris) is endowed with power, and the Vahni hymn leads (rahat); for the Vahni (guide horse) draws the beams to which he is yoked. Therefore the Achhâvâka repeats the Vahni hymns in both classes of days.

These Ahîna<sup>4</sup> hymns are required during the five days (in the Gavâm ayanam), viz. on the Chaturviñśa, Abhijit, Vishuvat, Visvajit, and Mahâvrata days; for these (five) days (though the performance of each lasts for one day only) are ahînas, for nothing is left out (na hiyate)<sup>5</sup> in them; they (further) "stand aloof" and do not re-occur in the other turn (as is the case with the Shalabas). Thence the Hotri-priests repeat on these (five) days the Ahîna Sûktas. When they repeat them, then they think, "may we obtain the heaven-worlds undiminished, in their full form and integrity." When they repeat them, they call hither Indra by them, just as one calls a bullock to a cow. They repeat them for making uninterrupted the series of sacrificial days. Thus they make them uninterrupted.

19.

(On what days, in what order, and by whom the Saṃpāta hymns are to be repeated. The Aravana hymns.)

Thereupon the Maitrávaruṇa repeats on every day (of the Shalāha, but not on those five days mentioned) one of the three Saṃpātas, inverting their order<sup>a</sup> (in the second three days' performance of the Shalāha). On the first day he repeats evā tvām indra; on the second, rauna indro j'jushe; and on the third, kathā mahām aridhat.

The Brāhmaṇāchhañsi repeats three Saṃpāta hymns, every day one, inverting their order (in the second three days' performance), viz. pūrbhid ātirad on the first day; eka id dharyas on the second; and vas tigmas riṃgo, on the third day.

In the same manner the Achhāvāka repeats three Saṃpātas, every day one, viz. imām ū shu prabhritim on the first day, ichhanti tvā somyāsah on the second day, and s'asad rahnir on the third day.

These three (for there are every day three to be repeated) and nine (nine is the number of all taken together) hymns, to be recited day after day, make twelve in all. For the year consists of twelve months, Prajâpati is the year, the sacrifice is Prajâpati. They obtained thus this sacrifice, which is Prajâpati, who is the year, and they place thus every day's performance in the sacrifice, in Prajâpati, and in the year.

Between these hymns they ought to insert the Virâj verses by Vimada, to be recited without Nyûnkha on the fourth, the Pañkti verses on the fifth, and the Varuchhepa verses on the sixth day. Then on the days when the Mahâstomas are required (the Chandomâ days) the Maitrâvaruna inserts, ko adya narâṇa devakâma (4, 25, 1), the Brâhmanêchhaṁsi, śantana vâyo nyadhâji (10, 29, 1), and the Aehlâvâka, â ady areâṁg upa (3, 43, 1). These are the Avaputa hymns (intercalary hymns), by means of which the Gods and Rishis conquered the heaven-world, and by means of which the sacrificers conquer heaven (also).

29.

(On the hymns repeated by the Maitrâvaruna, &c. which precede the Sâmpâtas.)

Before the (Ahina) hymns are repeated, the Maitrâvaruna repeats every day, sadyo ha jâto vishaboh (3, 48). This hymn leads to heaven; for by means of this hymn the Gods conquered the heavenly world, and the Rishis did the same; by means of it the sacrificers also conquer the heavenly world. This is a Vis'vâmitra hymn, for Vis'vâmitra (all-friend) was the friend of all; therefore all will be friendly towards him who has this knowledge, if the Maitrâvaruna knowing this repeats (this hymn) every day before the Âhina Sûktaṣ. This hymn (sadyo ha) contains the word "bull," and is therefore a paśūmai (having cattle, serving for obtaining cattle. It consists of five verses; five-hood comprises five feet, and five-hood is food, for obtaining (which this hymn is useful). The Brâhmanêchhaṁsi repeats every day the Brahmi hymn, which is complete, ud u brahmany araca (7, 23).

This hymn leads to heaven; by means of it the Gods conquered the heavenly world, and the Rishis did the same; by means of it the sacrificers conquered the heavenly world. It is a Vasishṭha hymn; by means of it Vasishṭha obtained Indra's favour, and conquered the highest world. He who has such a knowledge obtains Indra's favour, and conquers the highest world. It consists of six verses; for there are six seasons; in order to gain the seasons (ritus), he repeats it after the Sānpātas. For the sacrificers have thus a firm footing in this world, in order to reach the heavenly world (after death).

The Achhāvāka repeats every day, abhi tashṭeva idh yā (3, 38). This hymn contains the characteristic abhi (towards) in order to establish a connection with the other world. Its words "abhi priyāni manīṣat parāyā," mean that the other days (those of the other world) are lovely, and that they are gaining them (securing them). Beyond (para) this world is the heaven-world, to which he thus alludes.

When repeating the words, krivāṁr ichhāmī vāsisē samedhā, i. e. "I wish to see the wise prophets," he means by kravis the departed Rishis. This hymn (abhi tashṭeva) is a Vis'vāmītra hymn, for Visvāmītra was friend to all; every one will be friendly to him who has this knowledge.

He repeats this hymn which belongs to Prajāpati, though his name is not expressly mentioned (anirukta, only hinted at) in it. For Prajāpati cannot be expressed in words. (This is done) in order to obtain (communion with) him. In this hymn the name "Indra" is once mentioned;<sup>2</sup> but this is only for the purpose of preserving the Indra form of the sacrifice (to Indra chiefly belongs the sacrifice). It consists of ten verses. For the Virāj consists of ten syllables, and the Virāj is food; it serves for obtaining food. As regards the number ten (of these) verses, it is to be remarked that there are ten vital airs. The sacrificers thus obtain the vital airs, and connect them with one another. The Achhâ-vāka repeats this hymn after the Sāṃpātas in order to secure the heavenly world (for the sacrificers) whilst the sacrificers move in this world.

21.

The beginning Pragâthas of every day are the kadvantas (containing the interrogative pronoun ka, who?) viz. kas tam Indra (7, 32, 14-15), hamurya (8, 3, 13-14), kad i nṛ asya (8, 55, 9-10). By ka i. e. who? Prajâpati is meant; these Kadvantah Pragâthas are suitable for obtaining Prajâpati. Kan (old neuter form of kas) signifies food; the kadvanta therefore serve for obtaining food. For the sacrificers are every day joined to the Ahina hymns, which become (by containing the term ham, i. e. happy propitiated. They make by means of the kadvanta Pragâthas propitiation (for the sacrificers). When thus propitiated, these (Ahina hymns) become (source of) happiness for them (the sacrificers) and thus carry them up to the celestial world.

<sup>8</sup> The Shastras of the minor Hotri-priests being at the Dyâvasâh and Sattvas rather complicated, I here give some hints as to the order of their several parts. At the midday libation, after the Hotri has finished his two Shastras, the Maitrâvaruna, Brâhmanâchhâṁsi, and Achhâvâka repeat one after the other the several parts of the Shastras in the following order: 1) Stotriya and Anurûpa. 2) One of the three Trishtubh verses as introductory to the Ahina hymn and the Kadvantah Pragâthas. 3) The Ahina hymns, of which each has to repeat two, viz. the Maitrâvaruna radya ka gîta, the Brâhmanâchhâṁsi asmâ id u pra tarase, and the Achhâvâka radya calnir; and further, the Maitrâvaruna â radya gîta, the Brâhmanâchhâṁsi id u brahmânî, and the Achhâvâka, abhu tachhâṁsi (the reference in 6, 18). 4) The three Kadvantah Pragâthas, which each has to repeat one. 5) The Sāṃpāta hymns, see 19. The principal parts of the Shastras of the minor Hotri-priests are only the two latter, the hymns and verses which precede but are regarded only as intercalary (avapana); thence the Kadvantah Pragâthas are here called dravbhâṇiya, i. e. beginning Pragâthas. See on the whole As'val. S'r. S. 7, 4.

They ought to repeat the Trishṭubhs as the beginning of the (Ahīna) hymns. Some repeat them before these Pragāthas, calling them (these Trishṭubhs) dhāyyâs. But in this way one should not proceed. For the Hotar is the ruler, and the performances of the minor Hotri-priests are the subjects. In this way (by repeating Dhāyyâs which ought to be recited by the Hotar alone) they would make the subject revolt against his ruler, which would be a breach of the oath of allegiance.<sup>9</sup>

(The repetition of these Trishṭubhs by the minor Hotri-priests is, however, necessary). He ought to say, "these Trishṭubhs are the helm (pratipad) of my hymns," just as (one requires a helm) if crossing the sea. For those who perform a session lasting for a year or the Dvâdas'âha, are floating like those who cross the sea. Just as those who wish to land on the shore enter a ship having plenty of provisions,<sup>10</sup> in the same manner the sacrificers should enter (i. e. begin with) these Trishṭubhs. For if this metre, which is the strongest, has made the sacrificer go to heaven, he does not return (to the earth). But he does not repeat (at the beginning) of the several Trishṭubhs the call soṁs'âvom; for the metre must run in one and the same strain (without any interruption, through the call soṁs'âvom, in order to be successful).

The Hotar further ought to think, I will not make the Dhāyyâs, if they recite those (Trishṭubhs), and further, let us use as a conveyance the hymns with their well known introductory verses (the Trishṭubhs). If they then repeat these verses (Trishṭubhs), they call hither by them Indra, just as a bullock is called to the cow. If they repeat them, it is for making the sacrificial days continuous. Thus they make the sacrificial days continuous.

22.

(The Trishṭubhs of the minor Hotris)

The Maitrāvaruṇa repeats every day before the hymns (the Trishṭubh) apa prācha Indra (10, 131, 1) in which the idea of safety is expressed; in the words, "Drive away from round about us all enemies; drive them away, O conqueror! May they be in the south or north, prostrate (all) O hero! that we may enjoy thy far-extended shelter!" For he (the Maitrāvaruṇa) wishes to be in safety (thence he has to repeat this verse).

The Brāhmaṇāchhaṁsi repeats every day Brahmāna te brahmayajā (3, 35, 4). By the word yunajai, "I join," the idea of "joining" is intimated; for the sacrificial days are joined, which is the characteristic of (all) sacrifices which last for a series of days (the Ahīnas).

The Achhāvāka repeats every day, annu no loban anuneshi (6, 47, 8). For the term annu "after," implies the idea of going (after), as it were, which is a characteristic of the Ahīna sacrifices (for one day follows the other); whereas neshi is a characteristic of a six monthly period of a sacrificial session.

These verses are recited every day, as well as the concluding<sup>11</sup> verses, which are every day the same.

Indra is the occupant of their (of the sacrificer's) house; he is at their sacrifice. Just as the bull goes to the cow, and the cow to her well-known stable, so does Indra go to the sacrifice. He ought not to conclude the Ahina with the verse s'unam havema (2, 50, 22); for the king loses his kingdom if he calls him who becomes his enemy (rival).

23.

(How to join and disconnect the Ahinas.)

There is a joining as well as a disconnecting of the Ahina sacrifice. By the mantra ry antariksham (8, 14, 7-9) the Bréhmaṇáčhañsá joins the Ahinas (at the morning libation); by ered Indra (7, 23, 6) he dissolves them (at the midday libation).

By the mantra á ham sarasvatator (8, 38, 10) the Achhávâka joins them, and by nūnam sá te (2, 11, 22) (he dissolves them).

By te syâna deva Varuṇa (7, 66, 9) the Maitrâvarena (joins them), and by nu shṭuta (4, 16, 21) he dissolves them.<sup>12</sup>

He who knows how to join (at the morning libation) and to disconnect (at the midday libation) is enabled to spread the thread of the sacrificial days Ahinas). Their (general) junction consists in their being joined on the Chaturviñśa day; and their (general) disconnection in disconnecting them before the concluding Atiâtra (on the Mahâvrata day). When the Hotri-priests would conclude on the Chaturviñśa day with verses appropriate to the Ekâhas, then they would bring the sacrifice to a close, without performing the ceremonies referring to the Ahinas. When they would conclude with the concluding verses of the Ahina days, then the sacrificers would be cut off, just as (a bullock) who is tired must be cut off (from the rope, for he does not move). They ought to conclude with both the Ekâha and Ahîna verses, just as a man setting out on a long journey takes from station to station fresh animals. Thence their sacrifice becomes connected, and they themselves (the sacrificers) find relaxation.

He ought not to overpraise the Stoma (i. e. not to repeat more verses than the singers chant) at the two (first) libations by (more than) one or two verses. When the Stoma is overpraised with many verses, (i. e. more than two) then they become for the Hotri like extensive forests (through which he has to pass without a resting place). At the third libation (he ought to overpraise the Stoma) with an unlimited number of verses. For the heavenly world has no limits. (This serves) for obtaining the celestial world. The Ahîna sacrifice of him who with such a knowledge extends it, remains, if once commenced undisturbed.

The gods after having perceived the cows to be in <sup>13</sup> The way of repeating the so-called Vâlakhilya Shastra, the text of which consists of the Vâlakhilya verses, now arranged in eight hymns, is very artificial, and considered as the most difficult task to be achieved by a Hotri-priest. It is repeated in a manner similar to the repetition of the Shôlasî Shastra (see page 258). The most general term for the peculiar way of repeating both the Vâlakhilya and Shôlasî Shastras is vihâra, that is, the dissecting of a verse by joining to each of its pâdas, a pâda taken from another verse, and reciting then both parts in such a way as if they were forming only one verse. The way in which the Vâlakhilyas are repeated is a modification of the vihâra. It is called vyatunari. This consists in a mutual transposition of the several pâdas or half-verses, or whole verses of the first and second Vâlakhilya hymns which are repeated in sets, always two being taken together. The the cavern,<sup>14</sup> wished to obtain them by means of a sacrifice. They obtained them by means of the sixth day.<sup>15</sup> They bored at the morning libation the cavern with the bore mantra (nabhāka). After having succeeded in making an opening, they loosened (the first two are to be repeated jāda by jāda; the third and fourth by half verses, the fifth and sixth by whole verses (As'v. Śr. S. 8, 2). The general rule for this transposition is expressed by As'val. पूर्वस्य ऋचम-मृचस्य द्वितीयोचनस्य प्रथमं पूर्वस्य द्वितीयया i. e. he must join the first verse (or half verse, or pāda, as the case may be) of the first hymn with the second verse of the following hymn, and then the first of the following hymn with the second of the first. Two such verses form then one Pragātha.

In order to better illustrate the way of transposition, I here subjoin an instance. The first verse of the first Vāṅkhyā hymn is as follows

Ahi pra vah surādhasam indram archa yathā vidē.

Yo jaratibhyo maghavā parāvasur gādān suta arāṇdishukh.

The second verse of the second hymn is -

Satanā hitayo asya dusharā indriasya samichō mahih.

Gur na bhujmā maghavatsu pinvate gādān suta amandishukh.

If the several pādas of these two verses are to be mutually transposed, it is then done in the following way :

(1) Ahi pra vah surādhasam indriasya samichō mahih.

Satanā hitayo asya dusharā indram archa yathā vidom.

(2) Yo jaratibhyo maghavā parāvasur gādān suta arāṇdishukh.

Gur na bhujmā maghavatsu pinvate sakasreva śīkshatom.

At the end of the five first Pragātha verses an Lkapadā or verso containing one pāda only is added. Four of them belong to the performance of the tenth day. These are according to As'val. (8, 2) 1) indro viśvarya gojati; 2) indro viśvarya bhūpati; 3) indro viśvarya chetati; 4) indro viśvarya vājati. The fifth is from the Mahāvratā day, śāreṇa o viśvān vājati. These five Lkapadās are not joined to the Pragātha without a stop after the latter. (प्रगाथान्तेपुचानुपसन्ताम ऋगवानमेकपदः शसिते As'v. 8, 2.)

The Pragātha with the Lkapadā belonging to it is the vāchah lūta, i. e. the point of Speech, according to Sāyana. But this appears not to be quite correct. According to an unmistakable notation in Art. Dr. 6, 24 (upāpto vāchah lūta ekapadāyām) it can mean only the Lkapadā which is added to the Pragātha.

This story is frequently alluded to in the Saṁhitā of the Yajurveda.

stones), and then, at the third libation, broke up the cavern by means of the Vâlakhilya verses, with the Ekapadâ as Vâchah kûta, which served as a weapon and drove the cows out. In this way the sacrificer bore the cavern at the morning libation by means of the Nabhâka, and made, by boring, its structure loose. Hence the Hotri-priests repeat at the morning libation the Nabhâka triplet. The Maitiavaru repeats, yah kakubho nidhâraya (8, 41, 1-6); the Brâhmanâchhañsi, pirrîsh ta indra (8, 40, 9-11); the Achhivâka, tâ hi madhyam bhavânâm (8, 40, 3-5).

At the third libation they break up the cavern with the Vâlakhilya verses, and the one-footed Vâcha kûta which serve as a weapon, and obtain the cows. There are six Vâlakhilya hymns. He repeats them in three turns; for the first time he repeats them foot by foot, dissecting the verse by insertion; for the second time half verse by half verse, and for the third time verse by verse. When he repeats them foot by foot, dissecting the verse by insertion, then he ought to put in every Pragâtha verse (of which each hymn is composed) one additional foot (ekapadâ), which is the Vâchah kûtah, i. e. the point of the Vâch. There are five such Ekapadâs, four of them being taken from the tenth day and one from the Mahâvrata sacrifice.

He ought (if the two verses joined should fall short of a proper Pragâtha by eight syllables) to supply the eight syllables from the Mahânîmnis as often as they might be wanting; for the other pâdas (of the Mahânîmnis which he does not require for filling up the deficiency in the Pragâtha) he ought not to care.●

When reciting the Vâlakhilyas half verse by half verse, he ought to repeat those Ekapadâs; and the pádas from the Mahânâmnîs which consist of eight syllables. When repeating the Vâ lakhilyas verse by verse, he ought (also) to repeat those Ekapadâs, and the pádas of eight syllables which are taken from the Mahânâmnîs. When he repeats, for the first time, the six Vâ lakhilya hymns, then he mixes (churati) breath and speech by it. When he repeats them for the second time, then he mixes the eye and mind by it. When he repeats them for the third time, then he mixes the ear and the soul by it. Thus every desire regarding the mixing (of the senses) becomes fulfilled, and all desires regarding the Vâ lakhilyas, which serves as a weapon, the Vâ chahâ nam in the form of an Ekapadâ and the formation of life will be fulfilled (also).

He repeats the (Vâ lakhilya) Pragâthas for the fourth time without mixing the verses of two hymns. The Pragâthas are cattle. (It serves) for obtaining cattle. He ought not to insert (this time) an Ekapadâ in it. Were he to do so, then he would cut off cattle from the sacrificer by slaying them. (If one should observe a Hotri-priest doing so) one ought to tell him at this occasion, thou hast cut off cattle from the sacrificer by slaying them with the point of speech (vâ chahâ kôta), thou hast deprived him of cattle (altogether). And thus it always happens. Hence one ought never to insert the Ekapadâs at this occasion.

The two last Vâ lakhilya hymns (the seventh and eighth<sup>17</sup>) he adds as a setting (cover). Both are mixed. In such a way, Sarpi, the son of Vatsa, repeated them for a sacrificer, Subala by name. He said, "I have now grasped for the sacrificer the largest number of cattle, the best ones (as a reward for my skill) will come to me." He then gave him (Ārpi) as much Dakṣhinā<sup>18</sup> as to the great priests (Hotar, Adhvaryu, Udgâtar, Brahmâ). The Śastra procures cattle and heaven. Thence one repeats it.

25.

(What kind of hymn ought to be chosen for the Dūrohaṇam.)

He recites a hymn in the Dūrohaṇa way, about which a Brahmaṇyam has been already told (4, 9). If the sacrificer aspires to cattle, then an Indra hymn is required for this purpose. For cattle belonging to Indra; it should be in the Jagatī metre, for cattle have the nature of Jagatī, they are (movable), should be a great hymn (a mahāsukta);<sup>19</sup> for then in places, by it, the sacrificer among the largest number of cattle. He may choose for making Dūrohaṇa the Baru hymn (seen by the Rishi Baru), which is large hymn and in the Jagatī metre.<sup>20</sup>

For one who aspires after a firm footing, an Indra-Varuṇa hymn is required; for this performance the Maitrāvaruṇa (his hotrā) belongs to this deity (and) the Indra-Varuṇa<sup>21</sup> (Yājyâ) is the conclusion of it. It is the Dakṣhinâ of the great priests.

<sup>18</sup> The term is only nindya, to which dakṣhinâ "on the right side" is to be supplied. Cows, horses, &c., which are given as sacrificial reward, are actually carried to the right side of the recipient. The word dakṣhinâ itself is only an abbreviation of dakṣhinâ nita, "what has been carried to the right side." As soon the word was used as a feminine substantive. The noun so supplied is dis direction. The reciter of the Valakhilya Śastras is Maitrāvaruṇa, who as one of the minor Hotri-priests, obtains generally only half the Dakṣhinâ of the great priests.

This (Dûrohaṇa repetition) puts (the reciter) finally in his own place (keeps him in his position). As regards the Indra-Varuṇa hymn, it is at this occasion (when performing the Dûrohaṇam) a Nivid (i. e. like it). By means of the Nivid all desires become gratified. When he should use an Indra-Varuṇa hymn for the Dûrohaṇam, then he ought to choose a hymn by Suparṇa. Thus a desire regarding Indra-Varuṇa and one regarding Suparṇa<sup>22</sup> become gratified (at the same time).

Whether or not the Maitrâvaruṇa should repeat the Ahina and Ekâha hymns along with the Dûrohaṇam.)

They (the interpreters of Brahma) ask, Shall he recite together (with these Dûrohaṇas the Ahina hymns which are required on the sixth day) or shall he not do so? To this question they answer, He shall recite them; for why should he recite them on all other days and not do so on this day? But (others) say he ought not to recite them together with these hymns; <sup>23</sup> for the sixth day represents the heavenly world, the heaven-world is not accessible to every one (asamâyî); for only a certain one (by performing properly the sacrifices) meets there (the previous occupants). Therefore, when the other hymns are repeated together with the Dûrohaṇas, then he (the priest) would make all equal (make all those who sacrifice and those who do not sacrifice equal to heaven). Not to repeat these other hymns along with the Dûrohaṇas is a characteristic of the heaven-world (the celestial world being accessible to a few). Therefore, one ought not to repeat them.

That is the reason that he does not repeat them (Should he do so, he would destroy the sacrificer) for the singing verse (Stotriya) is his soul, and the Vâlakhilyas are his breath. When he repeats (the Ahîna hymn) along (with the Dûrohana), then he takes away the life of the sacrificer through those two deities (Indra-Varuṇa, to whom the Dûrohana belongs). (If one should observe a Hotri-priest doing so), one ought to tell the priest that he has deprived the sacrificer of his vital airs through those two deities (who get angry at it), and that he will lose his life. And thus it always happens. Therefore he ought not to repeat (them).

If the Maitrâvaruṇa should think, "I have repeated the Vâlakhilyas (which was a very arduous task well, I will now repeat before the Dûrohana the Ekâha hymns,"<sup>24</sup> he should not entertain such thought (for it is useless). But, however, should he pride himself too much of his skill, that he would be able to repeat after the Dûrohana (the repetition of which is very difficult) is over, many hundred mantras, he may do so for gratifying that desire alone which is (to be gratified by repeating many mantras). He then obtains what he was wishing to obtain by repeating many mantras. He would, however, do better not to recite them. For the Vâlakhilyas belong to Indra; in them there are pāda of twelve feet<sup>25</sup> and every wish to be gratified by Indra hymn in the Jagatî metre, is contained therein (therefore no other Indra hymn is required).

<sup>25</sup> Some of the Vâlakhilyas are in the Pragâtha metre, which consists of two strophes, called Bṛihati and Satobṛihati. In the third pāda comprises twelve syllables, and in the second and third contain as many. Twelve syllables four times taken constitute the Jagatî metre. Thence the author supposes the Jagatî metre to be contained in the Vâlakhilyas.

(Another reason that he had better not recite them) is the Indra-Varuṇa hymn (of the Dûrohana), and the Indra-Varuṇa (Yâjyâ) which concludes (for these represent a firm footing, of which the sacrificer might be deprived, when repeating hymns which serve for connecting the several days).

They say, The Shashtra must always correspond with the Stotra. Now the Vâlakhilyas being repeated by mixing verses of two hymns (vilhrita), are then the Stotras to be treated in the same way or not? The answer is, There is such a mixing in (the Stotra), a pâda of twelve syllables being joined to one of eight.<sup>26</sup>

They say, The Yâjyâ must correspond with the Shashtra. If in (the Shashtra) there are three deities, viz. Agni, Indra, and Varuṇa mentioned, how does he make the Yâjyâ with a verse addressed to Indra-Varuṇa alone, and omit Agni? (The answer is) Agni and Varuṇa are one and the same being. So said a Rishi in the mantra, "Thou Agni! art born as Varuṇa" (5, 3, 1). If he therefore makes his Yâjyâ with an Indra-Varuṇa mantra, then Agni is not left out.

FIFTH CHAPTER.

The so-called Shilpas, viz. the Nâbhânedishṭha, Narâs'aṁsa, Vâlakhilya, Sukirti, Vṛishâkapi, and Ecagâmarut hymns. The Kuntâpa Shashtra.)

27.

(The Nâbhânedishṭha and Narâs'aṁsa hymns repeated by the Hotar.)

They repeat the Shilpas (hymns for producing wonderful pieces of art). There are such wonder-works of the gods, and the arts in this world are to be understood as an imitation thereof. The gilded cloth spread over an elephant the carriage to which a mule is yoked, are such a wonder-work. This work is understood in this world by him who has such a knowledge. The Shilpa make ready the soul, and imbue it with the knowledge of the sacred hymns. By means of them the Hotri-priest prepares the soul for the sacrificer.

He repeats the Nābhānedishtha hymn (one of the Shilpas). For Nābhānedishtha is the sperm. In such a way he (the priest) effuses the sperm. He praises him (Nābhānedishtha) without mentioning his name. For the semen is like something unspeakable secretly poured forth into the womb. The sperm becomes blended. For when Prajāpati has carnal intercourse with his daughter, his sperm was poured forth upon the earth (and was mixed up with it).<sup>1</sup> This was done for making the sperm produce fruit.

He then repeats the Narâs'aṁsa,<sup>2</sup> for narâs means "offspring," and s'aṁsaḥ "speech." In this way (the priest) places speech into children (when they are born). Thence children are born endowed with the faculty of speech.

Some repeat the Narâs'aṁsa before (the Nābhānedishtha), saying, Speech has its place in the front (of the body); others repeat it after (the Nābhānedishtha), saying, Speech has its place behind (the hinder part of the head). He shall recite it in the middle; for speech has its place in the middle.

<sup>2</sup> This is called the second Nābhānedishtha hymn (10, 62), beginning ye yajnena. There the birth of the Aṅgiras is spoken of.

the body). But speech being always, as it were nearer to the latter part (of the Nâbhânedishtha hymn), the Narâs'aṃsa must be repeated before the Nâbhânedishtha is finished.<sup>3</sup>

The Hotar having effused the sacrificer in the shape of sperm (symbolically), gives him up to the Maitrâvaruṇa, saying, "form his breaths."

28.

(The Vâlahkilyas repeated by the Maitrâvaruṇa.)

He (the Maitrâvaruṇa) now repeats the Vâlahkilyas. For the Vâlahkilyas are the breaths. In this way he forms the breaths of the sacrificer. He repeats them by mixing two verses together. For these breaths are mutually mixed together,<sup>4</sup> with the Prâna the Apâna, and with the Apâna the Vyâna. The two first hymns are repeated pâda by pâda; the second set (third and fourth) half verse by half verse and the third set (fifth and sixth) verse by verse. By repeating the first set, he makes the breath and speech. By repeating the second set, he makes the eye and mind. By repeating the third set, he makes the ear and soul. Some take, when repeating these Vâlahkilya Pragâthas, always two Brihatis, and two Satobrihatis together. Though the wish obtainable by mixing the verses is obtained by this way of recital, yet no Pragâthas<sup>5</sup> are thus formed.

<sup>3</sup> The Nâbhânedishtha hymn, idam itthâ raudram (10, 61) consists of twenty-seven verses; after the twenty-fifth verse is finished, the following Narâs'aṃsa hymn is repeated. The repeater of both the Nâbhânedishtha and Narâs'aṃsa hymns is the Hotar.

<sup>4</sup> The six first Vâlahkilya hymns are repeated in three sets, each comprising two hymns, see page 419.

<sup>5</sup> The form required for the Pragâtha metre is the combination of the Brihati with the Satobrihati. If two Brihatis are taken together, no Pragâtha is formed, nor if two Satobrihatis are joined.

He must repeat them by inserting an additional pāda;<sup>6</sup> then thus are the Pragâthas formed. The Vâlakhilya verses are the Pragâthas. Therefore he must repeat them by inserting a pāda (in order to obtain the Pragâtha metre). The Bṛihatî of the Pragâtha is the soul, the Satobṛihatî the life. If he has repeated the Bṛihatî, then the soul (is made) and if he has repeated the Satobṛihatî, the vital airs (are made). By thus repeating the Bṛihat and the Satobṛihatî, he surrounds the soul with the vital airs. Therefore he must repeat the Vâlakhilyas in such a way as to obtain the Pragâtha metre. The Bṛihatî is the soul, and the Satobṛihat cattle. If he has repeated the Bṛihatî, then the soul (is made); and if he has repeated the Satobṛihatî then cattle (is made). By repeating both he surround the soul with cattle. The two last hymns are repeated in an inverted order (first the eighth and then the seventh).

The Maitrâvaruṇa after having made in this way the vital airs of the sacrificer, hands him over to the Brâhmaṇâchhañsî, saying, "create him now (in the human form)."

29.

(The Sukîrti and Vṛishâkapi hymns repeated by the Brâhmaṇâchhañsî.)

The Brâhmaṇâchhañsî repeats the Sukîrti hymn: for the Sukîrti is the womb of the gods. He thus causes the sacrificer to be born out of the sacrifice which is the womb of the gods.

He repeats the Vṛishâkapi hymn.<sup>8</sup> For Vṛishâkapi is the soul. In this way he makes the soul the sacrificer. He repeats it with Nyûnkha.<sup>9</sup> The Nyûnkha is food. In this way he provides him with food when born with food, just as (a mother) gives the breast to her child. That hymn is in the Pañkti (i. e. five-hood) metre; for man consists of five parts, viz. hair, skin, flesh, bones and marrow. He prepares the sacrificer just in the same way, as man (in general) is prepared.

The Brâhmaṇâchhañsî, after having created the sacrificer, hands him over to the Achhâvâka, saying, "make a footing for him."

30.

(The Evayâmarut repeated by the Achhâvâka. Story of Bulila.)

The Achhâvâka now repeats the Evayâmarut hymn.<sup>10</sup> This hymn is the footing; by repeating it the Achhâvâka makes a footing to the sacrificer. He repeats it with Nyûnkha. The Nyûnkha is food. Thus he provides the sacrificer with food. In this hymn there is the Jagatî and Atijagatî metre, which metres comprise the whole universe what falls in the sphere of movable things as well as what falls beyond it. It is addressed to the Marutas. The Marutas are the waters; and water is food which is to be filled (in the sacrificer like water in a pot). In this way he provides the sacrificer with food.

The Nâbhânedishṭha, Vâ lakhilyas, Vṛishâkapi, and Evayâmaruta are called "auxiliary hymns." The priest ought to recite them (all) along with (the other hymns); (if he does not like that) he ought not to repeat any (of them along with the other hymns).

<sup>9</sup> This Nyûnkha differs somewhat from the usual way of making the sound i is uttered sixteen times, three times with three moras, and thirteen times with half moras. See As'val. S'r. S. 8, 3.

But if he should repeat them on different (days or occasions) it is just as if one would separate a man from his sperm. Thence he ought either to repeat them along with (the other hymns) or omit them entirely.

That (famous) Bulila, the son of As'vatarā, the son of As'va, being once Hotar at the Viśva sacrifice, speculated about this matter, that is to say these Shilpas (these auxiliary hymns). He thought "There having been added two Shastras (that of the Maitrāvaruṇa and that of the Brāhmaṇāchhaṁsī) the midday libation in the Viśvajit of the sacrifice sessions for a year, I thus (in further addition) will repeat the Evayāmaruta." Thus he recited it. When he was repeating it Gaus'la came near him, and said "Hotar! Why does thy Shashtra proceed with the wheels? How has it come (that thou art acting such a way)?" The Evayāmaruta is repeated by Achhāvāka standing north from the Hotar. He further said, "The midday libation belongs to Indra. Why dost thou wish to turn out Indra from it?" He answered, "I do not wish to turn out Indra from midday libation." He said, (Yes, you do), for the particular metre being the Jagatī and Atijagatī is fit for the midday libation,<sup>11</sup> and the hymn is best addressed to the Marutas (not to Indra, as it should be); therefore one should not repeat it. Bulila then said, "Stop, Achhāvāka, I wish to carry out Gaus'la's order." Gaus'la then said, "I shall repeat an Indra hymn, in which the mark Vishṇu is impressed."<sup>12</sup> Thence thou, Hotar, s

<sup>12</sup> Instead of the Evayāmaruta, the Achhāvāka is to repeat, "na ya (8, 20), which is an Indra hymn. Vishṇu is mentioned the fourth pāda of the second verse by the words, vishṇunā sachi cave out from thy Shastra this Evayâmaruta, which was recited after the Rudra Dhâyyâ, and before the Maruta Shastra." He did so, and so they proceed now.

31.

Queries on some particulars of the application of these auxiliary hymns. Their meaning.)

They ask, Why do they not repeat the Nâbhânedishtha in the Vis'vajit, Atirâtra, and on the sixth day of the Shalâha, when they make the sacrifice complete and reproduce the sacrificer (in a mystical way), although the Maitrâvaruṇa repeats the lakkilyas which represent the breaths, but not the sperm (as the Nâbhânedishtha does), whilst the sperm must precede the breaths (in the act of generation)? In the same way why does the Brâhmanapâchhaṁsi repeat the Vṛishâkapi when the Nâbhânedishtha is not repeated? For the Vṛishâkapi is the sperm, whilst the sperm represented by the Nâbhânedishtha hymn precedes the making of the embryo. How then can the sacrificer be reproduced in this way? How can that be effected, if his life is consumed (by the act of generation)? For the priests produce the sacrificer (make him anew) by means of the sacrificial process. Therefore the whole making of the sacrificer cannot be made at once at the beginning, but just as an embryo which, lying in the womb, develops itself (grows gradually). He has all limbs (only then he is entire). The priests should make them all on the same day. Thus the sacrifice is made ready, then the reproduction of the sacrificer is effected.

The Hotar repeats the Evayâmarut at the third session. For this is the sacrificer's footing on which the Hotar places him at the end.

32.

(On the origin and nature of the so-called Kuntāpa hymns, Atharvaveda 20, 127-136. The Nārāśaṁsī, Ruibhi and Pārikshiti, Dis'ām kṛīṭi and Janakulpa verses; the Indra-gāthās.)

The juice of the metres which were all done by the sixth day (at the Shalaha) was running (over the him). Prajāpati got afraid lest the juice of the metres might go away and run over the world. Therefore he kept it down by means of metres placed on another part (above them). With the Nārāśaṁsī he kept down (the juice) of the Gāyatri, with the Ruibhi that of the Trishtubh, with the Pārikshiti that of the Jagatis, with the Kāranyā that of the Anu-

<sup>13</sup> The so-called Kuntāpa hymns are to be repeated by the Brahmanāchārya after he has finished the Vishūkapa. Their reciter has several peculiarities regarding the response, which all are noted by Aśval. Sr. 8, (8, 3). The response for the first 14 verses beginning with idam jānu upa śrūta is at the end of each verse on it is simply othāmo dāvam. The verses which immediately follow up to etā asvī āptaranta have two responses each, after every verse. The seventy paṭas commencing with etā asvī have one response. The six verses commencing with ratatāḥ kṛāva have each a peculiar response after the first half verse. So the response ratatāḥ is dundubhim āhanawibhyām jaritar othāmo dāva, and the second is kaśābile jaritar, &c. they are all given in the Atharva Saṁhitā (20, 131) along with the text of which they form a whole no part. For the response (pratigata) is repeated by the Adhvaryu. Similar responses occur in all verses which follow as far as the daratham, aditīya jaritar; they all are given in the Atharva such as pipilakāratāḥ, śvī, parvas adah, &c. which all are followed by jaritar othāmo dāvam. In the Devanītha (Athar. 20, 135, 6) the response is in the first pāda of each verse; it is om ha jar othāmo dāva. These Kuntāpa songs do not bear a strictly liturgical character; they are prose songs principally referring to Deities and belong to that class of ancient poetry which bears the name of nārāśaṁsī. This may be clearly seen from the commencement of the whole collection, idam jānu upa śrūta nārāśaṁsī śaravā i. e. hearken ye people to this; Nārāśaṁsī will be praised chants. The recitation of these pieces is accompanied with musical instruments, such as dundubhi, karkari, &c. The reciter has been originally the chanter; for in the response he is addressed by "jaritar" i. e. singer.

Thus he provided again the metres with good juice. The sacrifice of him who has this knowledge becomes performed with metres keeping their juice, and he spreads it with metres keeping their juice (i. e. the essence of the sacrifice is not lost). The priest now repeats: ॐ स्वाहा स्वाहा स्वाहा

The priest now repeats Narás'aṁsī verses.<sup>14</sup> For narāḥ (men) means children, and s'aṁsah speech. He thus places speech in children. Therefore the children of him who has this knowledge are born with the faculty of speaking. The Gods and Rishis having gained the heavenly world by repeating the Narā. aṁsa verses, the sacrificers who repeat them go to the heavenly world also. The priest stops when repeating these verses, after each of the two or three last pādas, and after the two or three last taken together,<sup>15</sup> just as he does when repeating the Vṛishákapi. For what is of the same nature as the Vṛishákapi is the *Narā. aṁsī*s are supposed to be) follows the same rule. In repeating them he shall not make Avākṣa,<sup>16</sup> but pronounce them with a kind of

is a translation of the term pragāḥa. Several of the verses in the Puṅkita-mātra, then the three last paṇḍas are taken together. In this goes they are just recited as the Vaiśakapi hymn. The Yamūka is not made, but instead of it the Nimāda, which is said before it. This peculiar pronunciation of the vowel takes place in the second syllable of the third, and the fourth of the fourth line. The Pratigara is mudhāṇa dāwom oṭhimo dāwom. In reciting the Nimāda the pragāḥa is not made.

In repeating the Viśvāṅkapi hymn, both the Nyūṅkha and the third pada, which is the proper place for the Anārda also, (see page 322). The Anārda is described by Saṁ. Br. S. 7, 11, as follows: obāra e' aia nārda udattān aīamottamān aundittātara utaro śnādātā'arah plutaḥ (the first and last times it has the udattā accent, the first and last times it has the aundittā accent, the latter of which has even the aundittā accent); the first (and last) is pronounced with three moras. The first way of making the Anārda by pronouncing the o first with the udatta, then with the aundattā, then with āra, and lastly with the udattā accent again.

Ninārda,<sup>17</sup> for this is the Nyûñkha of the Narâs'añs verses.

The priest repeats the Raibhî verses.<sup>18</sup> For the Gods and Rishis went by making a great noise (rebhanta to the celestial world; in the same way, therefore, the sacrificers go to the celestial world. (The recital just the same as that of the Narâs'añs, and subject to the same rules.)

He repeats the Pârikshiti verses.<sup>19</sup> For Agni is the dweller round about (parikshit); he lives round the people, and the people live round (parikshî) him. He who has such a knowledge obtains union with Agni, and shares the same character and abode with him. As to these Pârikshiti verses (they may have another meaning too). For the year is parikshit (dwelling round about); for it dwells round about men, and men dwell round about the year. Therefore he who has this knowledge obtains union with the year (sañmatsara) and shares its character and abode. (The Pârikshiti verses are repeated in the same manner as the Narâs'añs.)

He repeats the Kâravyâ verses.<sup>20</sup> For a work of the gods crowned with success was performed by means of the Kâravyâs; and the same then the case with the sacrificers. (The recital the same as that of the Narâs'añs.)

The priest now repeats the "directions for the verses" (dis'âm kṛiptis).<sup>21</sup> For in this way

<sup>17</sup> Nirîva is to be parsed ni vi va, the ni and vi belonging to the verb nardet. The whole means literally, he ought to make a peculiar species of the Ninārda, as it were.

forms the directions. He repeats five such verses; for there are five directions, viz. the four points (east, west, south, and north) and one direction above crossing (them all). He ought not to repeat (these verses) with Nyûnkha, nor make the Ninarda in the same way as above. Thinking, I will not mutilate (nyûnkhañi)<sup>22</sup> these directions, he repeats these verses, half verse by half verse.

For making a footing he then repeats the Jana-kalpa verses<sup>23</sup>. For children are janakalpa (production of men). Having made the directions in the above manner, he places people in them. He shall not repeat these verses with Nyûnkha, nor with the Ninarda, but just in the same way and for the same reasons as the dis'âm kṛipti.

He repeats the Indra-gâthâs.<sup>24</sup> For by means of the Indra songs the Devas sang the Asuras down and defeated them. In the same way the sacrificers put down their enemies by these songs. They are repeated, half verse by half verse, to obtain a footing for the sacrificer.

33.

aitas'â-pralâpa. The Pravahlika, Ajijnâsenya Pratirâdha, and Atirâdu verses.)

The priest (Brâhmanâchhañsi) repeats the Aitas'â-pralâpa. Aitas'â was a Muni. He saw the mantras, called "the life of Agni" (agner âyuh), which should move all defects from the sacrifice, as some say. He said to his sons, "O my dear sons, I saw 'the life of Agni,' I will talk about it; but pray do not scorn at me for anything I might speak. He then commenced to repeat, etâ asvâ âplavante, pratipam

prāti sutranam (A. V. 20, 129, 1 et seq.).<sup>25</sup> Then one of his family, Abhyagni by name, went to him at an improper time (before Aitas'a had finished his talk) and stopped his mouth by putting his hand on it, saying "Our father has become mad." Then his father said to him, "Go away, become infected with leprosy, thou who hast murdered my speech. I would be able to prolong the life of a cow to a hundred, and that of a man to a thousand years (if thou wouldst not have stopped my mouth), but thou, my son, who hast overpowered me (in such an improper way), I curse thy progeny shall come into the condition of the lowest among the most wicked." Therefore they say that among the Āitas'āyanas the Abhyagnis are most burdened with sins, in the whole Aurva-Got (to which they belong). Some priests lengthen the Aitas'a-pralāpa (repeating eighteen more pādas). (If they choose to do so) one should not prevent them; but say, "repeat as long as you like. For the Aitas'a-pralāpa is life." Therefore he who has this knowledge, prolongs in this way the life of the sacrificer.

As to the Aitas'a-pralāpa, there is another meaning in it. For it is the essence (juice) of the metres; by repeating it the reciter puts speech in the metres. He who has this knowledge will keep the essence in the metres, when the sacrifice is performed, and will spread the sacrifice with the essence of the metres.

But there is still another meaning in the Aitas'a-pralāpa; it is fit for removing defects in the sacrifice and for restoring its entirety. For the Aitas'a-pralāpa is imperishableness. (Therefore when it is recited the sacrificer wishes) "May my sacrifice last and all its defects be removed." He repeats this Aitas'a-pralâpa, stopping after every pâda, just as the Nivid is repeated; at the last pâda he pronounces "om," just as it is done in the Nivid.

He repeats the Pravahlika verses.<sup>26</sup> For the gods made the Asuras benumbed (pravahlya) by means of the Pravahlikâs, and consequently defeated them. In the same way the sacrificers benumb and defeat their enemies by repeating these verses. They are repeated half verse by half verse for obtaining a footing.

He repeats the Ajijnâsenya verses.<sup>27</sup> For by means of these verses the Devas recognised (âjnâya) the Asuras and defeated them. In the same way the sacrificers recognise and defeat their enemies. They are repeated half verse by half verse.

He now repeats the Pratirâdha.<sup>28</sup> For by means of it the Devas frustrated (prati-râdh) the efforts of the Asuras, and consequently defeated them. The same effect is produced by the sacrificers who have repeated it.

He repeats the Ativâda.<sup>29</sup> For by means of it the Devas abused (ativad) the Asuras so much as to defeat them. The same effect is produced by the sacrificers who repeat it. They are repeated half verse by half verse for obtaining a footing.

34.

Story of the sacrifices of the Adityas and Aṅgirasas for reaching heaven.)

He repeats the Deranitham.<sup>30</sup> (About this the following story is reported.) The Aditiyas and Añ-

girasas were contending with one another as to who should gain first the heavenly world. The Aṅgirasas, had seen (in their mind) that, by dint of the Soma sacrifice they were about to bring on the next day, they would be raised to heaven first. They therefore dispatched one from among themselves, Agni by name, instructing him thus : "Go to the Adityas and announce to them that we shall, by dint of our to-morrow's Soma sacrifice, go to heaven." As soon as the Adityas got sight of Agni, they at once saw (in their minds) the Soma sacrifice by which they would reach heaven. Having come near them, Agni said, "I will inform you of our bringing to-morrow that Soma sacrifice by means of which we shall reach heaven. They answered, "And we announce to you that we are just now contemplating to bring that Soma sacrifice by means of which we shall reach heaven; but this (Agni) must serve as our Hotar, then we shall go to heaven. He said, "Yes," (and went back to the Aṅgirasas). After having told (the Aṅgirasas) the message of the Adityas and received their reply, he went back (to the Adityas). They asked him, "Hast thou told our message?" He said, "Yes, I have told it (to the Aṅgirasas); and they answered, and asked 'Did'st thou not promise us thy assistance (as Hotar),' and I said, 'Yes, I have promised.' (and I could not decline the offer of the Adityas). He who engages in performing the duty of a sacrificial priest, obtains fame; and any one who prevents the sacrifice from being performed, excludes him from his fame. Therefore I did not prevent (by declining the offer)." If one wishes to decline service as a sacrificial priest, then this refusal is justified on account of oneself being engaged in a sacrifice, or because of being legally prohibited from performing the sacrificial duties.

On the Dakshinâ given by the Adityas to the Aṅgirasas. The Devanîtha hymn.)

The Aṅgirasas, therefore, assisted the Adityas in their sacrifice. For this service the Adityas gave them the earth filled with presents (dakshinâ) as reward. But when they had accepted her, she burnt them. Therefore they flung her away. She then became a lioness, and opening her mouth, attacked people. From this burning state of the earth came those ruptures (which are now visible on her), whereas she had been previously quite even.<sup>31</sup> Thence one shall not retake a sacrificial reward which one has once refused to accept. (For he must think) the Dakshinâ being penetrated by a flame, shall not penetrate me with it. But should he take it back, then he may give it to his adversary and enemy, who will be defeated, for it burns him.

That (Aditya, the sun) then assuming the shape of a white horse with bridle and harness, presented himself to the other Adityas, who said, "Let us try this gift to you (the Aṅgirasas)." Therefore is Devanîtha, i. e. what is carried by the gods, is be recited.

(Now follows the Devanîtha with explanatory remarks.)

"The Adityas, O singer! brought the Aṅgirasas their reward. The Aṅgirasas, O singer, did not go near," i. e. they did not go near to that first gift (the earth).

"But, O singer! (afterwards) they went near it," i. e. they went near the other gift (the white horse).

<sup>31</sup> Here we have an attempt to explain the unevenness of the earth. It is interesting to see the theories of modern geology shadowed in this certainly ancient myth.

"They did not accept it, O singer," i. e. they did not accept this earth. "But they accepted it," i. e. they accepted that white horse.

"He, (Aditya, the sun) being carried away,<sup>32</sup> the days disappeared;" for he (the sun) makes the days visible.

"He being carried away, the wise men were without a leader (purogava)." For the reward (Dakṣiṇâ) is the leader in the sacrifices. Just as a carriage without having a bullock as a leader yoked to it, becomes damaged, a sacrifice at which no reward (Dakṣiṇâ) is given, becomes damaged also. Therefore the sacrificial reward must be given (to the performers of a sacrifice), and even if it should be but very little (on account of the poverty of the sacrificer).

"And further this horse is white, with quickly running feet, the swiftest (of all). He quickly discharges the duties incumbent on him. The Adityas, Rudras, and Vasavas praise (him). Accept, therefore, this gift, O Aṅgiras!" They now intended accepting this gift.

"This gift is large and splendid. This present which the gods have given, shall be your illuminator. It shall be with you every day. Thence consent to accept it!" (After having heard these words) the Aṅgiras accepted the reward.

In reciting this Devanîtha, the priest stops at every pâda, just as is done when the Nivid is repeated, and pronounces "om" at the last pâda, just as is the case with the Nivid.

<sup>32</sup> Instead of neta sann, which reading is to be found here, as well as in the Atharvaveda, netah sann must be read; neath then is an irregular form of the past part. of nî to carry, standing for nita.

36.

(Bhûte-chhad, Ahanasya, Dadhikrâvan, Pâvamânya, and the Indra Brihaspati verses.)

He now repeats the Bhûte-chhad<sup>33</sup> (dazzling power) verses. By means of these verses the Devas approached the Asuras by fighting and cunning. For by means of them they dazzled the power of the Asuras, and consequently overcame them. In the same way the sacrificer who repeats these verses, overcomes his enemy. They are repeated half verse by half verse, to obtain a footing.

He now repeats the Ahanasya<sup>34</sup> verses. For the sperm is poured forth from the Ahanasya (penis); and from the sperm creatures are born. In this way he priest makes offspring (to the sacrificer.) These verses are ten in number; for the Virâj has ten syllables, and the Virâj is food; from food the sperm is produced) and can (consequently) be poured forth, and from sperm creatures are produced. He repeats them with Nyûnkha; for this is food.

He now repeats the Dadhikrâvan verse, dadhikrâvano ahârisham (Atharv. V. 20, 137, 3). For the Dadhikra is the purifier of the gods. For he (the priest) spoke such (words<sup>35</sup>) as are to be regarded as the speech containing the most excellent semen.<sup>36</sup> By means of this purifier of the gods he purifies speech (âch). The verse is in the Anushtubh metre; for âch is Anushtubh, and thus she becomes purified by her own metre.

He now repeats the Pâvamânya verses, sutâso madhumatamâ (9, 101, 4); for the Pâvamânyas (purification verses) are the purification of the gods. For he spoke such (words) as are to be regarded as the speech containing the most excellent semen. By means of this purifier of the gods he purifies speech. They are Anushtubhs; for the Vâch is Anushtubh, and thus she becomes purified by her own metre.

He now repeats the Indra-Bṛihaspati triplet of verses commencing, avâ drapso aṁsumatīm (8, 85 13-15). At the end of it (verse 15) there is said "Indra assisted by Bṛihaspati, conquered the tribes of the despisers of the Devas when they encountered (the Devas on the battle field)." For the Asura nation, when they had marched out to fight against the Devas, was everywhere subjugated by Indra with the assistance of Bṛihaspati, and driven away. Therefore the sacrificers subdue and drive away by means of Indra and Bṛihaspati the nation of the Asura (asurya varna).<sup>37</sup>

They ask, Should the Hotri-priest, on the sixth day, repeat (the hymns) along (with the additions) (Shastrâs ?) See 6, 26.

He concludes with a Bṛihaspati verse; thence he ought not to repeat (the hymns) along (with the additional Shastras).

SEVENTH BOOK.

FIRST CHAPTER.

(The distribution of the different parts of the sacrificial animal among the priests.)

1.

Now follows the division of the different parts of the sacrificial animal (among the priests). We shall describe it. The two jawbones with the tongue are to be given to the Prastotar; the breast in the form of an eagle to the Udgâtar; the throat with the palate to the Pratihartar; the lower part of the right loins to the Hotar; the left to the Brahmâ; the right thigh to the Maitrâvaruṇa; the left to the Brahmanâchhhaṁsî; the right side with the shoulder to the Adhvaryu; the left side to those who accompany the chants;<sup>2</sup> the left shoulder to the Pratipasthâtar; the lower part of the right arm to the Neshtar; the lower part of the left arm to the Potar; the upper part of the right thigh to the Achhâvâkar; the left to the Agnîdhra; the upper part of the right arm to the Atreya<sup>3</sup>; the left to the Sadasya; the back bone

<sup>3</sup> The Atreya who is here mentioned as a receiver of a share in the sacrificial animal, is no officiating priest. But the circumstance that he receives gold for his Dahshîṇâ and that it is given to him before and the urinal bladder to the Gṛihapati (sacrificer); the right feet to the Gṛihapati who gives a feasting; the left feet to the wife of that Gṛihapati who gives a feasting; the upper lip is common to both (the Gṛihapati and his wife), which is to be divided by the Gṛihapati. They offer the tail of the animal to wives, but they should give it to a Brâhmaṇa; the fleshy processes (maṇihāḥ) on the neck and three gristles (kikasāḥ) to the Grâvastut; three other gristles and one-half of the fleshy part on the back (vaihartta<sup>4</sup>) to the Unnetar; the other half of the fleshy part on the neck and the left lobe (kloma<sup>5</sup>) to the slaughterer, who should present it to a Brâhmaṇa, if he himself would not happen to be a Brâhmaṇa. The head is to be given to the Subrahmanyâ, the skin belongs to him (the Subrahmanyâ), who spoke, s'vah sutyâm (to morrow at the Soma sacrifice);<sup>6</sup> that part of the sacrificial animal at a Soma sacrifice which belongs to Ilâ (sacrificial food) is common to all the priests; only for the Hotar it is optional.

All these portions of the sacrificial animal amount to thirty-six single pieces, each of which represents the pâda (foot) of a verse by which the sacrifice is carried up. The Bṛihatî metre consists of thirty-six syllables; and the heavenly worlds are of the Bṛihatî nature. In this way (by dividing the animal into thirty-six parts) they gain life (in this world) and the heavens, and having become established in both (this and that world) they walk there.

the other priests (save the Agnidhra), as we learn from the Kâṭiya S'râuta Sûtras 10, 2, 21 shows, that he had a certain right to a principal share in all sacrificial donations. Atreya meaning only a descendant of the Atrigotra, the right appears to have been hereditary in the family of the ancient Rishi Atri.

To those who divide the sacrificial animal in the way mentioned, it becomes the guide to heaven. But those who make the division otherwise are like scoundrels and miscreants who kill an animal merely (for gratifying their lust after flesh).

This division of the sacrificial animal was invented by the Rishi Devabhāga, a son of Ś'ruta.<sup>9</sup> When he was departing from this life, he did not entrust (the secret to any one). But a supernatural being communicated it to Girija, the son of Babhrū. Since his time men study it.

SECOND CHAPTER.

2.

(What penances are required when an Agnihotri dies.)

They ask, If a man who has already established a sacred fire (an Agnihotri) should die on the day previous to a sacrifice (upavasatha), what is to become of his sacrifice (to which all preparations had been made)? One should not have it brought; thus say some; for he (the owner) himself has no share in the sacrifice.

They ask, If an Agnihotri should die after having placed the intended fire offering, be it the śānnāyā<sup>1</sup> or (other) offerings (on the fire), how is <sup>9</sup> Thus Śāy., but the translation, 'Shrotriya, i. e. sacrificial priest acquainted with the Shruti) would suit better.

<sup>1</sup> Śānnāyā is the technical term for a certain offering of the Agnihotri. It is prepared in the following way: The Adhvaryu takes the milk from three cows called Gāṅgā, Yamunā, and Saravati, on the morning and evening, and gives it to the Agnidhra. Half the milk is first drawn from the udder of each of the three cows under the recital of mantras; then the same is done silently (tūshnim). The milk is taken from these cows on the evening of the New Moon this to be atoned for? One shall put all these things one after the other round the fire (like sticks, paridhas) and burn them all together. This is the penance.

They ask, If an Agnihotri should die after having placed the sacrificial offerings (ready made) on the Vedi,<sup>2</sup> what is the atonement? One ought to sacrifice them all in the Ahavanīya fire with the formula Sráhá, to all those deities for whom they were intended (by the deceased Agnihotri).

They ask, If an Agnihotri should die when abroad what is to become of his burnt offering (agnihotram). (There are two ways). Either one shall then sacrifice the milk of a cow to which another (as its own) calf had been brought (to rear it up), for the milk of such a cow is as different as the oblation brought in the name of an Agnihotri deceased. Or they may offer the milk of any other cow. But they mention another way besides. (The relatives of the deceased Agnihotri) should keep burning the (three) constantly blazing fires (Ahavanīya, &c. without giving them any offering till the ashes of the deceased shall have been collected. Should they not be forthcoming, then they should take three hundred and sixty footstalks of Palāśa leaves and form of them a human figure, and perform in it all the funeral ceremonies required (árit). After having brought the members of this artificial corpse into contact with the three sacred fires, they shall remove (extinguish) them. They shall make this human

On the penances in the case of the Sânnâyya being spoiled.)

They ask, If the Sânnâyya which was milked on the evening becomes spoiled or is lost (during the night), what is the penance for it? (The answer is) The Agnihotri shall divide the milk of the morning into two parts, and after having curdled one part of it, he may offer it. This is the penance.

They ask, If the Sânnâyya which was milked on the morning becomes spoiled or lost, what is the penance? (The answer is) He must prepare a Purodâśa for Indra and Mahendra, divide it instead of the milk, into the parts required, and then sacrifice it. This is the penance.

They ask, If all the milk (of the morning and evening) of the Sânnâyya becomes spoiled or is lost, what is the penance for it? The penance is made the same way by offering the Indra or Mahendra purodâśa (as in the preceding case.)

They ask, If all the offerings (Purodâśa, curds, milk) become spoiled or are lost, what is the penance for it? He ought to prepare all these offerings with melted butter, and having apportioned to the several gods their respective parts, should sacrifice this Vyāvahaviṣ (offerings with melted butter) as an Ishti.

Then he ought to prepare another Ishti all smooth and even. This sacrifice performed (in the regular way) is the penance for the first which had been spoiled.

(The penances required when anything of the Agnihotram is spilt, or the spoon is broken, or the Gârhapatya fire extinguished.)

They ask, If anything improper for being offered should fall into the fire offering when placed (over the fire to make it ready), what is the penance for it? The Agnihotri then ought to pour all this into a Sruch (sacrificial spoon), go eastwards and place the usual fuel (samidh) into the Ahavaniya fire. After having taken some hot ashes from the northern part of the Ahavaniya fire, he shall sacrifice it by repeating either in his mind (the usual Agnihotra mantra), or the Prajâpati verse.<sup>3</sup> In this way (by means of the hot ashes) the offering becomes sacrificed and not sacrificed.<sup>4</sup> (It is of no consequence whether only one or two turns of the oblation (become) spoiled); the penance for it is always performed in the way described. Should the Agnihotri be able to remove thus (the unclean thing fallen into the offering) by pouring out all that is spoiled, and pour in what is unspoiled, then he ought to sacrifice it just as its turn<sup>5</sup> is. This is the penance.

They ask, If the fire offering when placed over the fire (for being made ready) is spilt or runs over (by boiling), what is then the penance for it? It shall touch what fell down with water for appeasing (arresting the evil consequences); for water serves for this purpose. Then moving with his right hand over what fell out, he mutters the mantra, "May a third go to heaven to the gods as a sacrifice; might I obtain thence wealth! May a third go to the air, to the Pitaras, as a sacrifice; might I obtain thence wealth! May a third go to the earth, to men; might I obtain thence wealth!" Then he mutters the Vishnu-Varuṇa verse, yayor ojasā shubhitā rajāṁsi (A. V. 7, 25, 1).<sup>6</sup> For Vishnu watches over what is performed badly in the sacrifice, and Varuṇa over what is performed well. To appease both of them this penance (is appropriate).

They ask, When the fire offering, after having been made ready, at the time when the Adhvaryu takes it eastward to the Ahavaniya fire (to sacrifice it), runs over or is spilt altogether, what is the penance for it? (The Adhvaryu is not allowed to turn back his face.) If he would turn his face backward, then he would turn the sacrificer from heaven. Therefore some other men must gather up for him when he is seated (having turned the face eastward) the remainder of the offering, which he then sacrifices last in its turn.<sup>7</sup> This is the penance for it.

They ask, if the sacrificial spoon (sruch) should be broken, what is the penance for it? He ought to take another Sruch and sacrifice with it. Then he shall throw the broken Sruch into the Ahavaniya fire, the stick being in the front, and its cavity behind. This is the penance for it.

They ask, If the fire in the Ahavaniya only is running, but that in the Gârhapatya is extinguished, what is the penance for it? When he takes off the eastern portion of the Ahavaniya (for the Gârhapatya) then he might lose his place; if he takes off the western portion, then he would spread the sacrifice in the way the Asuras do; if he kindles (a new fire by friction, then he might produce an enemy to the sacrificer; if he extinguishes it, then the vital breath would leave the sacrificer. Thence he must take the whole (Ahavaniya fire) and mixing it with its ashes, place it in the Gârhapatya, and then take of the eastern part as Ahavaniya. This is the penance for it.

(The penances for a firebrand taken from a sacred fire, for mingling the sacred fires with one another or with profane fires.)

They ask, If they take fire from that belonging to an Agnihotri,<sup>8</sup> what is the penance for it? Should another Agni be at hand, then he should put him in the place of the former which has been taken. Were this not the case, then he ought to portion out to Agni Agnivat a Purodâśa consisting of eight pieces (kapâlas). The Anuvâkyâ and Yâjyâ required for this purpose are, agninâ agniḥ samidhyate (fire is kindled by fire, 1, 12, 6); tvam hy agne agninâ (43, 14). Or he may omit the Anuvâkyâ and Yâjyâ verses and (simply) throw (melted butter) into the Ahavaniya, under the recital of the words, to Agni Agnivat Svâhâ! This is the penance for it.

They ask, When some one's Ahavaniya and Gârhapatya fires should become mutually mingle together, what is the penance for it? One must portion out to Agni vîti a Purodâśa consisting of eight pieces, under the recital of the following

They ask, When all the (three) fires of an Agnihotri should become mutually mingled together, what is the penance for it? One must portion out to Agni Vivichi (Agni the separator) a Purodâśa consisting of eight pieces, and repeat the following Anuvâkyâ and Yâjyâ verses, svar na rastor ushasam arochi (7, 10, 2); trâm agne mântushir îlale visâh (5, 8, 3). Or he may (simply) offer (melted butter) under the recital of, to Agni Vivichi Svâhâ! in the Ahavanîya fire. This is the penance for it. .

They ask, When some one's fires are mingled together with other fires, what is the penance for it? One must portion out to Agni kshâmât a Purodâśa, consisting of eight pieces under the recital of the following Anuvâkyâ and Yâjyâ: akrandat agnis tannan (10, 45, 4); adha yathâ nah pitarah parâsah (4, 2, 16). Or he may (simply) sacrifice (melted butter) under the recital of, to Agni kshâmât Svâhâ! in the Ahavanîya fire. This is the penance for it.

The penance for a sacred fire becoming mixed with those of a conflagration in a village, or in a wood, or with lightning, or with those burning a corpse.)

They ask, when the fire of an Agnihotri should burn together with the fire of a general conflagration in the village, what is the penance for it? He ought to portion out a Purodâśa consisting of eight pieces to Agni Sañvargâ (Agni the mingler) under the recital of the following Anuvâkyâ and Yâjyâ: huvit su no jvishîtaye (8, 64, 11), mâ no asmin mahâdhane (8, 64, 12). Or he may (simply) sacrifice (melted butter under the recital of, to Agni Saṁvarga Svāhā! in the Ahavanīya fire. This is the penance for it.

They ask, when the fires of an Agnihotri (have been struck) by lightning, and become mingled with it, what is the penance for it? He must offer to Agni apsumat (water Agni) a Puroḍaś consisting of eight pieces under the recital of the following Anuvākyā and Yājyā: Apse agne (8, 43, 9) Mayó dadhe (3, 1, 3). Or he may (simply) sacrifice (melted butter) under the recital of, to Agni apsuma Svāhā! in the Ahavanīya fire. This is the penance for it.

• They ask, When the fires of an Agnihotri should become mingled with the fire which burns a corpse what is the penance for it? He must offer to Agnī śūchi a Puroḍaś consisting of eight pieces under the recital of the following Anuvākyā and Yājyā Agnī śūchirvatatamaḥ (8, 44, 21); ud agne śūchayata (8, 44, 17). Or he may (simply) sacrifice (melted butter) under the recital of, to Agni śūchi Svāhā! in the Ahavanīya fire. This is the penance for it.

They ask, When the fires of an Agnihotri should burn together with those of a forest conflagration what is the penance for it? He shall catch the fires with the Arāṇis (the two wooden sticks used for producing fire), or (if this be impossible) he should save a firebrand from either the Ahavanīya or Gārhapatya. Were this impossible, then he must offer to Agni Saṁvarga (Agni the mixer) a Puroḍaś consisting of eight pieces under the recital of the abovementioned Anuvākyā and Yājyā (which belong to the Agni Saṁvarga). Or he may (simply) sacrifice (melted butter) under the recital of, to Agni Saṁvarga Svāhā! in the Ahavanīya fire. This is the penance for it.

8.

(The penances when the Agnihotri sheds tears, or breaks his vow, or neglects the performance of the Dars'apūrṇima ishti, or when he allows his fires to go out.)

They ask, when an Agnihotri on the day previous to the sacrifice should shed tears, by which the Purodās'a might be sullied, what is the penance for it? He must offer to Agni vratabhrit (Agni the bearer of vows) a Purodās'a consisting of eight pieces under the recital of the following Anuvākya and āyā: tvam agne vratabhrit s'uchir (As'v. Śr. Ś. 3, 11) ratni bibhrad vratapā (As'v. Śr. Ś. 3, 11).<sup>9</sup> Or he may sacrifice (melted butter) under the recital of, Agni vratabhrit Svāhā! in the Ahavaniya fire. This is the penance for it.

They ask, When an Agnihotri should do something contrary to his vow (religion) on the day previous to the sacrifice, what is the penance for it? He must offer a Purodās'a consisting of eight pieces to Agni vratapati (Agni the lord of vows) under the recital of the following Anuvākya and āyā: tvam agne vratapā asi (8, 11, 1); yad va agni pramināma (10, 2, 4). Or he may sacrifice melted butter under the recital of, to Agni vratapati Svāhā! in the Ahavaniya fire. This is the penance for it.

They ask, When an Agnihotri should neglect the celebration of the New Moon or Full Moon sacrifices,

He must offer to Agnī pathikrit (paver of ways) a Purodâś'a consisting of eight pieces under the recital of the following Anuvâkyâ and Yâjyâ: vettha hi vedho adhrani (6, 16, 3); â derânâm api. (10, 2, 3). Anuvâkyâ and Yâjyâ: tram no agne varunasya (4, 1, 4) sa tvañ no agne avamo (4, 1, 5). Or he may offer (melted butter) in the Ahavanîya fire under the recital of, to Agni Varuṇa Svāhā! This is the penance for it.

They ask, When an Agnihotri eats food prepared by a woman who is confined (sūtaka), what is the penance for it? He must offer to Agni tantumat Purodās'a consisting of eight pieces under the recital of the following Anuvâkyâ and Yâjyâ: tantu tanvan rajaso (10, 53, 6); akshānaho nahy tanot (10, 53, 7). • They ask, When an Agnihotri hears, when living any one, an enemy, say, that he (the Agnihotri) is dead, what is the penance for it? He must offer to Agni surabhimat a Purodās'a consisting of eight pieces under the recital of the following Anuvâkyâ and Yâjyâ: Agnir hotā nysīdad (5, 1, 6); sādha akar dera rītim (10, 53, 3). Or he may sacrifice (melted butter) in the Ahavanîya fire under the recital of, to Agnir surabhimat Svāhā! This is the penance for it.

They ask, When the wife or the cow of an Agnihotri give birth to twins, what is the penance for it? He must offer to Agni marutvat a Purodās'a consisting of thirteen pieces under the recital of the following Anuvâkyâ and Yâjyâ: maruto yasya hi kshaye (86, 1); arā ived (5, 58, 5). Or he may sacrifice (melted butter) in the Ahavanîya fire under the recital of, to Agni marutvat Svāhā! This is the penance for it.

They ask, Should an Agnihotri who has lost his wife, bring the fire oblation, or should he not? He should do so. If he does not do so, then he is called an Anaddhâ<sup>12</sup> man. Who is an Anaddhâ? He who offers oblations to neither the gods, nor to the ancestors, nor to men. Therefore the Agnihotri who has lost his wife, should nevertheless bring the burnt offering (agnihotram). There is a stanza concerning sacrificial customs, where is said, "He who has lost his wife may bring the Sâutrâmani<sup>13</sup> sacrifice; for he is not allowed to drink Soma! But he must discharge the duties towards his parents."<sup>14</sup> But whereas the sacred tradition (śruti) enjoins sacrifice,<sup>15</sup> let him bring the Soma sacrifice.

<sup>12</sup> By this term a man is to be understood who, from reasons which are not culpable, does not discharge his duties towards the gods, ancestors and men. All the MSS. read manushyâ instead of manushyâ.

<sup>13</sup> The Sâutrâmani (śruti) is a substitute for the Soma sacrifice. The spirituous liquor is taken instead of Soma, and milk. Both are filled in the Soma vessels. It is performed in various ways, as mentioned, and its performance briefly described in the A'sval. 8, 3, 9, and in the Kâtiya Sûtras (in the 19th Adhyâya). From five to four animals are immolated, one to the A'svins, one to Sarasvatî, one to Indra, and one to Brihaspati. The Pas'upurodâśa are Indra, Savitar and Varuna. The Puronuvâkyâ for the offering the spirituous liquor is, yavañ surâman as'vina (10, 11, 4). The vidhâ for repeating the Yajya mantra is as follows:

हेता यक्षदश्विना सरस्वतीमिन्द्रं सुत्रामाणं सोमानां पुराम्णां
पुत्रां यन्तु पिबन्तु मदन्तु सोमान्सुराम्णो हेतयेज

(The offering to be presented to the A'svins, Sarasvatî, and Indra are here called somâh surâmanasch, i. e. Soma drops which are spirituous liquor). The Yajya is putram va pitarâm (10, 11, 5). The sacrifice is brought up to the present day in the Ukhhan.

<sup>14</sup> In another Sakhâ there is said, that a Brâhman has incurred his debts, the Brahmachâryam or celibacy as a debt to the Rishis, sacrifice as a debt to the gods, and the necessity of begetting children as a debt to the Pitaras.—Sây.

<sup>15</sup> "Worship the gods by sacrificing, read the Vedas, and beget children." This is the sacred tradition (Śruti) here alluded to.—ay.

(How the Agnihotram of him who has no wife become performed).<sup>16</sup>

They ask, In what way does an Agnihotri, who has no wife bring his oblations with Speech (i. e. by repeating the mantras required with his voice)? In what way does he offer his (daily) burnt offering, when his wife dies, after he has already entered on the staff of an Agnihotri, his wife having (by her death) destroyed the qualification for the performance of the (daily) burnt offering?<sup>17</sup>

They say, That one has children, grand-children and relations in this world, and in that world. In this world, there is heaven (i. e. heaven is to be gained in this world by sacrificing). (The Agnihotri will <sup>16</sup> This paragraph offers considerable difficulties to the translator. Its style is not plain and perspicuous, and it appears that it is interpolation as well as the following (11th) paragraph. But whether it is an interpolation of latter times is very doubtful. The passage may (to judge from its unsmooth language) even be older than the bulk of the Aitareya Brâhmaṇam. Sây. who inverts their order, says, that they are found in some countries, whereas they are wanting in others. In his Commentary on the 10th paragraph Sây. does several times violence to grammar. He asserts as an instance that अङ्कः after पुत्रान् is to be taken in the sense of the third person singular of the potential, standing for ब्रूय.

The same sense of a potential he gives to the perfect tense, अकृत. Both these explanations are inadmissible. The purport of the paragraph is to show, in what way an Agnihotri may continue his sacrificial career, though it be interrupted by the death of his wife. For the rule is, that the sacrificer must always have his wife with him (their hands are tied together on such an occasion) when he is sacrificing.

<sup>17</sup> This is the translation of the term nashât-agnihotram, which I take as a kind of compound. Sây. explains it, nashâtam eva bhavati pûrvasiddhair aqñibh n patnidâhapakshe punaragnihôti abhêtûr agninâm abhârât. Nashât is to be taken in the sense of an active past participle, "having destroyed," ev appears to have the sense even as Sây. explains. That vâ can form part of a compound word abhidvanyavatsâ proves, (7, 2).

has no wife, says to his children, &c.) "I have ascended to heaven by means of what was no heaven (i. e. by the sacrifice performed in this world)." He who does not wish for a (second) wife (for having his sacrificial ceremonies continuously performed), keeps thus (by speaking to his children, &c. in the way indicated) his connection with the other world up. Thence they (his children) establish (new fires) for him who has lost his wife.

How does he who has no wife bring his oblations (with his mind)? (The answer is) Faith is his wife, and Truth the sacrificer. The marriage of Faith and Truth is a most happy one. For by Faith and Truth joined they conquer the celestial world.

(the different names of the Full and New Moon.)

They say, if an Agnihotri, who has not pledged himself by the usual vow, makes preparations for the performance of the Full and New Moon sacrifices, and the gods do not eat his food. If he, therefore, when making his preparations, thinks, might the gods eat my food,<sup>18</sup> (then they eat it). He ought to make the preparations on the first part of the New Moon day, this is the opinion of the Pañgyas: he shall make them on the latter part; this is the opinion of the Kāushitakis. The first part of the Full Moon day is called Anumati,<sup>19</sup> the latter Rākā; the first <sup>18</sup> All this refers to an Agnihotri who has lost his wife and is continuing his sacrifice.

<sup>19</sup> The lunar day on which either the Full Moon or New Moon takes place is divided into two parts, and is consequently broken. For the fourteenth tithi (or lunar day) is at an end, though it might not have been lasting for the usual time of thirty Muhūrtas, as soon as the face of the moon appears to the eye, either completely full, or (at the Moon) distinctly visible. The broken lunar day (the fourteenth) is called Anumati at the Full Moon time, and Sinivālī at the part of the New Moon day is called Siniváli, and its latter part Kuhú. The space which the moon requires for setting and rising again is called Tit (lunar day). Without paying any attention (to the opinion of the Paiñgyas) to make the preparation on the first part of the Full Moon day, he brings his sacrifice when he meets (sees) the Moon (rising) on the New Moon day; <sup>20</sup> on this (day) they buy the Soma. Therefore he must always make his preparations on the second part of either the Full or New Moon days (i. e. on the days on which the moon enters into either phase). All days which follow belong to Soma (the Soma sacrifice may be completed). He brings the Soma sacrifice as far as the Soma is a deity; for the divine Soma is the moon. Therefore he must make the preparations on the second part of that lunar day.

(On some other penances for mishaps occurring to the Agnihotri. Where the Agnihotri must walk between his fires. Whether the Dakshina Agni is to be fed with the other fires also. How an Agnihotri should behave when absent from his fires.)

They ask, If the sun rise or set before an Agnihotri takes fire out of (the Gárhapatya to bring to the Ahavanīya), or should it, when placed (in the Ahavanīya) be extinguished before he brings his burnt offering (Homa), what is the penance for it? He shall take it out after sunset, after having placed a piece of gold before it; for light is a splendour.

New Moon time; the remaining part of the day (till the moon rises) is then either Rákā or Kuhú. This part of the day forms then either of the proper Full Moon or New Moon day (the fifteenth).

body (s'ukram), and gold is the splendid light, and that body (the sun) is just this light. Seeing it shining he takes out the fire. At morning time (after sunrise) he may take out the fire when he has put silver below it; for this (silver) is of the same nature with the night (representing the splendour of the moon and the stars). He shall take out (of the Gârhapatya) the Ahavaniya before the shadows are cast together before it has grown completely dark). For the shadow of darkness is death. By means of this light (the silver) he overcomes death, which is the shadow of darkness. This is the penance. .

They ask, When a cart, or a carriage, or horses go over the Gârhapatya and Ahavaniya fires of an Agnihotri, what is the penance for it? He shall not mind it at all, thus they say, believing that these things (their types) are placed in his soul. But should he mind it, then he shall form a line of water drops from the Gârhapatya to the Ahavaniya under the recital of tantum tanvan rajaso (10, 53, 6). This is the penance.

They ask, Shall the Agnihotri when feeding the other fires with wood make the Dakshina Agni (varáharya pachana) also to blaze up brightly, or shall he not do so? Who feeds the fires, puts into his soul the vital breaths; of these fires the Dakshina Agni provides (the feeder) best with food. He gives him therefore an offering, saying, "to Agni the enjoyer of food, the master of food, Svâhâ!" He who thus grows becomes an enjoyer of food, and a master of food, and obtains children and food.

The Agnihotri must walk between the Gârhapatya and Ahavaniya when he is about to sacrifice; for the Agnis (fires) when perceiving him walk thus, know, "he is about to bring us a sacrifice." By this both these fires destroy all wickedness of him who is thus walking (between them). Whose wickedness is thus destroyed, goes up to the heavenly world. Thus it is declared in another Brâhmanam which they quote.

They ask, How can an Agnihotri who intends going abroad be near his sacred fires (established at his home)? Can he do it when absent, or is he to return to them every day? He shall approach them silently (in his mind without repeating the mantras). For by keeping silence they aspire after fortune. But some say (he should go to them) every day. For the Agnis of an Agnihotri lose all confidence in him by his absence, fearing lest they be removed or scattered. Therefore he must approach them, and should he not be able to return, he must repeat the words "May you be safe! may I be safe!" In this way the Agnihoti is safe.

THIRD CHAPTER.

(The story of Sunah'sēpa)

13.

(King Haris'chandra wishes for a son. Stanza praising the possession of a son.)

Haris'chandra, the son of Vedhas, of the Ikshvaku race, was a king who had no son. Though he had a hundred wives, they did not give birth to son. In his house there lived the Rishis Parvat and Nârada. Once the king addressed to Nârada (the following stanza):

"Since all beings, those endowed with reason (men) as well as those who are without it (beasts) wish for a son, what is the fruit to be obtained by having son? This tell me, O Nârada?"

Nârada thus addressed in one stanza, replied (the following) ten:

1. The father pays a debt in his son, and gains immortality, when he beholds the face of a son living who was born to him.

2. The pleasure which a father has in his son, exceeds the enjoyment of all other beings, be they on the earth, or in the fire, or in the water.

3. Fathers always overcame great difficulties through a son. (In him) the Self is born out of Self. The son is like a well-provisioned boat, which carries him over.

4. "What is the use of living unwashed,<sup>1</sup> wearing the goatskin,<sup>2</sup> and beard?<sup>3</sup> What is the use of performing austerities?<sup>4</sup> You should wish for a son, O Brahmins!" Thus people talk of them<sup>5</sup> (who forego the married life on account of religious devotion).

5. Food preserves life, clothes protect from cold, gold (golden ornaments) gives beauty, marriages produce wealth in cattle;<sup>6</sup> the wife is the friend, the daughter object of compassion, but the son shines as his light in the highest heaven.

6. The husband enters the wife (in the shape of seed), and when the seed is changed to an embryo, he makes her mother, from whom after having become regenerated, in her, he is born in the tenth month.

7. His wife is only then a real wife (jáyâ from jan to be born) when he is born in her again. The

seed which is placed in her she developes to a being and sets it forth.

8. The Gods and the Rishis endowed her with great beauty. The gods then told to men, this being is destined to produce you again.

9. He who has no child, has no place (no firm footing). This even know the beasts. Thence the son cohabits (among beasts even) with his mother and sister.

10. This is the broad well-trodden path on which those who have sons walk free from sorrows. Beasts and birds know it; thence they cohabit (even) with their own mothers.

Thus he told.

14.

(A son is born to Haris'chandra. Varuna repeatedly requests the King to sacrifice his son to him; but the sacrifice is under different pretences always put off by the King.)

Nârada then told him, "Go and beg of Varuna the king, that he might favour you with the birth of a son (promising him at the same time) to sacrifice to him this son when born." He went to Varuna the king, praying, "Let a son be born to me; I will sacrifice him to thee." Then a son, Rohita by name, was born to him. Varuna said to him, "When a son is born to thee, sacrifice him to me." Haris'chandra said, "An animal is fit for being sacrificed when it is more than ten days old. Let him reach this age, then I will sacrifice him to thee." After Rohita had passed the age of ten days, Varuna said to him, "He is now past ten days; sacrifice him to me." Haris'chandra answered, "An animal is fit for being sacrificed when its teeth come. Let his teeth come, then I will sacrifice him to thee." After his teeth had come,<sup>7</sup> Varuṇa said to Haris'chandra, "His teeth have now come, sacrifice him to me." He answered, "An animal is fit for being sacrificed when its teeth fall out. Let his teeth fall out, then I will sacrifice him to thee." His teeth fell out. He then said, "His teeth are falling out, sacrifice him to me." He said, "An animal is fit for being sacrificed when its teeth have come again. Let his teeth come again, then I will sacrifice him to thee." His teeth came again. Varuṇa said, "His teeth have now come again, sacrifice him to me." He answered "A man of the warrior caste is fit for being sacrificed only after having received his full armour. Let him receive his full armour, then I will sacrifice him to thee." He then was invested with the armour. Varuṇa then said, "He has now received the armour, sacrifice him to me." After having thus spoken, he called his son, and told him, "Well, my dear, to him who gave thee unto me, I will sacrifice thee now." But the son said, "No, no," took his bow and absconded to the wilderness, where he was roaming about for a year.

15.

Continuation of this story. Rohita, Haris'chandra's son, purchases after six years of fruitless wanderings in the forest, a Brahman boy, Śunaś'epa by name, from his parents, to be sacrificed in his stead by Haris'chandra to Varuṇa. Stanzas.)

Varuṇa now seized Haris'chandra, and his belly swelled (i.e. he was attacked by dropsy). When Rohita heard of it, he left the forest, and went to a village where Indra in human disguise met him, and said to him, "There is no happiness for him who does not travel, Rohita ! thus we have heard. in the society of men, the best man (often) becomes a sinner (by seduction, which is best avoided by wandering in places void of human dwellings); for Indra surely is the friend of the traveller. Therefore, wander!"

Rohita thinking, a Brâhman told me to wander wandered for a second year in the forest. When he was entering a village after having left the forest, Indra met him in human disguise, and said to him, "The feet of the wanderer are like the flower, his soul is growing and reaping the fruit; and all his sins are destroyed by his fatigues in wandering. Therefore wander!"

Rohita thinking, a Brâhman told me to wander wandered then a third year in the forest. When he was entering a village after having left the forest, Indra met him in human disguise and said to him "The fortune of him who is sitting, sits; it rises when he rises; it sleeps when he sleeps; it moves when he moves. Therefore, wander!"

Rohita thinking, a Brâhman told me to wander wandered then a fourth year in the forest. When he was entering a village after having left the forest, Indra said to him, "The Kali is lying on the ground, the Dvâpara is hovering there; the Trêtâ is getting up, but the Kṛta happens to walk (hither and thither).<sup>8</sup> Therefore, wander!"

Rohita thinking, a Brâhman told me to wander wandered for a fifth year in the forest. When he was <sup>8</sup> Sây. does not give any explanation of this important passage where the names of the Yugas are mentioned for the first time. The four names are, as is well known from other sources (see the Sanskrit Dictionary by Boehtlingk and Roth. s. v. kālī, dvâpara, &c.), names of dice, used at gambling. The meaning of this Gâthâ is, There every success to be hoped; for the unluckiest die, the Kali, is lying two others are slowly moving and half fallen, but the luckiest, the Kṛta, is in full motion. The position of dice given here is indicative of a fair chance of winning the game.

entering a village after having left the forest, Indra said to him, "The wanderer finds honey and the sweet Udumbara fruit; behold the beauty of the sun, who is not wearied by his wanderings. Therefore, wanderer, wander!"

Rohita then wandered for a sixth year in the forest. He met (this time) the Rishi Ajigarta, the son of Sagarasa, who was starving, in the forest. He had three sons, S'unahpuchha, S'unahs'epa, and S'unolan-gila. He told him, "Rishi! I give thee a hundred cows: for I will ransom myself (from being sacrificed) with one of these (thy sons)." Ajigarta then accepted the oldest, saying "Do not take him," and the mother excepted the youngest, saying "Do not take him." Thus they agreed upon the middle one, S'unahs'epa. He then gave for him a hundred cows, left the forest, entered the village, and brought him before his father, saying, "O my dear (father)! by this way I will ransom myself (from being sacrificed)." He then approached Varuna the king (and said), "I will sacrifice him to thee!" He said, "Well, let it be done; for a Brâhman is worth more than a Kshatriya!" Varuna then explained to the king the rites of the Râjasûya sacrifice, at which on the day appointed for the inauguration (abhishechanîya), he replaced the (sacrificial animal) by a man.

• 16.

(The sacrifice with the intended human victim comes off. Four great Rishis were officiating as priests. S'unahs'epa prays to the gods to be released from the fearful death. The Rik verses which he used mentioned, and the different deities to whom he applied).

At this sacrifice Vis'vâmitra was his Hotar, Jama-dagni his Adhvaryu, Vasishtha his Brâhmâ, and Ayasya his Udgâtar. After the preliminary ceremonies had been performed, they could not find a person willing to bind him to the sacrificial post. Ajigarta, the son of Suyavasa, then said, "Give me another hundred (cows) and I will bind him." They gave him another hundred, whereupon he bound him. After he had been bound, the Apri verses recited, and the fire carried round him,<sup>9</sup> they could not find a slaughterer. Ajigarta then said, "Give me another hundred and I will kill him." They gave him another hundred. He then whetted his knife and went to kill his son. S'unaḥś'epa then got aware that they were going to butcher him just as if he were no man (but a beast). "Well" said he, "I will seek shelter with the gods." He applied to Prajapati, who is the first of the gods, with the verse kasya nānam katamasya (1, 24, 1). Prajapati answered him, "Agni is the nearest of the gods, go to him." He then applied to Agni, with the verse agner vayan prathamasya amritānām (1, 24, 2). Agni answered him, "Savitar rules over the creatures go to him." He then applied to Savitar with the three verses (1, 24, 3-5) beginning by, abhi tvā dev Savitar. Savitar answered him, "Thou art bound to Varuṇa the King, go to him." He applied to Varuṇa with the following thirty-one verses (124 6-25, 21). Varuṇa then answered him, "Agni is the mouth of the gods, and the most compassionate of them. Praise him now! then we shall release you." He then praised Agni with twenty-two verse (1, 26, 1-27, 12). Agni then answered, "Praise the Vis've Devas, then we shall release you." He then praised the Vis've Devas with the verse (1, 27, 13) namo mahadbhyaḥ namo arbhakebhyo. The Vis've Devas answered, "Indra is the strongest, the most powerful, the most enduring, the most true of the gods, who knows best how to bring to an end anything. Praise him, then we shall release you." He then praised Indra with the hymn (1, 29), yach chid dhi sātya somapá, and with fifteen verses of the following one (1, 30, 1-15). Indra, who had become pleased with his praise, presented him with a golden carriage. This present he accepted with the verse, sas'vad indra (1, 30, 16). Indra then told him, "Praise the As'vins, then we shall release you." He then praised the As'vins with the three verses which follow the abovementioned (1, 30, 17-19). The As'vins then answered, "Praise Ushâs (Dawn), then we shall release you." He then praised Ushâs with the three verses which follow the As'vin verses (1, 30, 20-22). As he repeated one verse after the other, the fetters (of Varuṇa) were falling off, and the belly of Haris'chandra became smaller. And after he had done repeating the last verse, (all) the fetters were taken off, and Haris'chandra restored to health again.

17.

Sunah's'epa is released. He invents the anjah sava preparation of the Soma. Vis'vâmitra adopts him as his son. Stanzas.)

The priests now said to Sunah's'epa, "Thou art now only ours (thou art now a priest like us); take part in the performance of the particular ceremonies of this day (the abishechanîya)." He then saw (invented) the method of direct preparation of the Soma juice (anjah sava without intermediate fermentation) after it is squeezed, and carried it out under the recital of the four verses, yach chid dhi tram grihe grihe (1, 28, 8). Then by the verse uchchhishtam chamvor (1, 8, 9), he brought it into the Dronakalasa.<sup>10</sup> Ther after having been touched by Haris'chandra, he sacrificed the Soma under the recital of the four first verses (of the hymn yatra grāvā prithubudhna 1, 28, 1-4), which were accompanied by the formula Svāhā. Then he brought the implements required for making the concluding ceremonies (avabhritha) of this sacrifice to the spot and performed them under the recital of the two verses, tvāṁ no agne Varunasya (4, 1, 4-5). Then, after this ceremony was over, S'unah's'epa summoned Haris'chandra to the Abavaniya fire,<sup>11</sup> and recited the verse S'unah' chichchhepam nīditam (5, 2, 7).

S'unah's'epa then approached the side of Vis'vāmītra (and sat by him). Ajigarta, the son of Suvavasa, then said, "O Rishi! return me my son." He answered, "No, for the gods have presented (devā arāsata) him to me." Since that time he was Decorāta, Vis'vāmītra's son. From him come the Kapileyas and Babhravas. Ajigarta further said, "Come, then, we (thy mother and I myself) will call thee," and added, "Thou art known as the seer from Ajigarta's family, as a descendant of the Aṅgirasah. Therefore, O Rishi, do not leave your ancestral home; return to me." S'unah's'epa answered, "What is not found even in the hands of a Shūdra, one has seen in thy hand, the knife (to kill thy son); three hundred cows thou hast preferred to me, O Aṅgiras!" Ajigarta then answered, "O my dear son! I repent of the bad deed I have committed; I blot out this stain! one hundred of the cows shall be thine!"

S'unah's'epa answered, "Who once might commit such a sin, may commit the same another time; thou art still not free from the brutality of a Shūdra, for thou hast committed a crime for which no reconciliation tion exists." "Yes, irreconcilable (is this act)" interrupted Vis'vāmītra.

Vis'vāmītra then said, "Fearful was Suyāsa's son (to look at) when he was standing ready to murder, holding the knife in his hand; do not become his son again: but enter my family as my son." S'unahś'epa then said, "O prince, let us know, tell (us) how I, as an Āṅgīrasah, can enter thy family as thy (adopted) son?" Vis'vāmītra answered, "Thou shalt be the first-born of my sons, and thy children the best. Thou shalt now enter on the possession of my divine heritage. I solemnly instal thee to it." S'unahś'epa then said, "When thy sons should agree to thy wish that I should enter thy family, O thou best of the Bharatas! then tell them for the sake of my own happiness to receive me friendly." Vis'vāmītra then addressed his sons as follows: "Hear ye now, Madhuchhandah, Rishabha, Reṇu, Ashūka, and all brothers, do not think<sup>12</sup> yourselves (entitled) to the right of primogeniture, which is his (S'unahś'epa's)."

13.

On Vis'vāmītra's descendants. How the reciters of the S'unahś'epa story are to be rewarded by the King. Stanzas. On the pratigara for the richas and stanzas at this occasion.)

This Rishi Vis'vāmītra had a hundred sons, fifty of them were older than Madhuchhandās, and fifty were younger than he. The older ones were not pleased with (the installation of S'unahś'epa to the primogeniture). Vis'vāmītra then pronounced against <sup>12</sup> I have parsed the word sthana as stha na. If sthana is taken for 3rd person plural, as Max Muller (following Sayana) does in his edition of the story of S'unahś'epa (History of Ancient Sanscrit Literature, page 418), the passage is to be translated as follows: "and all you brothers that you are, think him to be entitled to the primogeniture."

them the curse, "you shall have the lowest castes for your descendants." Therefore are many of the most degraded classes of men, the rabble for the most part, such as the Andhras, Pundras, Sabaras, Paṇḍas, and Mūtibas, descendants of Vis'vāmītra. But Madhuchhandās with the fifty younger sons, said, "What our father approves of, by that we abide; we all accord to thee (S'unahś'ēpa) the first rank, and we will come after thee!" Vis'vāmītra, delighted (at this answer) then praised these sons with the following verses:

"Ye my sons will have abundance of cattle and children, for you have made me rich in children by consenting to my wish."

"Ye sons of Gāthi, blessed with children, you all will be successful when headed by Devarāta; he will (always) lead you on the path of truth."

"This Devarāta, is your master (man); follow him, ye Kuśikas! He will exercise the paternal rights over you as his heritage from me, and take possession of the sacred knowledge that we have."

"All the true sons of Vis'vāmītra, the grandson of Gāthi, who forthwith stood with Devarāta, were blessed with wealth for their own welfare and renown."

"Devarāta is called the Rishi who entered on two heritages, the royal dignity of Jahnu's house, and the divine knowledge of Gāthi's stem."<sup>13</sup>

This is the story of S'unahś'ēpa contained in the stanzas which are beyond the number of the hundred Rik verses <sup>14</sup> (recited along with them). The Hota

<sup>14</sup> Śāy. says that ninety-seven out of them had been seen by S'unahś'ēpa, and three by another Rishi. The term pararik-sat-gātham ākhyānam means, the "story which contains besides one hundred Rik verses Gāthās (stanzas) also." The number of the latter is thirty-one.

when sitting on a gold embroidered carpet, recites them to the king, after he has been sprinkled with the sacred water. The Adhvaryu who repeats the responses sits likewise on a gold embroidered carpet. For gold is glory. This procures glory for the king for whom these Gâthâs are repeated). Om is the Adhvaryu's response to a Rich (repeated by the Hotar), and exam tathâ (thus in this way it is) that to a Gâthâ (recited by the Hotar). For Om is divine (therefore applied to richas, which are a divine revelation), and tathâ human. By means of the divine (om) and human (tathâ) responses, the Adhvaryu makes the king free from sin and fault. Therefore any king who might be a conqueror (and consequently by shedding blood a sinner) although he might not bring a sacrifice, should have told the story of S'unah's'epa. (If he do so) then not the slightest trace of sin (and its consequences) will remain in him. He must give a thousand cows to the teller of this story, and a hundred to him who makes the responses (required); and to each of them the (gold embroidered) carpet on which he was sitting; to the Hotar, besides, a silver decked carriage drawn by mules. Those who wish for children, should also have told this story; then they certainly will be blessed with children.

FOURTH CHAPTER.

(The preliminary rites of the Râjasûya sacrifice.)

19.

(The relationship between the Brahma and Kshattrâ.)

After Prajâpati had created the sacrifice, the brahman (divine knowledge) and the Kshattrâ (sovereignty) were produced. After both two kinds of creatures sprang up, such ones as eat the sacrificial food, and such ones as do not eat it. All eaters of the sacrificial food followed the Brahmā, the non-eaters followed the Kshattrā. Therefore the Brahmans only are eaters of the sacrificial food; whilst the Kshattriyas, Vais'yas, and Shúdras do not eat it.

The sacrifice went away from both of them. The Brahma and Kshattrā followed it. The Brahma followed with all its implements, and the Kshattrā followed (also) with its implements. The implements of the Brahma are those required for performing a sacrifice. The implements of the Kshattrā are a horse, carriage, an armour, and a bow with arrow. The Kshattrā not reaching the sacrifice, returned; for frightened by the weapons of the Kshattrā the sacrifice ran aside. The Brahma then followed the sacrifice, and reached it. Hemming thus the sacrifice in its further course, the Brahma stood still; the sacrifice reached and hemmed in its course, stood still also, and recognising in the hand of the Brahma its own implements, returned to the Brahma. The sacrifice having thus remained only in the Brahma, it is therefore only placed among the Brahmans (i. e. they alone are allowed to perform it.)

The Kshattrā then ran after this Brahma, and said to it, "Allow me to take possession of this sacrifice (which is placed in thee)." The Brahma said, "Well, let it be so; lay down thy own weapons, assume by means of the implements of the Brahma (the sacrificial implements) which constitute the Brahma, the form of the Brahma, and return to it!" The Kshattrā obeyed, laid down its own weapons, assumed by means of the implements of the Brahma which constitute the Brahma, its form, and returned to it. Therefore even a Kshatriya, when he lays down his weapons and assumes the form of the Brahma by means of the sacrificial implements, returns to the sacrifice (he is allowed a share in it).

20.

On the place of worshipping the gods asked for by the King at the Râjasûya).

Then the king is to be requested to worship the gods. They ask, If a Brahman, Kshattriya, or Vais'ya who is to be initiated into the sacrificial rites, requests the king to grant a place for the worship of the gods, whom must the king himself request to do so? He must request the divine Kshattra. Thus they say. This divine Kshattra is Aditya (the sun); for he is the ruler of all these beings. On the day on which the king is to be consecrated, in the forenoon, he must post himself towards the rising sun, and say, "This is among the lights the best light! (Rigveda 10, 1, 70, 3.) O god Savitar, grant me a place for the worship of gods."<sup>1</sup> By these words he asks for a place of worship. When Aditya requested in this way, goes northwards, saying, "Yes, it may be so, I grant it," then nobody will do any harm to such a king, who is permitted (by Savitar to do so).

The fortune of a king who is consecrated in such a way by having secured the place of divine worship previously by the recital of the verse (mentioned above) and by addressing that request (to Savitar), will increase from day to day; and sovereign power over his subjects will remain with him.

<sup>1</sup> The verse is evidently a Yajus, (and so it is termed by Sâyaṇa) but I do not find it in the Yajurveda.

(The Ishtâpârta aparijyâni offerings.)

Then the burnt offering called the Ishtâpârta aparijyâni<sup>2</sup> is to be performed by the king who brings the sacrifice. The king should perform this ceremony before he receives the sacrificial inauguration (dikshâ). (When performing it) he throws four spoonfulls of melted butter in the Ahavaniya fire, saying, "to the preservation of the Ishtâpârta! May Indra the mighty give us again (recompensate us for what we have sacrificed). May the Brahma give us again full compensation for what has been sacrificed."

Then after having recited the Samishṭa Yajus mantras<sup>3</sup> which are required when binding the sacrificial animal to the pillar, he repeats the words, "May Agni Jâtavedâs, recompensate us! May the Kshattria give us full compensation for what we have sacrificed, Svâhâ." These two Ahutis are the Ishtâpârta aparijyâni for a princely person when bringing a sacrifice. Therefore both are to be offered.

<sup>2</sup> Lit. the recompensation (aparijyâni) of what has been sacrificed (ishta) and filled (ishtâpârta). Ishta means only "what is sacrificed," and âpârta "filled up to." For all sacrifices go up to heaven, and are stored up there to be taken possession of by the sacrificer on his arrival in heaven (See Rîgveda, 10, 14, 1 sañgachhasa—ishtâpârta), join thy sacrifices which were stored up). The opinions of the ancient Acharyas or Brahmanical Doctors, about the proper meaning of this word, were already divided, as Sâyana says. Some understood by it the duties of the castes and religious Brahmanical orders, as far as the digging of wells and making of ponds are concerned (which was a kind of religious obligation). Others meant by ishta what refers to Smârta (domestic) offerings, and pârta they interpreted as referring to the solemn sacrifices (śrâuta).

Sujāta, the son of Aśvalla, said, that it is optional for the king to perform (besides the ceremony mentioned in 21) the two invocation offerings called Ajitapunarvaya. He may bring them if he like to do so. He who following the advice of Sujāta, brings these two invocation offerings, shall say, "I turn towards the Brahma, may it protect me from the Kshattra, Svâhâ to the Brahma!" "This, this is certainly the case"; thus say the sacrificial priests (when this mantra is spoken by the king.) The meaning of this formula is, He who turns towards the sacrifice, turns towards the Brahma; for the sacrifice is the Brahma; he who undergoes the inauguration ceremony, is born again from the sacrifice. He who has turned towards the Brahma, the Kshattra does not forsake. He says, "May the Brahma protect me from the Kshattra," that is, the Brahma should protect him from the Kshattra (which is persecuting him). By the words, Svâhâ to the Brahma! he pleases the Brahma; and if pleased, it protects him from the Kshattra. Then after the recital of the Samishṭa Yajus mantras, required for binding the sacrificial animal to the altar, he repeats, "I turn towards the Kshattra, may it protect me from the Brahma, Svâhâ to the Kshattra." This, this is certainly the case; thus they say. He who turns towards the royal power (to assume it again) turns towards the Kshattra. For the Kshattra is the royal power. When he has reached the Kshattra, the Brahma does not leave him. If he <sup>4</sup> In some MSS. and in Sayana's commentary this name is written: ajitapunarvaya. It means "the recovering of what is not to be lost." This refers to the Kshattra which the Kshattriya first lost by turning towards the Brahma, but regained by his subsequently embracing the Kshattra again, which he cannot throw off if he otherwise wish to retain his sovereignty.

repeats the words, "May the Kshattra protect me from the Brahma," that is, the Kshattra should protect him from the Brahma, "Svâhá to the Kshattra!" he pleases this Kshattra. Pleased in this way, the Kshattra protects him from the Brahma. Both these offerings (ajñāpunarvanyam) are also calculated to preserve the sacrificing king from the loss of the Ishtâpūrta. Thence these two are (also) to be sacrificed.

23.

(The King is, before sacrificing, made a Brahman, but he must lose his royal qualifications.)

As regards the deity, the royal prince (Kshattriya) belongs to Indra; regarding the metre he belongs to the Trishtubh; regarding the Stoma, he belongs to that one which is fifteen-fold. As to his sovereignty, he is Soma (king of the gods); as to his relationship, he belongs to the royal order. And if inaugurated into the sacrificial rites, he enters even the Brahmanship at the time when he covers himself with the black goatskin, and enters on the observances enjoined to an inaugurated one, and Brahmans surround him.

When he is initiated in such a manner, then Indra takes away from him sharpness of senses, Trishtubh strength, the fifteen-fold Stoma the life, Soma takes away the royal power, the Pitaras (manes) glory and fame. (For they say) "he has estranged himself from us; for he is the Brahma, he has turned to the Brahma." The royal prince then after having brought an invocation offering before the inauguration, shall stand near the Ahavaniya fire, and say, "I do not leave Indra as my deity, nor the Trishtubh as (my) metre, nor the fifteen-fold Stoma, nor the king Soma, nor the kinship of the Pitaras. May therefore Indra not take from me the skill, nor the Trishtubh the strength, nor the fifteen-fold Stoma the life, nor Soma the royal power, nor the Pitaras glory and known. I approach here Agni as (my) deity with sharpness of senses, strength, life (vigour), renown and kinship. I go to the Gâyatri metre, to the three-fold Stoma, to Sonu the king, to the Brahma, become a Brâhmaṇa." When he standing before the Abavanîya fire brings this invocation offering, then although he be Kshattriya (by birth, no Brahman), Indra does not take from him sharpness of senses, nor Trishṭubh strength, &c.

24.

The royal prince belongs, as regards the deity, to Agni; his metre is the Gâyatri, his Stoma the Trivṛt (three-fold), his kinsman the Brahmaṇa. But when performing the concluding ceremony of the sacrifice, the royal prince (who was during the sacrifice a Brâhmaṇa) assumes (by means of another offering) his royal dignity (which was lost) again. Then Agni takes away from him the (Brahmanical) lustre, Gâyatri the strength, the Trivṛt Stoma the life, the Brâhmaṇas the Brahma, and glory and renown; for they say, this man has forsaken us by assuming the Kshattriya again, to which he has returned.

Then after having performed the Samishta offerings which are required for the ceremony of binding the sacrificial animal to the pillar, he presents himself to the Abavanîya fire (again), saying, "I do not leave Agni as (my) deity, nor the Gâyatri as my metre, nor the Trivṛt Stoma, nor the kindred of the Brahma. May Agni not take from me the lustre, nor the Gâyatri the strength, nor the Trivṛt Stoma the life, nor the Brâhmaṇas glory and renown. With lustre, strength, life, the Brahma, glory, and renown, I turn to Indra as my deity, to the Trishṭubh metre, to the fifteen-fold Stoma, to Soma the king, I enter the Kshattrā, I become a Kshattriā! O ye Pitaras of divine lustre! O ye Pitaras of divine lustre! I sacrifice in my own natural character (as a Kshattriā, not as a Brāhmaṇa); what has been sacrificed by me, is my own, what has been completed as to wells, tanks, &c. is my own, what austerities have been undergone are my own, what burnt offerings have been brought are my own. That this is mine, this Agni will see, this Vayu will hear, that Aditya will reveal it. I am only what I am (i. e. a Kshattriā, no Brāhmaṇa).” When he speaks thus and gives an invocation offering to the Ahavanīya fire, Agni does not take away from him the lustre, nor the Gâyatrī strength, nor the Trivrit Stoma the life, nor the Brahman the Brahma, glory and renown, though he concludes the sacred rites as a Kshattriā.

25.

(The Prararas of a Kshattriā's house-priest are invoked at the time of his sacrifice.)

Thence (if the sacrificer be a Kshattriā) they (the Brahma speakers) ask as to how the inauguration (dīkshā), which is in the case of a Brahman being initiated, announced by the formula, “the Brāhmaṇa is initiated,”<sup>6</sup> should be promulgated in the case of the sacrificer being a Kshattriā? The answer is, The formula, “the Brāhmaṇa is initiated,” is to be kept when a Kshattriā is being initiated; the ancestral fire of the Kshattriā's house-priest is to be mentioned.<sup>7</sup> This, this is certainly so.

<sup>6</sup> This is according to Sây. thrice low and thrice aloud to be repeated. By repeating the formula low, the inauguration is made known to the gods alone, but by repeating it aloud, it is announced to gods and men alike.

Having laid aside his own implements (weapons), and taken up those of the Brahma, and having thus become Brahma, by means of the Brahma form, he returned to the sacrifice. Therefore they should proclaim him as a Dikshita, with the name of his house-priest's ancestral fires, and invoke them also in the Pravara<sup>8</sup> prayer.

<sup>8</sup> By pravara which literally means "choice, particular address" (see G, 14), we have to understand the invocation of the sacrificial fires lighted by the principal Rishi ancestors of the sacrificer. This invocation may comprise only one, or two, or three, or five ancestral fires, the name of which is ārshya; the pravara becomes accordingly ekārshya, dyvārshya, tryārshya, and pañchārshya, i.e. having one or two, &c. Rishis. This invocation takes place at the very commencement of the sacrifice, after the fire has been kindled under the recital of the Samidheni verses, and at the time of the Subrahmanyaṁ proclamation (see G, 3) after the sacrificer has become in consequence of the obligatory rites, such as Dikshā, Pravargya, &c. a Dikshita. Aśval. gives in his Śrauta Sūtras (1, 3), the following rules regarding this rite:

यज्ञमानस्यावैयान्प्रवृणीते यावन्तः स्युः परं परं प्रथमं । पौरोहित्या-
न्राजविशं राजर्षीन्वा राज्ञां सर्वेषां मानवेति सशये. i.e. the Hotar particularly mentions the fires of the Rishi ancestors of the sacrificer, as many as he may have (one, or two, or three, or five). He mentions one after the other, but the first (in the general enumeration) is to be made the last (at the time of sacrificing). If the sacrificers happen to be Kshattriyas, Vaisya's, he mentions the fires of the Rishi ancestors of their Purohitas (house-priests), or the princely Rishis (gaurakṣa, who might have been their ancestors). If there should be any doubt, the word mānava, i.e. descended from or made by Manu, may be used in the case of all kṛṣas.

This explanation of the terms pravara and ārshya have been already given by Max Muller (History of Ancient Sanscrit Literature, page 285) according to the authority of Aśvalāyana, and Bāudhāyana. It has been doubted, of late, by Dr. Hall (in his paper on three Sanscrit Inscriptions in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal of 1862, page 115), but without any sufficient reason. He says "*pravara*s appear to be names of the families of certain persons from whom the founders of Gotras were descended, and of the families of the founders themselves." But if this were the case, it would be surprising, that the founders of certain Gotras should claim to descent not only from one but from several Rishi ancestors. All the Gotras have eight great ancestors only, viz. Viśvāmitra, Jamadagnī, Bharadvāja, Gautama, Atri, Vasishtha, Kaśyapa, and Agastya. These occupy with the Brahmanas about the same position as the twelve sons of Jacob with (The Kshattriya is not allowed to eat sacrificial food.

The Brahma priest eats his portion for him.)

As regards the portion of sacrificial food which is to be eaten by the sacrificer, they ask, whether the Kshattriya should eat or whether he should not eat it? They say, if he eat, then he commits a great sin, as having eaten sacrificial food although he is an ahutâ (one not permitted to eat). If he do not eat, then he cuts himself off from the sacrifice (with which he was connected). For the portion to be eaten by the sacrificer, is the sacrifice. This is to be made over to the Brahma priest. For the Brahma priest of the Kshattriya is in the place of (hi-) Purohita. The Purohita is the one-half of the Kshattriya; only the Jews. Only he whose descent from one of these great Rishis was beyond doubt, could become the founder of a Gotra. In this genealogy there is no proper place for the pravaras according to Dr. Halévy's opinion; for a family calls itself generally only by the name of its founder. From a genealogical point of view, therefore, only the names of the patriarch (one of the great Rishis) and those of the founders of the Gotras were important. The institution of the Pravara is purely religious, and sacrificial. The pravaras or ârsheyas which are used as synonymous terms, are those sacrificial fires which several Gotras had in common; it was left to their own choice, to which they wished to repair. This had a practical meaning, as long as fire worship was the prevailing religion of the Aryas, which was the case before the commencement of the properly so-called Vedic period. In the course of time it became a mere form, the original meaning of which was very early lost. That the ârsheyas refer to the sacrificial fire, may be clearly seen from the context, in which they occur. Their names are mentioned in the vocative, as soon as the fire is kindled. After they have been invoked the Hotar begins at once the invocation of Agni, the fire, by various names, such as devaditho, manuvaddho, &c. kindled by gods, kindled by Manu, &c. (S.V. 1, 3). That this rite of invoking the ârsheyas must be very ancient, proves the occurrence of a similar or even the same rite with the Persians. They invoke up to this day, in their confession of faith, those ancestors and beings who were of the same varana, i.e. choice, religion, as they are. The term for "I will profess (a religion)" is fravarânâ, which is exactly of the same origin as pravara. (See Yasna 12 in my Essays, page 164).

through the intervention of another (the Brahma priest), the portion appears to be eaten by him, though he does not eat it with his own mouth. For the sacrifice is there where the Brahma (priest) is. The entire sacrifice is placed in the Brahma, and the sacrificer is in the sacrifice. * They throw the sacrifice (in the shape of the portion which is to be eaten by the sacrificer) into the sacrifice (which has the form of the Brahma) just as they throw water into water, fire into fire, without making it overflow, nor causing any injury to the sacrificer. Therefore is this portion to be eaten by the sacrificer (if he be a Kshattriya) to be given up to the Brahmâ.

Some sacrificial priests, however, sacrifice this portion to the fire, saying, "I place thee in Prajâpati's world, which is called vibhân (shining everywhere), be joined to the sacrificer, Svâhâ!" But thus the sacrificial priest ought not to proceed. For the portion to be eaten by the sacrificer is the sacrificer himself. What priest, therefore, asserts this, burns the sacrificer in the fire. (If any one should observe a priest doing so) he ought to tell him, "Thou hast singed the sacrificer in the fire. Agni will burn his breaths, and he will consequently die." Thus it always happens. Therefore he should not think of doing so.

FIFTH CHAPTER.

(On the sacrificial drink which the King has to taste instead of Soma according to the instruction given by Râma Mârgaveya to the King Visvantara.)

27.

(Story of the Syâparṇas. Râma defends their rights.)

Visvantara, the son of Sushadman, deprived the Syâparṇas of their right of serving as his sacrificial priests, and interdicted any one of this family to take part in his sacrifice. Having learnt (that) they went to the place of his sacrifice and seated themselves within the precincts of the Veda<sup>1</sup> On observing them Vis'vantara said (to his attendants), "There sit those S'yâparnas, the scoundrels, who endeavour to sully another's fame. Turn them out; let them not sit in the Veda." The attendants obeyed and turned the S'yâparnas out. They then cried aloud, "When Janamejaya, the son of Parikshit, was performing a sacrifice without the Kas'vas (who were his hereditary priests), then the Asitamrigas from among the Kas'yapas, turned the Bhûlarîras (who were officiating instead of the Kas'yapas) out, not allowing them to administer the Soma rites: They succeeded because they had brave men with them. Well, what hero is now among us,<sup>2</sup> who might by force take away this Soma beverage (that we might administer it ourselves)?" "This your man am I," said Râma Mârgareyd.<sup>3</sup> This Râma belonged to the S'yâparnas, and had completed the sacred study. When the S'yâparnas rose to leave, then he said to the king, "Will (thy servants), O king, turn out of the Veda even a man (like me) who knows the sacred science? (The king answered), "O thou member of the vile Brahman brood,<sup>4</sup> whoever thou art, how hast thou any knowledge (of such matters)?"

<sup>4</sup> Sây. explains, brahmabandhu by brâhma; a adhama, i.e. lowest Brahman. No doubt there is something contemptible in this expression.

(Why Indra was excluded from his share in the Soma.
The Kshattriya race became also excluded.)

(Rāma said) "I know it from the fact, that Indra had been excluded by the gods (from having any share in the sacrifices): For he had scorned<sup>5</sup> Viśvarūpa, the son of Tvashtar, cast down Vṛitra (and killed him), thrown pious men (yatis) before the jackals (or wolves) and killed the Arurmaghas,<sup>6</sup> and rebuked

<sup>5</sup> In the original, abhyamaṇṣta. This cannot mean (according to etymology, "he killed" as Sāy. supposes, misguided by the story told in the Taittir. Saṁh. 2, 1, where Indra is said to have cut the three heads of Viśvarūpa, which were somapānam (drinking of Soma), urīpānam (drinking of spirituous liquor), and amūdanam (eating of food). The reason alleged for Indra's killing him, is that he, as a relation of the Asuras, informed them about the secret portions of the sacrificial food, Soma, &c., whilst he told the Devas, whose associate he was, only the real and visible ones. Indra holding that he who knows the secret portions of Soma, &c. will come to know the real ones also, become afraid lest the Asuras might, strengthened by Soma, overthrow his rule, and killed the perpetrator of such a treason by cutting off his three heads, each of which was transformed into a particular kind of bird. Vārūpa being a Brahman, Indra thus became guilty of the horrible crime of Brahman murder (brahmahatya). All beings called him "murderer of a Brahman," so that he could not find rest anywhere. He requested the Earth to take off the third part of his guilt, who under certain conditions complied with his request. To be relieved from the two remaining thirds of his burden he applied to the trees, and the women, who readily took under certain conditions a part of his guilt upon themselves. Tvashtar, the father of Vārūpa, excluded Indra from any share in the Soma sacrifice; but he took his share with force. The remaining portion of Indra's share was thrown into the sacrificial fire: Tvashtar with the words, "grow andhāra" into an enemy of Indra." This became the terrible foe of Indra, known in the legends by the name of Vṛitra. Indra succeeded afterwards in killing him. See the same legend in the Kāushītaki Upanish. 3, 1.

<sup>6</sup> In the Kāush. Up. 3, 1, we find the form Arurmagha. Sāy. thinks them to be Asuras in the disguise of Brahmans. With this explanation agrees Sankara Achārya on the whole in his Commentary on the Kāush. Up. (page 75, ed. Cowell). He divides the word into arur and magha, and the negative a. The first is to mean "the study of the Vedas," and the second "mouth." Therefore the whole means, accord-

(his teacher) Brihaspati. On account of these faults Indra was forthwith excluded from participation in the Soma beverage. And after Indra had been excluded in this way from the Soma, all the Kshattriyas (at whose head he is) were likewise excluded from it. But he was allowed a share in it afterwards, having stolen the Soma from Tvashtar. But the Kshattriya race remains excluded from the Soma beverage to this day. There is one here who knows the way in which the Kshattriya who is properly excluded from the Soma beverage, may relish in this juice. Why do thy men expel such a man from the Veda?" The king asked then, "Dost thou, O Brâhmaṇa, know this way?" Râma answered, "Yes, I know it." The king then replied, "Let me know it, O Brâhmaṇa." Râma answered, "I will let thee know here, O king."

29.

(Which portions of sacrificial drink the King has to avoid.)

The priests may take any one of the three portions (which are to be left) either Soma, or curds, or water. When they take the Soma, which is the portion allotted to Brahmins, then thou wilt favour the Brahmins by it.<sup>7</sup> Thy progeny will be distinguished by the characteristics of the Brâhmaṇa; for they will be ready to take gifts, thirsty after drinking (Soma), and hungry of eating food, and ready to roam about everywhere according to their pleasure.

ing to him, "in whose mouth is not the study of the Vedas." This explanation is quite artificial and unsatisfactory. The Arumaghas (this is probably the right form) were no doubt a kind of degraded Aryas, very likely a tribe of the ancient Iranians, in whose language (the Zend) the words aurvo and magha are frequently to be met with.

<sup>7</sup> That is to say, thou wilt when regenerated in thy son and grandson, be accepted by the Brahmins as a member of their caste.

When there is any fault on the Kshattriya (who when sacrificing eats the Brâhmana portion), then his progeny has the characteristics of a Brahman; but in the second or third generation he is then capable of entering completely the Brahmanship, and he will have the desire of living with the Brahmanic fraternity.

When they take the curds, which is the share of the Vais'yas, then thou wilt favour the Vais'yas by it (and consequently be brought near them). Thy offspring will be born with the characteristics of the Vais'yas, paying taxes to another king, to be enjoyed by another; they will be oppressed according to the pleasure of the king. When there is any fault on the Kshattriya (who when sacrificing eats the Vais'ya portion), then his progeny is born with the characteristics of a Vais'ya, and in the second or third degree they are capable of entering the caste of the Vais'yas, and are desirous of living in the condition of a Vais'ya (i. e. they will have the nature of a Vais'ya).

When thou takest the water, which is the share of the Shûdras, then thou wilt please the Shûdras by it. Thy progeny will have the characteristics of the Shûdras, they are to serve another (the three higher castes), to be expelled and beaten according to the pleasure (of their masters). When there is any fault on the Kshattriya (who when sacrificing eats the Shûdra portion), then his offspring will be born with the characteristics of the Shûdras, and in the second or third degree he is capable of entering the condition of the Shûdras, and will be desirous of passing his life in that condition.

30.

*(Which portion the King should choose at the sacrifice.
The origin and meaning of Nyagredha.)*

These are the three portions (bhukshas), O King, of which the Kshattriya, when performing a sacrifice, must choose none. But the following is his own portion, which he is to enjoy. He must squeeze the airy descending roots of the Nyagrodha tree, together with the fruits of the Udumbara, A'svattha, and Plaksha trees, and drink the juice of them. This is his own portion.

(For the origin of the Nyagrodha tree is as follows): When the gods after the (successful) performance of their sacrifice, went up to heaven, they tilted over (ny-ubjan) the Soma cups, whence the Nyagrodha trees grew up. And by the name of Nyubja, i. e. tilted over, they are now called in Kurukshetra, where they grew first; from them all the others originated. They grew descending the roots (nyañcho rohanti). Therefore what grows downwards, is a downward growth (nyagroha); and for this name, signifying "downward growth," they called the tree "Nyagrodha."<sup>8</sup> It is called by the name Nyagrodha, whose meaning is hidden (to men), and not by the more intelligible name Nyagroha, for the gods like to conceal the very names of objects from men, and call them by names unintelligible to them.

31.

(On the meaning of the King's drinking the juice of the Nyagrodha tree instead of Soma.)

That portion of the juice in these Soma cups which went downwards became the descending roots, and of the other which went up, the fruits were produced. That Kshattriya, therefore, who enjoys (the juice of) the descending roots of the Nyagrodha tree, and that of its fruits, is not debarred from his own share (bhuksha). Further, he thus obtains the Soma beverage by means of a substitute, though he does not enjoy the real Soma, but only in the form of a substitute; for the Nyagrodha is just this substitute of the Soma. The Kshattriya (when drinking this juice of the Nyagrodha) enters the form of the Brahma by the medium of another (not direct), viz through the relationship of his Purohita (with the Brahmans), his own Dikshâ (at which the king himself was made a Brâhmaṇa for a little while), and the Pravara of his Purohita. The Kshattria (ruling power) occupies (among men the same place as) the Nyagrodha among the trees; for the Kshattria are the royal princes, whose power alone is spread here (on this earth), as being alone invested with sovereign power. The Nyagrodha is,<sup>9</sup> as it were, firmly established in the earth (and thus a sign of the duration of the royal power); and by means of its descending roots expanded (in all directions, and therefore a sign of the great extent of the power of the Kshattriyas over the whole earth). When the Kshattriya who performs sacrifice enjoys (the juice squeezed out of the) descending roots of the Nyagrodha tree, and its fruits, then he places in himself the royal power exercised by the Nyagrodha over the trees, and into the Kshattria his own Self. He then is in the Kshattria, and the royal power represented by the Nyagrodha over the trees, is then placed in him. Just as the Nyagrodha tree has by means of its descending roots a firm footing on the earth (for it is multiplied in this way), the royal power of a Kshattriya who enjoys, when sacrificing, this portion (as food) has a firm footing, and his rule cannot be overthrown.

* The word is traced to the root ruh to grow, the older form of which is rudh; compare avorudha "the descending roots."

32.

(The symbolical meaning of the fruits of the Udumbara, Asvattha, and Plaksha trees. What implements are required for this quasi Soma feast of the King.)

As to the fruits of the Udumbara tree, which originated from the vigour which is in food, and in which there is all the vigour of the trees, furnishing nourishments, the Kshattriya (when drinking the juice prepared from its fruits) places in the Kshattria food, and what yields nourishment from the trees.

As to the fruits of the Asvattha tree which sprang out of lustre, and which has the sovereignty over the trees, the Kshattriya (when drinking the juice prepared from its fruits) places in the Kshattria lustre and the sovereignty over the trees.

As to the fruits of the Plaksha tree, which sprang out of glory, and in which there is the independence and brilliancy of the trees represented, the Kshattriya places in this way the independence and brilliancy which is in the trees in the Kshattria.

When all these things (the roots of the Nyagrodha tree, &c.) are in readiness for him, then the priests buy the Soma, and perform for the king the several ceremonies preceding the eve of the festival just in the same way as the real Soma is treated. Then the day before the celebration (of the feast) the Adhvaryu should have all these things ready which are required for the preparation of the Soma juice, such as the (goat) skin (placed below), the two boards required for squeezing, the Dronakalas'a, the cloth (for purifying), the stones, the Pûtabhrî, the Adharaniya, the Sihâlî, the Udanchanam, and the Chamasa.<sup>10</sup> Then they should make two parts of what is squeezed for the king (the roots of the Nyagrodha, &c.); one is to tions of an Adhvaryu. Their description is therefore to be found principally in the Sûtras of the Yajurveda (see the 9th and 10th Adhyaya of the Kâtiya Sûtras, the 8th and 9th Pras'na of the Hiranyak'si Sûtras, Sâyana's Commentary on the 4th Prapâthaka of the 1st kânda of the Taittiriya Samhitâ, founded on the Apa'stamba Sr'âuta Sûtras).

In order to make the use of these vessels intelligible to the reader, I subjoin here a short description of the preparation of the Soma juice partially from what I myself have witnessed, partially from the ritual books and oral information.

The plant which is at present used by the sacerdotal priests of the Dekkhan at the Soma feast, is not the Soma of the Vedas, but appears to belong to the same order. It grows on hills in the neighbourhood of Poona to the height of about 4 to 5 feet, and forms a kind of bush, consisting of a certain number of shoots, all coming from the same root; their stem is solid like wood; the bark greyish; they are without leaves, the sap appears whitish, has a very stringent taste, is bitter, but not sour; it is a very nasty drink, and has some intoxicating effect. I tasted it several times, but it was impossible for me to drink more than some teaspoonfulls.

The juice is obtained in the following way: The Adhvaryu first spreads a skin (charma), and puts on it the Soma shoots which are called am'su or valli. He now takes two boards, adhishavana; the first is placed above the Soma. He beats the board with one of the so-called grâvanas, i. e. Soma squeezing stones, takes the shoots (as many as he requires for the particular âvana) from below the board, ties them together, and places the other board above them. He then pours water from the Vasativari pot (see page 114-115) on this board; this water is called nigrâbha. He now takes a certain number of shoots (there are, for instance, for the libation from the Upâs'u Graha, which is the first of all, six required) out of the whole bunch which lies between the two boards, holds over them the Soma squeezing stone, and shakes them thrice in the Chauasa (cup) of the Hotar towards the right side. This is the Nigrâbha. He wets them with the waters of the Vasativari pot. Now he puts them on a large stone, places upon them some grass, and beats the shoots in order to extract the juice. The technical term for this beating is, abhishnuoti. Each abhishava, or complete extracting of the Soma juice consists of three turns (parâgyas); in the first the Adhvaryu beats the shoots eight times, and makes the Nigrâbha in the manner described above; in the second turn he beats them eleven times, and in the third twelve times, making at the end of each the Nigrâbha. The juice which the Adhvaryu catches at the end of each turn with his hand, is thrown into a vessel (at the first abhishava in the Upâs'u Graha).

After this first or preliminary abhsihava follows the mahâbhishava be made ready for the morning libation, the other to be left for the midday libation.

33.

(The drinking from the Traita cups.)

When the priests lift up the Traita cups for<sup>11</sup> sacrificing, then they shall lift up the cup of the sacrificer or the great squeezing ceremony, performed exactly in the same way as the first, with the only difference, that the Adhivaryu takes from between the two boards as many Soma shoots as are required for the rest of the Savanam (libation). If the juice is extracted, it is poured in the Adhavanīya, a kind of trough. Thence it is poured in a cloth, in order to strain it. This cloth is called Paritra or Datāparitra. Below the cloth is another trough called Pātābhrit (i. e. the beater of what is strained, purified). The Udgâtar must hold the cloth, when the juice is strained.

Single shoots of the Soma, and drops of its juice are put in several sthālis or small vessels generally used for keeping butter. The libations are poured from two kinds of vessels, from the Grahas (see page 118), and the Chamasas (cups.) Each offering from a Graha consists of a certain number of Dhārās or portions (of a liquid substance). So for instance, the offering from the Agrayana Graha at the evening libation consists of the following four Dhārās: that one which is in the Agrayana sthāli (not the Graha) taken by the Adhivaryu; the two portions which remained in the Aditya Graha (the libation from which precedes that from the Agrayana), and in the Ajya sthāli (the pot with melted butter); these two are taken by the Pratipasthātār, the fourth Dhārā is taken from the Adhavanīya trough by the Unnetā. Each of the four Dhārās is first strained by a cloth held over the Paritra vessel. The Unnetār takes his Dhārā with a vessel, called Udāchanā, or with a Chamasa. These four Dhārās are then filled from the Pātābhrit in the Agrayana Graha, and sacrificed in the same way. Certain offerings are filled in the Grahas from another very large trough, the so-called Dronakalaśa (one such vessel is in my possession). At certain occasions there is not only the mouth of the Graha to be filled up to the brim, but the small cup, put in it (which alone was originally the Graha, but after the latter term had become identical with Pātra, the vessel itself, the small cup, was called atigrāhya is also filled; this is called atigrāhya.)

<sup>11</sup> They are called here trāita chamasa. There are on the whole ten such cups; therefore trāita cannot be referred to tri, i. e. three. In all likelihood the word is connected with Trita, who was the first physician, and the Soma being the best of all medicines, supposed to have invented such cups. Sāyana does not explain the term in his also, having thrown upon it two young sprouts of Dharba grass; both are then (one after the other) to be thrown on the wooden sticks surrounding the fire by the formula Vaushat! After having thrown the first, the priest repeats the verse, dadhikrāṇo akārisham (4, 39, 6) concluding with Sráhā and Vaushat! After having thrown the second Dharba stalk, he repeats the verse, á dadhikrāḥ ś'arasá (4, 38, 10). When the priests then take the Soma cups to drink themselves, the sacrificer should take his cup also. When they lift them up (to drink), the sacrificer should do the same. When the Hotar then calls the Īlā (just before drinking) to the place, and drinks from his cup, then the sacrificer should drink his cup whilst repeating the following verse, "What has remained of the juicy Soma beverage whilst Indra drank with his hosts, this his remainder I enjoy with my happy mind, I drink the king Soma." This beverage prepared from the trees (above mentioned) promising fortune to him, becomes drunk with a happy mind. The royal power of a Kshatriya who, when sacrificing, drinks only this portion described, becomes strong, and is not to be shaken.

commentary on the Aitareya Brāhmaṇam; but his attempt at an explanation in that on the Taittirīya Saṁhitā (ii. page 253, ed. well) shows that he had evidently no clear idea of what the original meaning was; for after having tried more than one explanation from a numeral tri, he exclaims, "but it is now enough; one should see that trāita means 'good, excellent,' (pras'asta).” But we need not despair of making out its meaning. If we compare the term, trāita chamasa with that of narāś'aṁsa chamasa (in 7, 34), we can pretty clearly see what it must mean. As I have stated above (in note 24 on page 124-125) the Chamasa are Narāś'aṁsa, that is to say, they belong to the deity Narāś'aṁsa, after one has drank out of them, sprinkled water over them, &c. Now from a Chamasa, they generally drink twice. What is filled in for the first time is Trāita, which belongs to Trāita; afterwards it is cleaned and filled again. This then is the Narāś'aṁsa draught.

By the words, "Be a blessing to our heart thou who art drunk! prolong our life, O Soma, that we may live long!" he then cleans his mouth; for if the juice (remaining on his lips) is not wiped off, then Soma, thinking, "an unworthy drinks me," is able to destroy the life of a man. But if the juice is wiped off in this way, then he prolongs the life. With the following two verses which are appropriate for the sacrifice, āpyāyasra sametu (1, 91, 16) and sañ te payāñsi sapayantu (1, 91, 18) he blesses the Chamasa (i. e. what he has drunk from it) to bear fruit. What is appropriate in the sacrifice, that is successful.

34.

(The drinking from the Narâs'añsa cups. The list of teachers of the substitute for the Soma juice, and the rites connected with it.)

When the priests put the Traita cups down, then the king should put down the sacrificer's cup also when they incline their cups (after having put them down), then the king should do the same with his cup. Then he should take up the Narâs'añsa cup, and by the recital of the verse, "O thou divine Soma, who knowest my mind, who art drunk by Narâs'añsa, and enjoyed by the Uma-Pitaras,<sup>12</sup> enjoy thee!" In this way the king enjoys the Narâs'añsa portion at the morning libation. At the midday libation he repeats the same mantra, but says, "enjoyed by the Urva-(Pitaras)," and at the evening libation he says, "enjoyed by the Kārya-

<sup>12</sup> A division of the Pitaras, or manes. It is the proper name of a certain class of the Pitaras. The original meaning of the word is uncertain. The root is, no doubt, av, but it has so many meanings that it is difficult to state satisfactorily the meaning. Another division of the Pitaras, see on page 226.

(Pitaras).” For the Pitaras (present) at the morning libation, are the Umas, those (present) at the midday libation, are the Urvas, and those at the evening libation, are the Kâvyas. In this way he makes the immortal Pitaras enjoy the libations.

Priyavrata, the Soma drinker, said, “Whoever enjoys the Soma beverage, he certainly will be immortal.” The ancestors of a king who enjoys, when sacrificing, this Narâsañsa portion, therefore, become immortal (i. e. they never will perish), when they enjoy (in such a way) the Soma libation, and his royal power will be strong and is not to be shaken. The ceremony of wiping off from the mouth what of the juice remained, and the sprinkling of the cup with water (âpyâyanam) is the same as above (when the Traita Chamasa are emptied). All the three libations of the juice prepared for the king should be performed in the same way as the real Soma libation.

This way of enjoying the Soma juice (by means of a substitute), was told by Râma Mârgaveya to Visântara, the son of Sushadman. The king then, after having been told it, said, “We give thee a thousand cows, O Brâhmaṇa. My sacrifice is to be attended by the S’yâparnas.”

This portion (bhaksha) was told by Tura, the son of Kavasha, to Janamejaya, the son of Parikshit; then by Parvata and Nârada to Somaka, the son of Sahadeva; thence (this traditional knowledge) passed to Sahadeva Sârjaya; thence to Babru Dairâcritha; thence to Bhîma Vaidarbha, and Nagnajit Gândhâra.

This portion further was told by Agni to Samasrûta Arindama; thence it passed to Kraturid Jânaki. This portion was further told by Vasistha to Sudâs, the son of Pijavana.

All these became great, in consequence of their having drunk the Soma in this way (by means of a substitute), and were great kings. Just as the sun (placed on the sky) sends forth warmth, thus the king who when sacrificing drinks the Soma in this way, is placed amidst fortune and shines everywhere, from all directions he exacts tribute, his kingdom becomes strong, and is not to be shaken.

EIGHTH BOOK.

FIRST CHAPTER.

The Shastras and Stotras required at the Soma day of the Rájasya.)

I

(The use of both the Rathantaram and Brihat at the midday libation.)

Now as regards the Stotras and Shastras (required at the King's libation), both the morning and the evening libations do not differ in this point from the rule of the Aikâhikas (Soma sacrifices of one day's duration); for both these libations at the Aikâhika sacrifices are indisturbable, well arranged, and firmly standing, and they produce quiet, good order, firm footing, and security.

(But there is a difference in the ceremonies of the midday libation.) The midday Pavamâna performance (of a sacrifice) which requires both Sâmans with the Brihat for the Prishtha Stotra has been told;¹.

¹ The expression ukta "told" appears to refer to 4, 19, ubhe brikhad antare pavamânayo bhavatai. But the reference is not quite correct.

The author wishes doubtless to advert to the peculiar circumstance, that both the principal Sâmans are used at one and the same day, on the Soma day of the Rájasya. It is even against the general principle of the sacrificial theory to use both on the same day, (see 4, 19), as the whole arrangement of the Yedasâha sacrifice with its Atharva and Brihat days clearly shows. There are only three exceptions to this rule, as far as my knowledge goes, viz. on the Ugri and Vishuvan days, and on the Abhishechaniya day of the Rájasya, which is performed according to the rites of an ahâhika for the chanting of both Sâmans (the Rathantara and Brihat) is performed. The verse, â trá ratham yathotaya (8, 57, 1-3) is the beginning (required for the Shâstra) belonging to the Rathantara Sâman; the verse idam vâso sutam andha (8, 53, 5-7), the sequel required for the same Shâstra. This Pavamâna Uktham (the just-mentioned Shâstra) is just the Marutvatiya Shâstra, to which the Rathantara Sâman (at the Agnistoma, for instance) belongs. They perform the Rathantara chant at the Pavamâna Stotra (of the midday libation) praised at this (sacrifice); the Brihat is the Prishtha (Stotra), in order to give a prop (to the whole). For the Rathantara is Brahma; the Brihat is the Kshattrâ.<sup>2</sup> The Brahma certainly precedes the Kshattrâ. For the Soma sacrifice (see 8, 4). The particulars of the ceremonies of the Abhihit day are not given in our Brâhmanam, but we learn them from the Asval Sûtras (8, 5). There it is said: Abhihit Brihat-prishtha ubhayorinâ yadyapi Rathantaram yagnasyaishâre, i.e. the Abhihit sacrifice requires the Brihat as its Prishtha Stotra (at the midday libation), and (thus) both (the principal) Sâmans, if the Rathantaram (is used at the evening libation) instead of the Yagnayapnya Sâman (used at the evening libation of the Agnistoma). The exceptional use of Brihat and Rathantaram on the Vishuvaa day has been stated by our author (4, 19, compare Asval. 8, 6). On the use of both these Sâmans at the Râjashya sacrifice, Asval. (9, 3) makes the following remark: ukthyo brihat prishtha ubhayasâmâ abhishuchanigrah, i.e. on the inauguration day the Ukthya sacrifice takes place, with the modification that the Brihat is the Sâma of the Prishtha Stotra, and that both (the principal) Sâmans (Brihat and Rathantaram) are required. Both are, as we learn distinctly from our Brâhmanam, required at the midday libation; the Rathantaram being chanted first, and the Brihat after it. The former forms here part of the Pavamâna Stotra (the first at the midday libation), the latter is the (principal) Prishtha Stotra which follows the first. The Shâstra belonging to the Pavamâna Stotra is the Marutvatiya (see 3, 12-20), that for the Prishtha Stotra is the Nishikewilya (see 3, 21-24). At the Râjashya sacrifice the first goes by the name of Pavamâna-uktham, the latter by that of Graha-uktham.

king should think "when the Brahma is at the head, then my royal power would become strong and not to be shaken." Further, the Rathantara is food; if placed first, it procures food to the king. The Rathantara further is the earth, which is a firm footing; if placed first, it therefore procures a firm footing to the king.

The Pragátha for calling Indra<sup>3</sup> near remains the same without any modification (as in the Brahmanical sacrifices), this Pragátha belonging to (all) Soma days. The Pragátha addressed to Brahmanaspati,<sup>4</sup> which has the characteristic of ut (uttishṭha, use!) is appropriate to both the Sâmans which are chanted. The Dháyyás<sup>5</sup> are the same without any modification; they are those appropriate for the Ahina sacrifices, whilst that Marutvatiya Pragátha<sup>6</sup> which is peculiar to the Aikáhikas, is chosen.

(The remainder of the Marutvatiya Shastra, and the Nishkeralya Shastra.)

The (Nivid) hymn (of the Paramāno uktham) is janishthā ugrak (10, 73).<sup>7</sup> It contains the terms, ugra strong, and sahas power, which are characteristic of the Kshattria. The word ojishtha "the strongest" is also a characteristic of the Kshattria. The words, bahulābhimānah (in the first verse) contain the term abhi, which means, "to overpower, defeat," (which is a characteristic of the Kshattram

also). The hymn consists of eleven verses, for the Trishṭubh comprises eleven syllables, and the Kshattriyas share in the nature of the Trishṭubh. Ojas (in ojistha) is Indra's power, vīryam (strength) is Trishṭubh; the Kshattria is power (ojas), and the Kshattriya race is the strength (as to progeny). Thus he (the priest) makes him (the Kshattriya) successful in strength, royal power, and progeny. By this Gaurivīti hymn<sup>8</sup> the Marutvatiya Shashtra becomes successful, on which a Bráhmāṇam<sup>9</sup> has been told.

(Now follows the Nishkevalya Shastram.)

The verse tram idhi harā-māhe (6, 46, 1-2) forms the Bṛihat Prishṭha. For the Bṛihat Sāma is the Kshattriam; by means of the Kshattria the king makes complete his royal power. If the Bṛihat is the Kshattria, then the soul of the sacrificer is the Nishkevalya Shastra (to which the Bṛihat Sāma belongs). That is what the Bṛihat Prishṭha becomes (for the sacrificer). The Bṛihat is the Kshattria by means of the Kshattria the Bṛihat makes him successful. The Bṛihat is further precedence, and in this respect it makes him successful also. The Bṛihat is further excellence, and in this respect it makes him successful also.

They make the Rathantara Sāma, abhi trá s'āma nonumak, the Anurūpa<sup>10</sup> to the Bṛihat. For the Rathantara is this world, and the Bṛihat is that world. That world corresponds to this one, and this world to that one. Therefore they make the Rathantara the Anurûpa to the Bṛihat, for thus they make the sacrificer enjoy both worlds.

Further, the Rathantara is the Brahma, and the Kshattra the Bṛihat; thus the Kshattra is then placed in the Brahma, and the Brahma in the Kshattra. There is then prepared for both the same place. The Dvâyâya padvârâna (19, 74, 6), of which a Brâhmanam<sup>11</sup> has been already told. The Sâma Pristhâtra is, abharan śrīgata-keha (8, 50, 1-2); for it is a characteristic of both Samans which are sung (on account of its containing the word abhar in both).

3.

(The Nirid Sukt of the Nishkeralya Shashtra).

• The hymn tam u śtrihī yo abhibhūtojâ (6, 18) contains the characteristic abhi in the word abhibhūti. Its words amā ānam (conceivable), ugram (strong), śatamā nam (never strong), are other characteristics of the Kshattra also. It consists of fifteen verses; for the number fifteen is strength, sharpness, of senses, and power, the Kshattra is strength, the royal prince, might (śrīgam). The hymn thus makes the king successful in strength, royal power and might. It is the hymn of Bharadvāja. The Bṛihat Sâman was sung by Bharadvāja also (and) is in direct relation with the ancestral fire<sup>12</sup>. The sacrifice of the Kshattriya which has the Bṛihat for its Pristhâ

<sup>12</sup> Siv. explains the expression āśheya saama in the following manner: āśheya Bharadvājamanuśābandhab, lowa abdena keśa-pṛthivīdhipulakshyate, śatamā sa śiśakam pūrṇa ita arthah. The word lowa means, according to him, "the head with the hair"; and to śiśakam he attributes the meaning "having a helmet, or turban," that is, "complete." But this explanation is too artificial and far-fetched to meet with the approval of modern philologists. To arrive (Stotra) becomes successful. Thence wherever a Kshattriya brings a sacrifice, there the Brihat Prishtha is to be employed, for this makes it (the sacrifice) complete.

4.

(The Shastras of the minor Hotri-priests.)

The performances of the minor Hotri-priests (Maitravaruna, Brâhmanâchañsi, and Achhâvâka) required (at the sacrifice of a Kshattriya) are those allotted to the Aikâhika sacrifices. For these Aikâhika performances are propitiatory, ready made, and placed on a footing in order to make the sacrifice successful to accomplish it, and place it on a firm footing whence it cannot fall down. These (performances) contain all the forms (required), and are quite complete. (They are repeated) in order to accomplish the integrity and completeness (of the sacrifice). The Kshattriyas who perform a sacrifice should think, "Let us obtain all desires by means of the all-perfect and complete performances of the minor Hotri-priests." Therefore, wherever the Ekâhas are not complete as to the number of Stomas and Prishthas, there are the Aikâhika performances of the minor Hotri-priests required,<sup>13</sup> then it (the sacrifice) becomes completed.

This sacrifice (performed by a Kshattriya) should be the Ukthya which has fifteen Stotras and Shastras at the proper meaning of the obsolete term saloma, we have to consult the cognate words anuloma and pratiloma, both applied to deterioration of lineage by mixing with lower castes. In reference to these terms I translated the passage.

<sup>13</sup> For the Ekâhas which are sarvastoma and sarvâkṛishtha, the following six Stomas are required, tvist, pañchadas'a, sapta laka, chavins'a, trigava, trayastrins'a; and the following Prishthas: Brihat, Rathantara, Vairûpa, Vâirûja, Sâkrava, Raivata. In the Kshattriya sacrifice there are only the Brihat and Rathantara required. It is therefore incomplete, the defects are to be supplied by the minor Hotri-priests.

Such is the opinion of some. For the sharpness of senses is a power (ojas), and the number fifteen is strength; (further) the Kshattria is power, and the Kshattriya is strength. Thus the priest makes him (the Kshattriya) successful by means of power, Kshattria, (and) strength. This sacrifice requires thirty Stotras and Shastras (viz. fifteen each). For the Virāj consists of thirty syllables. The Virāj is food. When he places him (the sacrificer) in the Virāj, then he places him in food. Therefore the Ukthya, which is fifteen-fold, should be (employed for the king at this occasion). But the Agnishṭoma, which forms part of the Jyotishṭoma, would more properly answer this purpose.<sup>4</sup> For among the Stomas, the Trivṛt (nine-fold) is the Brahma, and the fifteen-fold Stoma is the Kshattria. But the Brahma precedes the Kshattria: (for the king should think) "If the Brahma is placed first, my kingdom will be strong and not to be shaken." The number seventeen represents the Vaiśyas, and twenty-one the Shūdras. If these two Stomas (the seventeen and twenty-one-fold) are employed, then they make the Vaiśyas and Shūdras follow him (the king). Among the Stomas the Trivṛt is splendour, the fifteen-fold is strength, the seventeen-fold is offspring, the twenty-one-fold is the footing. Thus the priest makes the king who (thus) sacrifices, successful in gaining splendour, strength, offspring, and a firm footing. Therefore the Jyotishṭoma (Agnishṭoma) is required. This requires twenty-four Stotras and Shastras (twelve each). For the year consists of twenty-four half months; in the year there are all (kinds of) nourishment. Thus he places him (the sacrificer) in all (kinds of) nourishment. Hence the Jyotishṭoma-Agnishṭoma alone is required (and not the Ukthiya).

SECOND CHAPTER.

(Punarabhisheka, or repetition of the inauguration ceremony.)

5.

(The implements and preparation for Punarabhisheka.)

Now follows (the rule) of Punarabhisheka of the Kshattriya who is inaugurated as a sacrificer, and whose Kshattram is in (such a way) new born.<sup>1</sup> After having undergone the ceremonies of ablution<sup>2</sup> and performed the animal sacrifice (anubandhya), he performs the concluding Ishṭi.

After this Ishṭi is finished (and thus the Soma day of the Râjāsūya concluded) they sprinkle him again with the holy water (they make punarabhisheka). Before it commences, all implements must be in readiness, viz. a throne, made from Udumbara wood, with feet only as large as the span between the thumb and forefinger, and successive helmets on the length of half an arm, (besides there must be provided for) cords for binding made of Muṣṣa grass, a tiger skin for covering the throne, a (large) ladle of Udumbara wood and a (small) branch of the Udumbara tree. In this ladle the following eight substances are thrown: curds, honey, clarified butter, raw water fid en during sunshine, young sprouts of grain and of green barley, liquor and Dūb grass (Dūvā). The throne is to be placed in the southern line,<sup>3</sup> draw by a wooden sword (sphya) in the Vēdi, the front part turned eastwards. Two of its feet are to be within the Vēdi, and two outside. For this earth is (the goddess of) fortune; the little space within the Vēdi is thus allotted to her, as well as the large (infinite) region outside. If thus two feet of the throne are inside and two outside the Vēdi, both kinds of desires, those obtainable from the place within as well as from outside the Vēdi, are to be gained.

How the King has to ascend his throne at the inauguration ceremony; what mantras he has to repeat at this occasion.)

He spreads the tiger skin on the throne in such a manner that the hairs come outside, and that part which covered the neck is turned eastward. For the tiger is the Kshattrā (royal power) of the beasts in the forest. The Kshattrā is the royal prince; by means of this Kshattrā the king makes his Kshattrā (royal power) prosper. The king when taking his seat on the throne approaches it from behind, turning his face eastwards, kneels down with crossed legs, so that his right knee touches the earth,<sup>4</sup> and holding the throne with his hands) prays over it the following mantra:—

“May Agni ascend thee, O throne, with the Gayatrī metre! May Savitar ascend (thee) with the Ushnih, Soma with the Anushṭubh, Bṛhaspati with the Bṛihat, Mitra and Varuṇa with the Paṇkti, Indra with the Trishṭubh, and the Vis’ve Devāḥ with the Jagatī metres. After them I ascend this throne, to be ruler, to be a great ruler, to be an universal ruler, to obtain all desires fulfilled, to be an indepen-

<sup>4</sup>This particular posture is called jānvachya. The Hotar, principally, must on many occasions take it; it is very awkward and troublesome; I could not imitate it well, though I tried.

gent and most distinguished ruler (on this earth), and to reach the world of Prajâpati, to be there a ruler, a great ruler, a supreme ruler, to be independent, and to live there for a long time !”

After having repeated this mantra the king should ascend the throne, with his right knee first, and then with his left. This, this is done ; so they say.

The gods joined with the metres, which were placed in such an order that the following exceeded the preceding one always by four syllables,<sup>5</sup> ascended this (throne) which is fortune, and posted themselves on it, Agni with the Gâyatrî, Savitar with the Ushnih, Soma with the Anushṭubh, Brihaspati with the Brihatî, Mitra and Varuṇa with the Pañkti, Indra with the Trishṭubh, the Vis’vedevâh with the Jagatî. The two verses (where the joining of the gods to the metres is mentioned) commencing, Agner Gâyatrî abharat (10, 130, 4-5) are then recited.

The Kshattriya who, after these deities (after having previously invoked them in this manner), ascends his throne, obtains for himself the power not only of acquiring anything, but of keeping what he has acquired ;<sup>6</sup> his prosperity increases from day to day, and he will rule supreme over all his subjects.

When the priest is about to sprinkle him (with water) then he makes the king invoke the waters for their blessing (by these words) : “ Look upon me ye waters with a favourable eye ! touch my skin with your happy body ! I invoke all the fires which reside in the waters to bestow on me splendour, strength, and vigour.” For the waters, if not invoked for a blessing (by a mantra), take away the strength from a Kshattriya who is already consecrated ; but not (if they have been duly invoked).

7.

(The inauguration mantra when the King is sprinkled with the holy water. Whether the sacred words, "bhūr," &c. are to be pronounced along with this mantra or not. Different opinions on this point.)

They now put the branch of the Udumbara tree on the head of the Kshattriya, and pour the liquids (which are in the large ladle) on it. (When doing so), the priest repeats the following mantras: "With these waters, which are most happy, which cure everything, increase the royal power, and hold up the royal power, the immortal Prajapati sprinkled Indra, Soma the king, Varuṇa, Yama, Manu ; with the same, sprinkle I thee ! Be the ruler over kings in this world. Thy illustrious mother bore thee as the great universal ruler over great men ; the blessed mother has borne thee ! By command of the divine Savitar I sprinkle<sup>7</sup> (thee) with the arms of the As'vins, with the hands of Pūshan ; with the lustre of Agni, the splendour of Sūrya, the power of Indra, that thou mayest obtain strength, happiness, fame, and food."

If the priest who sprinkles the king wishes him alone to enjoy good health,<sup>8</sup> then he shall pronounce (when sprinkling) the sacred word, bhūr. If he wishes that two men (son and grandson) should enjoy this benefit together with him, then he shall pronounce the two sacred words bhūr, bhuvāh. If he wishes to benefit in this way three men (son, grandson, and great grandson), or to make (the king) unrivalled, then he ought to pronounce the three sacred words, bhûr, bhuvah, svar.

Some say, These sacred words having the power of bringing every thing within grasp, the Kshattriya who has the mantra recited with the addition of these sacred words, <sup>9</sup> provides for another (not for himself); therefore one should sprinkle him only under the recital of the mantra, "By command of the divine Savitar," &c. They again are of opinion that the Kshattriya, when sprinkled, not under the recital of the whole mantra (i. e. with omission of the sacred words), has power only over his former life.

Satyakâma, the son of Jabalâ, said, "If they do not sprinkle him under the recital of these sacred words (in addition to the mantra), then he is able to go through his whole life (as much as is apportioned to him)." But Uddâlaka Aruni said, "He who is sprinkled under the recital of these sacred words obtains everything by conquest."

He (the priest) should sprinkle him under the recital of the whole mantra, "By the command of the divine Savitar," &c., and conclude by bhûr, bhuvah, svar!

The Kshattriya who has thus performed a sacrifice loses (in consequence of his sacrifice) all these things (which were in him), viz. the Brahma which was placed in the Kshattria, the sap, nourishment, the essence of water and herbs, the character of holiness (brahmararchasam), the thriving consequent on food, the begetting of children, and the peculiar form of the Kshattria (all that it comprises). And as further regards the sap for (producing) nourishing substances, the Kshattria is the protection of the herbs (the fields of grain, &c. being protected by the Kshattriyas, these things must be kept). If he therefore brings those two invocation offerings before the inauguration ceremony,<sup>10</sup> then he places the Brahma in this Kshattrā (and all those things will be consequently kept).

8.

(The symbolical meaning of the different implements and liquids required for the inauguration ceremony. The drinking of spirituous liquor (surá) by the King.)

The reason that the throne-seat, the ladle, and the branch is of the Udumbara tree is because the Udumbara is vigour and a nourishing substance. The priest thus places vigour in him (the King) as his nourishing substance.

As to curds, honey, and melted butter, they represent the liquid (essence) in the waters and herbs. The priest, therefore, places the essence of the waters and the herbs in him. •

The rain water fallen during sunshine represents the splendour and lustre of sanctity, which are in this way placed in him.

The young grass and young barley represent provisions and the thriving by their means, which are thus placed in him for (producing) offspring and consequently (provide him with) offspring.

The spirituous liquor represents the Kshattrā, and further, the juice in the food; thus both the Kshattrā and the juice in the food, are placed in him.

The Dûrvâ grass is Kshattrā; for this is the ruler of the herbs. The Kshattrā, viz. the princely race, is represented by it, as it were, spread everywhere; the Kshattriya becomes residing here (on this earth), in his kingdom, he becomes established as it were, his rule extended, as it were. This is represented by the sprouts of the Dûrvâ, which have, <sup>10</sup> See above 7, 22, one to the Brahma, the other to the Kshattrā "I enter the Brahma," &c.

as it were, a firm footing on the earth. In this way the Kshattra of the herbs is placed in him (the king) and a firm footing thus given him.

All those things, (the Brahma, sap, &c.) which had gone from the king after having performed a sacrifice, are in this way placed in him (again). By their means (of curds, honey, &c.) he makes him thus successful.

Now he gives into his hand a goblet of spirituous liquor, under the recital of the verse, svādishthayā madishthayāt, &c. (9, 1, 1) i. e. "Purify, O Soma! with thy sweetest most exhilarating drops (the sacrificer), thou who art squeezed for Indra, to be drunk by him."<sup>11</sup> After having put the spirituous liquor into his hand, the priest repeats a propitiatory mantra<sup>12</sup> (which runs thus): "To either of you (spirituous liquor and Soma!) a separate residence has been prepared, and allotted by the gods. Do not mix with one another in the highest heaven; liquor! thou art powerful; Soma! thou art a king. Do not harm him (the king)! may either go to his own place." (Here is said), that the drinking of the Soma and that of liquor, exclude one another (they are not to be mixed). After having drunk it, he should think, "the giver (the priest) of the goblet (to be his friend) and give him (the remainder of) this (liquor)." This is the characteristic of a friend. Thus he finally places the liquor in his friend (gives him a share in it). And thus has he who possesses such a knowledge, a place in his friend (they are mutually connected).

<sup>11</sup> This interpretation is given by Śāyana, which, no doubt, is suitable to the occasion at which this mantra is used; and thus it certainly was interpreted even in ancient times. However, it does not appear to be the original meaning of the verse.

(The descent of the King from the throne after having been inaugurated. The mantras which he has to repeat at this occasion)

He now descends (from the throne-seat) facing the branch of the Udumbara tree (which was placed in the ground). The Udumbara being sap, and consequently a nourishing substance, the king goes thus (to receive) these gifts (hidden in the Udumbara tree). Being seated above, and having put both his feet on the ground, he announces his descent (facing the Udumbara), (by uttering the following words) "I stand in the heavens, and on the earth; I stand in the air exhaled and inhaled; I stand on day and night; I stand on food and drink; I stand on Brahma, Kshattra, and these three worlds." Finally he stands firmly through the universal soul (sarvâ-âtma, which connects all the things just mentioned), and thence has a firm footing in the universe. He obtains continuous prosperity. The king who descends after having been inaugurated by the ceremony of Pûnarabhisheka in this way (from the throne seat) obtains supremacy over his subjects, and royal power.

After having descended,<sup>12</sup> he then stands inclining his body (upastham kṛitrâ) with his face towards the east, and utters thrice the words, "Adoration to the Brahma!" Then he says aloud, "I present a gift for the attainment of victory (in general), of victory everywhere (abhijîti), of victory over strong and weak enemies (vijîti), and of complete victory (saṁjîti)."

By thus making thrice salutation to the Brahma, the Kshattria comes under the sway of the Brahma, and consequently the rule of the king becomes prosperous and he will have issue. As regards (the mantra), "I present a gift for the attainment of victory," &c. he emits Speech by it. For the words "I give" implies that Speech is conquered, (recovered, after having been silent).

"When Speech is recovered, then (consequently) all (this) my performance shall be completed," having (so thinking) emitted Speech, he approaches the Ahavanîya fire and puts a stick into it, reciting, "Thou art a wooden stick, become joined to the sharpness of senses and strength of the body, Svâhá!" Finally he succeeds thus in making himself sharpness of senses and valiant. After having put the stick into the fire, he walks three steps towards the east and north, (and addresses the step he is taking thus): "Thou art the means of subduing the regions: ye (steps), make me capable of adoring (in the right manner) the gods; may I obtain my desires wished for and preserve what is granted to me, and safety." He now proceeds to the north-east, that is, to undo again a defeat. Such is the meaning (they say).

10.

(Magical performance of a King for defeating an enemy.)

The Devas and Asuras were fighting in these worlds. They fought in the eastern direction, then the Asuras defeated them. They then fought in the southern direction, and the Asuras defeated them again; and likewise they were defeated by the Asuras when fighting in the western and northern directions. They were then fighting between the eastern and northern directions, and remained victors. The Kshattriya therefore, standing amidst both armies arrayed in battle lines, shall proceed to the north-east saying to him (to the house-priest), "do so<sup>14</sup> that I may conquer this army." After he (the house-priest) has consented, he should touch the upper part of the king's chariot, and repeat the mantra, vanaspate vídvángo hi (6, 47, 26). Then he shall say to (the king), "Turn towards this (north-east) direction; thy chariot with all its implements should be turned thither (north-east); then to the north-west, south, and east, and (lastly) towards the enemy." With the hymn, abhivartena havishâ (10, 174) shall he turn his chariot, and when reciting the Apratiratha (10, 103 ás'uh síś'áno), S'ása (1, 152 sása utthá), and Sauparîa (pradhárâ yantu madhuna) hymns, he shall look upon it (the chariot).

The Kshattriya conquers the (hostile) army, when he at the time of just being about fighting (with the enemy) takes thus his refuge (with the house-priest), saying, "Make me win this battle." He then shall let him fight in the north-eastern direction, and he (the Kshattriya) wins the battle. If he be turned out of his dominions and thus takes his refuge with him (the house-priest), saying, "Make me return to my dominions," then he (the house-priest) shall let him when going away proceed to this (north-eastern) direction, (and) thus he recovers his dominions.

<sup>14</sup> Sáy refers this address to the king who is sitting in his chariot. A Kshattriya is speaking these words. He asks first the king's permission to perform the ceremony mentioned. The person to whom the Kshattriya addresses his words is only hinted at by the demonstrative pronoun, but never explicitly mentioned. I think it refers to the Parodita or house-priest, who has always to accompany the king when going to fight a battle, and give him his advice. Sáyana's opinion is hardly correct.

eastern direction) recites then when going to his palace (the verse) calculated to drive away all enemies altogether. (This verse is), apa prácha (10, 131, 1) Then he will be made rid of all his enemies and live in safety, and enjoy happiness increasing from day to day. He who returns to his palace whilst reciting the abovementioned mantra (10, 131, 1) obtains sovereignty over his subjects, and supreme power. After having come home he sits behind the household fire. His priest then, after having touched him, fills a goblet four times with melted butter, and makes thus three (each consisting of four spoonfuls) offerings addressed to Indra, the mantras being recited in the Prapada<sup>15</sup> form, in order that he might be protected from disease, injury from any loss, and enjoy perfect safety.

11.

(The repetition of three mantras with insertion of a certain formula. Its effect. Janamejaya's opinion on the effect of this magical performance.)

(The verses to be recited in the Prapada way follow Paryū shu pradhanva (9, 110, 1), i. e. acquire every where riches in order to grant them (to thy worshipper). In the midst of the word vīrirāya (of the mentioned mantra), after ū and before ri he insert the words, "bhūṛ, brahma, práṇam (breath), amṛtam (ambrosia) is such one (the name is required

i. e. the wise call that recital of the (several) pádas of a Rik verse prapada, when they all are measured by the syllables of which the consist. This means that each syllable of the páda is to be pronounced quite distinctly, and that there should be a stop at the end of every páda. This explanation appears however not to be quite correct. From the following paragraph we learn that prapada is the insertion of a formula in a páda of a verse.

who seeks for shelter and safety, for welfare with his children and cattle." (Now follows the remaining part of the verse), ni sakshañir, &c. i. e. being a conqueror of enemies, thou makest efforts of crossing the lines of our adversaries.

(Now follows the second verse), Anu hi tvá sutam, &c. (9, 110, 2). In the midst of the word samaryā in the second pāda, after the syllable "ma" the word bhuvō, brahma, &c. (the remainder just as above) are inserted.

(Now follows the third verse), ajijano hi pavamāno, &c. (9, 110, 3). In the midst of the word s'akmanā after sa and before ma, he inserts the words star, brahma, &c. (just as above). After the last word of the interpolation, viz. "pas'ubhir," he then proceeds to finish the verse recommencing by kmanā.

The Kshattriya, for whose benefit the house-priest sacrifices three offerings of melted butter, each consisting of four spoonfuls, whilst reciting these Indra verses in the above mentioned Prāpada way, thus becomes free of disease, free of enemies, does not suffer any loss, and screened by the form of the three-fold science (the three Vedas), walks in all directions, and becomes established (after his death) in Indra's world.

Finally he prays for increase in cows, horses, and progeny, with the words, "cows, may ye be born here! horses, may ye be born here! men, may ye be born here! may here sit a hero (my son), as protector (of the country), who presents the priests gifts, consisting of a thousand (cows)." He who thus prays, will be blessed with plenty of children and cattle.

The Kshattriya whom those (priests) who have this knowledge make sacrifice in such a way, will be raised to an exalted position. But those who make the king sacrifice in this way, without possessing this knowledge, they kill him, drag him away, and deprive him of his property, just as the most degraded of men (nishâdas) robbers, murderers, seize a wealthy man (when travelling) in a forest, and after having thrown him into a ditch, run away with his property.

Janamejaya, the son of Purikshit, who possessed this knowledge, said, "My priests, who possess this knowledge, made me sacrifice, I who have the same knowledge (in such a manner). Therefore I am victorious; I conquer a hostile army eager of fighting,<sup>16</sup> neither the divine nor the human arrows coming from such an army can reach me. I shall attain the full age allotted to man (100 years), I shall become master of the whole earth. The same falls to the lot of him, who knowing this, is made to sacrifice (by priests) in this way.

THIRD CHAPTER.

(The Mahâbhisheka or grand inauguration ceremony of Indra.)

12.

(The elevation of Indra to the royalty over the Gods. His throne-seat. By what mantras he ascended it. The Gods proclaim him as King by mentioning all his titles.)

Now follows the great inauguration (mahâbhisheka) of Indra. The gods, headed by Prajâpati, said to one another (pointing with their hands to Indra): "This one is among the gods the most vigorous, most strong, most valiant, most perfect, who carries best out any work (to be done). Let us instal him (to the kingship over us)." They all consented to perform just this ceremony* (mahābhisheka) on Indra. They brought for him that throne-seat, which is called the Rik-formed.<sup>1</sup> They made the Brihat and Rathantara verses its two fore-legs, the Vairūpa and Vairāja verses its hind-legs, the Śākvara and Raivata (verses) its top-boards, the Nāudhasa and Kāleya its side-boards. The Rik verses were made the threads of the texture which went lengthwise, the Sāmans were the threads which went crossways, the Yajus verses the intervals in the texture. They made (the goddess of) Glory its covering, and (the goddess of) Fortune its pillow, Savitar and Brihaspati were holding its two fore-legs, Vāyu and Pūshan the two hind-legs, Mitra and Varuṇa the two top-boards, the Asvins the two side-boards.

Indra then ascended the throne-seat, addressing it thus: "May the Vasus ascend thee with the Gâyatrî metre, with the Trivrit Stoma, with the Rathantara Sâma. After them I then ascend for obtaining universal sovereignty. May the Rudras ascend thee with the Trishtubh metre, the fifteen-fold Stoma, and the Brihat Sâma. After them then I ascend for obtaining increase of enjoyment. May the Adityas ascend thee with the Jagatî metre, the seventeen-fold Stoma, and the Vairūpa Sâma. After them I ascend for obtaining independent rule. May the Viśve Devâḥ ascend thee with the Anushtubh metre, the twenty-one-fold Stoma, and the Vairāja Sâma. After them I ascend for obtaining distinguished rule. May the divine Sādhyâs and Aptyas ascend thee with the Paṅkti metre, the Trimava (twenty-seven-fold) Stoma, and the Śākvara Sâma. After them I ascend for obtaining royal power. May the divine Marutas and Āngiras ascend thee with the Atichandas metre, the thirty-three-fold Stoma, and the Raivata Sâma. After them then I ascend for obtaining the fulfilment of the highest desires for becoming a great king, for supreme mastership, independence, and a long residence." By these words one should ascend the throne-seat.

After Indra had seated himself on this throne-seat the Vis've Devâh said to him, "Indra cannot achieve any feat if he is not everywhere publicly proclaimed (as hero); but if he be thus proclaimed, he can do so." They then consented to do so, and consequently turning towards Indra, cried aloud (calling him by all his titles.)

The gods bestowed on him (Indra), by proclaiming him as "universal ruler," universal rule; by proclaiming him as "enjoyer (of pleasures)," they made him father (of pleasures); by proclaiming him as "independent ruler," they granted him independence of rule; by proclaiming him as "distinguished king," they conferred on him royal distinction; by proclaiming him "king," they made him father of kings; by calling him "one who has attained the highest desires," they granted him fulfilment of the highest desires.

(The gods then continued proclaiming his heroic virtues in the following manner): "The Kshattria is born; the Kshatriya is born; the supreme master of the whole creation is born; the devourer of the (hostile) tribes is born; the destroyer of the hostile castles is born; the slayer of the Asuras is born; the protector of the Brahma is born; the protector of the religion is born."

After (his royal dignity) was thus proclaimed, Prajâpati when being just about performing the inauguration ceremony, recited over him (consecrated him with) the following mantra:

13.

(The mantras by which Indra was consecrated. He was installed by Prajâpati.)

"Varuṇa, the faithful, sat down in his premises—for obtaining universal rule, enjoyment (of pleasures), independence, distinction as sovereign, fulfilment of the highest desires—he, the wise, &c." (1, 25, 10). Prajâpati, standing in front of Indra who was sitting on the throne-seat, turned his face to the west, and after having put on his head a gold leaf, sprinkled him with the moist branch of an Udumbara, together with that of a Palâśa tree, reciting the three Rik verses, imâ âpah ś'ratamâ, i. e. these most happy waters, &c. (Ait. Br. 8, 7); and the Yajus verse, devasya trâ (Vâjasan. Saṁh. 1, 10. Ait. Br. 8, 1); and the great words, bhûr, bhuvah, svar.

14.

(Indra inaugurated by various deities in the various directions to the Kingship becomes universal ruler.)

The Vasavas then inaugurated him (Indra) in the eastern direction during thirty-one days by these three Rik verses, the Yajus verse, and the great words (all just mentioned), for the sake of obtaining universal sovereignty. Hence all kings of eastern nations in the eastern regions are inaugurated to universal sovereignty, and called samâj, i. e. universal sovereign, after this precedent made once by the gods.

Then the Rudras inaugurated Indra in the southern region during thirty-one days, with the three Rik verses, the Yajus and the great words (just mentioned), for obtaining enjoyment (of pleasures). Hence all kings of living creatures (chiefly beasts) in the southern region are inaugurated for the enjoyment (of pleasures) and called bhoja, i. e. enjoyer.

Then the divine Adityas inaugurated him in the western region during thirty-one days, with those three Rik verses, that Yajus verse, and those great words, for obtaining independent rule. Hence all kings of the Nichyas and Apáchyas in the western countries, are inaugurated to independent rule, and called "independent rulers."

Then the Vis'vê Devâh inaugurated him during thirty-one days in the northern region by those three Rik verses, &c. for distinguished rule. Hence all people living in northern countries beyond the Himalaya, such as the Uttarakurus, Uttaramadras, are inaugurated for living without a king (vairâjyam), and called Virâj,<sup>3</sup> i. e. without king.

Then the divine Sâdhya and Aptyas inaugurated Indra during thirty-one days in the middle region, which is a firmly established footing (the immovable centre) to the kingship (râjya). Hence the kings of the kurupañchâlas, with the Vas'as and Us'i naras, are inaugurated to kingship, and called kings (râjâ).

Then the divine Marutas and Angiras inaugurated him during thirty-one days in the upper (ûrdhva) region for attaining fulfilment of the highest wishes, the position of a great king, of a supreme ruler, of an independent king, and long duration of his rule.

Indra thus became by means of this great inauguration ceremony, possessed of the power of obtaining anything wished for, as had been only the prerogative of Prajâpati.<sup>4</sup> He conquered in all the various ways

<sup>3</sup> To this word two meanings can be given: 1) without king; 2) a very distinguished king. In this passage we must take it in the first meaning; for here are the janapadâh, i. e. people in opposition to the king mentioned as abhishikta, i. e. inaugurated, whilst in all other passages of this chapter, we find instead of them, the râjânah or kings.

<sup>4</sup> This whole sentence is only a translation of the full import implied in the words, parameshthi prâjâpatya.

of possible conquest<sup>5</sup> and won all people. He obtained the leadership, precedence, and supremacy over all gods. After having conquered the position of a samrāj (universal ruler) &c. he became in this world self-existing (svayambhūh) an independent ruler, immortal,<sup>6</sup> and in the heaven-world, after having attained all desires wished for, he became immortal (also).

FOURTH CHAPTER.

*The Mahābhisheka ceremony performed on a King.
What Rishis performed it, and for what Kings they performed it.)*

15.

(The consequences of the Mahābhisheka. The oath which the King must take before the priest performs the ceremony.)

The priest who, with this knowledge (about the Mahābhisheka ceremony) wishes that a Kshatriya should conquer in all the various ways of conquest, to subjugate all people, and that he should attain to leadership, precedence, and supremacy over all kings, and attain everywhere and at all times to universal sovereignty, enjoyment (of pleasures), independence, distinguished distinction as king, the fulfilment of the highest desires, the position of a king, of a great king, and supreme mastership, that he might cross (with his arms) the universe, and become the ruler of the whole earth during all his life, which may last for an infinitely long time, that he might be the sole king of the earth up to its shores bordering on the ocean; such a priest should inaugurate the Kshattriya with Indra's great inauguration ceremony. But before doing so, the priest must make the king take the following oath: "Whatever pious works thou mightest have done during the time which may elapse from the day<sup>1</sup> of thy birth to the day of thy death, all these together with thy position, thy good deeds, thy life, thy children, I would wrest from thee, shouldst thou do me any harm."

The Kshattriya then who wishes to attain to all this, should well consider and say in good faith all that is above mentioned (thou mayest wrest from me, &c. &c.)

16.

(The woods and grains required for the performance of Makábhisheka.)

The priest then shall say (to his attendants), "Bring four kinds of wood: Nyagrodha, Udumbara, As'vattha, and Plaksha." Among the trees the Nyagrodha is the Kshattria. Thus by bringing Nyagrodha wood he places in the king the Kshattram. The Udumbara representing the enjoyment, the As'vattha universal sovereignty, the Plaksha independence and freedom of the rule of another king; the priest by having these woods brought to the spot, thus makes the king participate in all these qualities (universal sovereignty, &c. &c.). Next he shall order to bring four kinds of grain from vegetables (amshadha tokmakritu), viz. rice with small grains, rice with large grains, Priyangu, and barley. For amongst herbs rice with small grains represents the Kshattria. Thus by bringing sprouts of such grains, he places the Kshattrā in him. Rice with large grains represents universal sovereignty. Therefore by bringing sprouts of such grains (to the spot), he places universal sovereignty in him. The Priyañgus, among herbs, represent enjoyment of pleasures. By bringing their sprouts, he places the enjoyment of pleasures in him. Barley represents the skill as military commander. By bringing their sprouts he places such a skill in him (the king).

17.

(The implements for making Mahābhisheka.)

Now they bring for him a throne-seat made of Udumbara wood, of which the Brāhmaṇam has been already told (see 8, 8). The ladle of Udumbara wood is here optional; instead of it a vessel of the same wood (pātri) may be taken. Besides they bring an Udumbara branch. Then they mix those four kinds of fruit and grain in a vessel, and after having poured over them curds, honey, clarified butter, and rain-water fallen during sunshine, put it down. He (the priest) should then consecrate the throne-seat in the following way: thy two forelegs are the Brihat and Rathantaram Sāmāns, &c. (just as above, see 8, 12).

13 = 13, and 19 = 14.

20.

(The meaning and effect of the various liquids poured over the head of the King. His drinking of spirituous liquor. He drinks the Soma mystically.)

By sprinkling the king with curds, the priest makes his senses sharp; for curds represent sharpness of senses in this world. By sprinkling him with honey, the priest makes him vigorous; for honey is the vigour in herbs and trees. By sprinkling him with clarified butter, he bestows upon him splendour; for clarified butter is the brightness of cattle. By sprinkling him with water, he makes him free from death (immortal); for waters represent in this world the drink of immortality (anṛita).

The king who is thus inaugurated, should present to the Brahman who has inaugurated him, gold, a thousand cows, and a field in form of a quadrangle. They say, however, that the amount of the reward is not limited and restricted to this (it may be much higher), for the Kshattriya (i. e. his power) has no limits, and to obtain unlimited (power, the reward should as to its greatness be unlimited also).

Then the priest gives into his hands a goblet filled with spirituous liquor, repeating the mantra, śrúdishtayá, &c. (see 8, 8). He then should drink the remainder (after previous libation to the gods), when repeating the following two mantras: "Of what juicy well prepared beverage<sup>2</sup> Indra drank with his associates, just the same, viz. the king Soma, I drink here with my mind being devoted to him (Soma)." The second mantra (Rigveda, 8, 45, 22), "To thee who growest like a bullock (Indra), by drinking Soma, I send off (the Soma juice) which was squeezed to drink it; may it satiate thee and make thee well drunk."

The Soma beverage which is (in a mystical way) contained in the spirituous liquor, is thus drunk by the king, who is inaugurated by means of Indra's great inauguration ceremony (the ceremony just described), and not the spirituous liquor.<sup>3</sup> (After having drunk this mystical Soma) he should repeat the following mantias, apāma Somam (8, 48, 3), i. e. we have drunk Soma, and s'an no bhava (10, 37, 10), i. e. Be it propitious to us!

The drinking of spirituous liquor, or Soma, or the enjoyment of some other exquisite food, affects the body of the Kshattriya who is inaugurated by means of Indra's great inauguration ceremony, just as pleasantly and agreeably till it falls down (on account of drunkenness), as the son feels such an excess of joy when embracing his father, or the wife when embracing her husband, as to lose all self-command.

21.

(What Kings had the Mahâbhisheka ceremony performed ; their conquest of the whole earth, and the horse sacrifices. Stanzas on Janamejaya, Viśvakarmâ and Marutta.)

Tura, the son of Kavasha, inaugurated with this great inauguration ceremony of Indra, Janamejaya, the son of Parikshit. Thence Janamejaya went every where conquering the earth up to its ends, and sacrificed the sacrificial horse. To this fact refers the following Gâthâ (stanza), which is sung : " In the land where the throne-seat was erected, Janamejaya bound a horse which was eating grain, adorned with a mark on its forehead (rukmin), and with yellow flower garlands, which was walking over the best (fields full of fodder), for the gods."

With this ceremony Sâryâta, the son of Manu, was inaugurated by Chyavana, the son of Bhrigu. Thence Sâryâta went conquering all over the earth, and sacrificed the sacrificial horse, and was even at the sacrificial session held by the gods, the house-father.

With this ceremony Somas'ushmâ, the son of Vâjaratna, inaugurated Sâtâniha, the son of Satrajit.

Thence S'atânika went conquering everywhere over the whole earth up to its ends, and sacrificed the sacrificial horse.

With this ceremony Parvata and Nârada inaugurated Ambashtya. Thence Ambashtya went conquering everywhere over the whole earth up to its ends, and sacrificed the sacrificial horse.

With this ceremony Parvata and Nârada inaugurated Yudhâñs'raushṭi, the son of Ugrasena. Thence Yudhâñs'raushṭi went conquering everywhere over the whole earth up to its ends, and sacrificed the sacrificial horse.

With this inauguration ceremony Kas'yapa inaugurated Vis'vakarmâ, the son of Bhuvana. Thence Vis'vakarmâ went conquering everywhere over the whole earth up to its ends, and sacrificed the sacrificial horse.

They say that the earth sang to Vis'vakarmâ the following stanza: "No mortal is allowed to give me away (as donation),<sup>4</sup> O Vis'vakarmâ, thou hast given me, (therefore) I shall plunge into the midst of the sea. In vain was thy promise made to Kas'yapa."

With this ceremony Vasishṭha inaugurated Sudâs, the son of Pijavana. Thence Sudâs went conquering everywhere over the whole earth up to its ends, and sacrificed the sacrificial horse.

With this inauguration ceremony Saṁvarta, the son of Âṅgiras, inaugurated Marutta, the son of Aviksh'it. Thence Marutta went conquering everywhere over the whole earth up to its ends, and sacrificed the sacrificial horse.

Regarding this event there is the following Stotra chanted: "The Maruts resided as distributors of food in the house of Marutta, the son of Avikshit, who had fulfilled all his desires; all the gods were present at the gathering."

22.

(Continuation of the preceding. Stanzas on the liberality of Aṅga, Udamaya, and Virochana.)

With this ceremony Udamaya, the son of Atri, inaugurated Aṅga. Thence Aṅga went conquering everywhere over the whole earth up to its ends, and sacrificed the sacrificial horse. This Aṅga, who was not defective in any respect (thence called alopāṅga), had once said, "I give thee, O Brahman, ten thousand elephants, and ten thousand slave girls, if you call me to this (thy) sacrifice."<sup>5</sup> Regarding them, the following (five) stanzas (s'lohas) were sung:—

(1) "Whatever cows the sons of Priyamedhas had ordered Udamaya to give (in the midst of the sacrifice at the midday libation) the Atri son (Udamaya) at each time presented two thousand Badvas."

(2) "The son of Virochana loosened eighty-eight thousand white horses from their strings, and presented those which were fit for drawing a carriage, to the sacrificing Purohita."<sup>7</sup>

(3) "The son of Atri presented ten thousand girls well endowed with ornaments on their necks who had been gathered from all quarters."

(4) "The son of Atri having given ten thousand elephants in the country Avachatnuka, the Brahman

<sup>5</sup> Udamaya, the son of Atri, was at this time himself the sacrificer. The Priyamedhas were his officiating priests.

<sup>6</sup> A Badva is, according to Śāyana, 100 kotis, i.e. a billion. But I doubt very much whether this is the original meaning of badva. It is perhaps related to the Zend laivare, which means "ten thousand."

(Atri's son) being tired, desired his servants (to take charge) of Aṅga's gift."

(5) " (From saying) I give thee a hundred (only), I give thee a hundred, he got tired ; (thence) he said, I give thee a thousand, and stopped often in order to breathe, for there were too many thousands to be given."

(Continuation. Stanzas on the liberality of Bharata. Story of Satyahavya, who was cheated out of his reward by the king Atjarāti.)

With this ceremony Dīrghatamas, the son of an unmarried woman, inaugurated Bharata, the son of Dushyanta. Thence Bharata went conquering everywhere over the whole earth up to its ends, and sacrificed those horses which were fit for being sacrificed. Regarding this event the following stanzas are sung :

(1) Bharata presented one hundred and seven Bādivās (large flocks) of elephants<sup>8</sup> of a dark complexion with white teeth, all decked with gold, in the country Mashnāra.

(2) At the time when Bharata, the son of Dushyanta, constructed a sacred hearth in (the country of) Sāchiguna, the Brahmins got distributed flocks of cows by thousands.

(3) Bharata, the son of Dushyanta, bound seventy-eight horses (for being sacrificed) on the banks of the Yamunā, and fifty-five on the Gangā for Indra.<sup>9</sup>

(4) The son of Dushyanta, after having bound (for sacrificing) one hundred and thirty-three horses, <sup>8</sup> Mriga in Sanscrit. Sây. says, that elephants are to be understood here. Mriga appears to be a general term for a wild beast.

<sup>9</sup> Vritraghna. Sây. takes it, however, as name of a country, for which I see, however, no reason.

overcame the stratagems of his royal enemy by means of the superiority of his own stratagems.

(5) The great work achieved by Bharata, neither the forefathers achieved it, nor will future generations achieve it, (for it is as impossible to do it) as any mortal, belonging to the five divisions of mankind,<sup>10</sup> can touch with his hands the sky.

The Rishi Bṛihad Uktha communicated this great inauguration ceremony to Durmukha, the Pañchâla. Thence Durmukha, who was no king, being possessed of this knowledge, went conquering everywhere over the whole earth up to its ends, and sacrificed the sacrificial horse.

The son of Satyahavya of the Vasishṭha Gotra, communicated this ceremony to Atyarâti, the son of Jamuntapaya. Thence Atyarâti who was no king, being possessed of such a knowledge, went conquering everywhere over the whole earth up to its ends, and sacrificed the sacrificial horse.

The son of Satyahavya, of the Vasishṭha Gotra, then told (the king), "Thou hast (now) conquered the whole earth up to the shore of the sea; let me obtain now greatness (as reward for my services)." Atyarâti answered, "When, O Brahmana, I shall have conquered the Uttara Kurus,<sup>11</sup> then thou shalt be king of the earth, and I will be thy general." The son of Satyahavya said, "This is the land of the gods, no mortal can conquer it. Thou hast cheated me; therefore I take all thi- (from thee)." Atyarâti after having been thus deprived of his powers, and majesty, was slain by the victorious king Sushmîna, <sup>10</sup> Pañcha mânavâh. Sây. explains the four castes with the Nishâdas as the fifth. But I am rather inclined to take the word in the sense of pañchakrishṭi, or pañchakṣhiti, i. e. five tribes frequently mentioned in the Saṁhitâ. It then denotes the whole human race, including the superior beings. See page 214.

the son of S'ibya. Thence a Kshattriya should not cheat a Brahman who has this knowledge and performed this (inauguration) ceremony, unless he wishes to be turned out of his dominions, and to lose his life.

FIFTH CHAPTER.

(On the office of the Purohita, or house-priest. The brahmanah parinara, i. e. dying around the Brahma.)

24.

(The necessity for a King to appoint a house-priest. In what way the King keeps the sacred fires. How to appease the five destructive powers of Agni).

Now about the office of a Purohita (house-priest). The gods do not eat the food offered by a king who has no house-priest (Purohita). Thence the king even when (not) intending to bring a sacrifice, should appoint a Brahman to the office of house-priest.

The king, who (wishes) that the gods might eat his food, has, after having appointed a Purohita, however, the use of the (sacred) fires (without having actually established them) which lead to heaven; for the Purohita is his Ahavanîya fire, his wife the Gârhapatya, and his son the Dakshîna fire. When he does (anything) for the Purohita, then he sacrifices in the Ahavanîya fire (for the Purohita represents this fire). When he does (anything) for his wife, then he verily sacrifices in the Gârhapatya fire. When he does (anything) for his son, then he verily sacrifices in the Dakshîna fire. These fires (which are led by the Purohita) which are thus freed from their destructive power,<sup>1</sup> (for the Kshattriya, i. e.

they do not burn him) carry, pleased by the wish for sacrificing,<sup>2</sup> the Kshattriya to the heaven-world, and (make him obtain) the royal dignity, bravery, a kingdom, and subjects to rule over. But if the Kshattriya has no wish for sacrificing (by not appointing a Purohita), then the fires get displeased with him, and being not freed from their destructive power, throw him out of the heaven-world, (and deprive him) of the royal dignity, bravery, his kingdom, and subjects over whom he rules.

This Agni Vais'vaṇara, which is the Purohita, is possessed of five destructive powers;<sup>3</sup> one of them is in his speech, one in his feet, one in his skin, one in his heart, and one in the organ of generation. With these (five) powers which are burning and blazing, he (Agni) attacks the king. ●

By saying, "Where,<sup>4</sup> O master, hast thou been residing (for so long a time)? Servants, bring (kus'a) grass for him," the king propitiates the destructive power which is in Agni's speech. When they bring water for washing the feet, then the king propitiates the destructive power which is in Agni's feet. When they adorn him, then he propitiates by it the destructive power which is in Agni's skin. When they satiate him (with food), then the king propitiates the destructive power which is in Agni's heart. When Agni lives unrestrained (at ease) in the king's premises, then he propitiates the destructive power which is in Agni's organ of generation. Agni, then, if all the destructive powers which are in his body have been propitiated, and he is pleased by the king's wish for sacrificing, conveys him to the heaven-worlds and (grants him) royal dignity, bravery, a kingdom, and subjects over whom he might rule. But should the king not do so, he will be deprived of all these gifts.

● 25.

(Agni protects the King who appoints a house-priest.)

This Agni Vais'vânara, who is the Purohita, is possessed of five destructive powers. With them he surrounds the king (for his defence), just as the sea surrounds the earth. The empire of such a ruler (ârya) will be safe. Neither will he die before the expiration of the full life term (100 years); but live up to his old age, and enjoy the full term apportioned for his life. Nor will he die again (for he is free from being born again as a mortal), if he has a Brâhmaṇa who possesses such a knowledge as his Purohita, and guardian of his empire; for he obtains by means (of his own) royal dignity that (for another, his son), and by means of his bravery that (of another). The subjects of such a king obey him unanimously and undivided.

● 26.

(The importance of the office of a Purohita proved from three verses of a Vedic hymn.)

To this power of the Purohita a Rishi alludes in the following verses : sa id rājâ pratijanyâni, &c. (4, 50, 7) i. e. the king defeated by his prowess and bravery all his adversaries. By janyâni are enemies and adversaries to be understood; he conquers them by means of his prowess and bravery. (The other half of this verse is as follows) Brihaspatim yuḥ subhṛitam bibharti, i. e. "who (the king) supports Brihaspati who is well to be supported." For Brihaspati is the Purohita of the gods and him follow the Purohitas of the human kings. The words "who supports Brihaspati who is well to be supported," therefore mean, who (what king) supports the Purohita who is well to be supported. By the words (the last quarter of the verse above mentioned) ratyátyati vandate púrvabhajam, i.e. he honours and salutes him who has the precedence of enjoyment (i.e. the Purohita), he recommends his (the Purohita's) distinction.

(In the first half of the following verse), sa ít kshetti sudhita okasi sre (4, 50, 8), the idea is expressed, that he (the Purohita) lives in his own premises; the word okasi means griha, i.e. house, and the word sudhita is the same as sukhita, i.e. well-disposed, pleased. (The second half of the verse) tasmá ilā pinxate vis'radānim, i.e. food grows for him (the king who keeps a Purohita) at all times. Ilā here means anna, i.e. food; such one (such a king) is always possessed of essential juice (for keeping the life again); his subjects bow before him. The subjects (the tribes) from kingdoms; kingdoms by themselves bow before such a king who is preceded (púrva eti) by a Brahmana. Thus one calls him (such a Bráhmaṇa) a Purohita.

(The first quarter of the third verse 4, 50, 9 is as follows) apratito jayati sañ dhanāni, i.e. he (such a king) conquers realms without being opposed by enemies. By dhanāni kingdoms are to be understood; he conquers them without meeting any opposition. The second quarter of the verse is as follows), varati janyāni uta yā sajanyā. By janyāni are enemies and adversaries to be understood; he conquers them without meeting any opposition. (In the third quarter) arasyare yo rarivah karoti, there is said, "who (what king) not being possessed of any wealth renders service (rarivah) to a very indigent Purohita)." (In the last quarter of the verse) brahmanā rājā tam aranti devāḥ, i.e., "if the king is for the Brahman (if he support him), then the gods protect him (the king)" he speaks about the Purohita.

27.

(The three divine Purohitas. Who is fit for the office of a Purohita. By repeating of what mantra and performance of what ceremony the King has to engage him.)

The Brahman who knows the (following) three (divine) Purohitas, as well as the three appointers to this office, should be nominated to such a post. Agni is one of (these three) Purohitas; his appointer is the earth; the (other) Purohita is Vāyu, his appointer is the air; the (third) Purohita is Aditya, his appointer is the sky. Who knows this is (fit for the office of a) Purohita; but he who does not know it, is unworthy of holding such an office.

That king who appoints a Brāhmaṇa who has this knowledge to be his Purohita and protector of his kingdom, succeeds in making (another) king his friend, and conquers his enemy. The king who does so obtains by means of (his own) royal dignity that (for another), and by means of (his) bravery that for another (i. e. he defeats him). The subjects of such a king obey him unanimously and undivided.

"Bhūr, Bhurah, Svar, Om! I am that one, thou art this one; thou art this one, I am that one; I am heaven, thou art the earth; I am the Sāman, thou art the Rik. Let us both find here our livelihood (support). Save us from great danger (just as was done) in former times; thou art (my) body, protect mine. All ye many herbs, of a hundred kinds, over which the king Soma rules, grant me (sitting) on this seat, uninterrupted happiness. All ye herbs ruled by Soma the king, which are spread over the earth, grant me (sitting) on this seat, uninterrupted happiness. I cause to sit in the kingdom this goddess of fortune. Thence I look upon the divine waters (with which the king is washing the feet of the Purohita)."

"By washing his (the Purohita's) right foot I introduce wealth obtained by sharpness of senses into the kingdom; by washing his left foot, I make that sharpness of senses increase. I wash, O gods! the first (right) and second (left) foot for protecting my empire and obtaining safety for it. May the waters which served for washing the feet (of the Purohita) destroy my enemy!"

28.

(Spell to be spoken and applied by a King to kill his enemies. Who first communicated it.)

Now follows the ceremony called "dying round the Brahma" (brahmaṇaḥ parimāra). All enemies and foes of him who knows this ceremony, die round about him. This Brahma is he who sweeps (in the air, i. e. Vāyu). Round him five deities are dying, viz. lightning, rain, moon, sun, fire.

Lightning is absorbed by lightning when it does not rain, and is consequently hidden (to our eyes). They do not perceive such a flash of lightning when it dies, and consequently disappears. When they do not see him (the enemy), he (the king) shall say, "With the death of lightning my enemy shall die, and disappear! May they never get aware of him!" Instantly then they do not perceive him (the enemy), for he will be killed.

The rain when fallen is absorbed by the moon which disappears; they do not perceive it, when it dies and disappears. Then when they do not perceive him (the enemy), then he (the king) should say, "With the death of the rain my enemy shall die and disappear. May they never get aware of him!" Instantly then they do not perceive him (the enemy), for he will be killed.

The moon at the time of the new moon, is absorbed by the sun, &c. When they do not perceive him (the enemy) then (the king) shall say, "With the death of the moon, my enemy shall die, and disappear. May they never get aware of him!" Instantly then they not perceive him (the enemy), for he will be killed.

The sun, when setting, is absorbed by Agni, (fire) &c. The king then shall say, "With the death of the sun my enemy shall die, and disappear! may they never get aware of him!" Instantly then they do not perceive him (the enemy), for he will be killed.

The fire when extinguishing, is absorbed by Vāyu, &c. The king then shall say, "With the death of the fire my enemy shall die and disappear. May they never get aware of him!" Instantly then they do not perceive him (the enemy), for he will be killed.

These (five) deities are then born again. The fire is born out of Vāyu, (wind). For it is produced by friction practised with (great) force, and restraining the breath.<sup>5</sup> After having seen the fire new born, the king shall say, "May Agni be born, but may my enemy not be born (again); may he go far off!" Then he goes far off.

Out of fire the sun is born. Having seen him, the king shall say, "May the sun be born, but may my enemy not be born; may he go far off!" Then he goes far off.

<sup>5</sup> The production of fire by means of friction is very fatiguing, as I can assure the reader, from having tried it once with the proper apparatus, used at the sacrifices for this purpose. 1

From the sun the moon is born. Having seen it, the king shall say, "May the moon be born, but not my enemy, may he be far off!" Then he goes far off.

From the moon the rain is born. Having seen it, the king shall say, "May the rain be born, but not my enemy; may he be far off." Then he goes far off.

From rain lightning is born. Having seen it, the king shall say, "May lightning be born, but not my enemy; may he be far off." Then he goes far off.

This is the Brahmanah parimarah (dying around the Brahma). Maitreya, the son of Kushāru, told it to Satvan the son of Kiris'i, a king of the Bharga Gotra. Five kings (who were his enemies) died round him; thence he attained to greatness.

He who uses this spell, has to observe the following rules: He never shall sit before his enemy has taken his seat. When he believes him to be standing, then he shall stand. He shall not lie down, before also his enemy has done so. When he thinks him sitting, then he shall sit himself. He never shall sleep before his enemy has fallen asleep. When he believes him to be awake, then he shall also be wake. In this way he puts his enemy down, even 'he wears a stone-helmet (is well armed).
